PRESIDENT HALF WAY THROUGH CRITICAL PERIOD OF RECOVERY

Doctors to Have the Say on His Resuming Work—He May Sign More Papers This Week.

DENVER, Oct. 1 (UP)—President Eisenhower passed today the halfway point of the two-week critical period of recovery from coronary thrombosis without experiencing a setback and the White House announced his doctors would have the deciding word on when and what steps he takes in resuming his duties.

The President "had an excellent day" today, his physicians reported tonight. "The President's condition continues to be satisfactory without complication," they reported.

This followed an afternoon medical bulletin that said:

"The President spent a comfortable, quiet day. Mrs. Eisenhower visited briefly with him at the lunch hour.

"The President had his usual rest period in the afternoon. Later he listened to music. His condition continues to progress satisfactorily without complications."

Two Rest Periods.

The temporary White House said the President rested from 9:30 a.m. to 11 a.m. and again from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. He slept part of the time during the afternoon rest period.

Sherman Adams, top presidential assistant who arrived from Washington last night, took over operations of the temporary White House.

Although one of the primary reasons for Adams's presence was to determine how fast Mr. Eisenhower can resume his presidential authority, it was emphasized that the former New Hampshire Governor will abide by the limits laid down by the medical experts.

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said Adams will "in effect take orders from them and relay those orders to the other members of the Government."

Adams and Hagerty conferred for an hour and a half with the President's doctor at Fitzsimons Army Hospital today. Hagerty said afterward it is "a fair assumption" that the President may sign a few more routine papers next week, similar to two documents he signed last night.

However, Hagerty told reporters, "I want to point out very clearly that (Adams) was asking for medical opinion" and not urging the doctors to permit more activity by the President.

"Two weeks are the period in which complications could develop and that program (of complete hospital rest) will not be disturbed," Hagerty said.

Adams Visits President.

Adams saw the President for five or six minutes this afternoon. It was a social visit, the temporary White House said, and neither talked business.

The President and Adams talked about fishing for golden trout in the Euphrates river of eastern Turkey. Adams fished for golden trout while he was abroad recently. The President, an ardent trout fisherman, has never whipped a fly into golden trout waters, but wants to. They also talked about fishing in streams of southern Germany—the President has fished there.

It was Adams' first visit with his boss since he arrived from Washington last night.

The President, who suffered a "moderate" heart attack early last Saturday, spent his second straight restful night without an oxygen tent. He was "relaxed and comfortable" but aids emphasized that he has another week to go before the most dangerous period is over.

Mrs. Eisenhower visited briefly with the President after breakfast and the Chief Executive had a morning rest period

VEILED PROPHET HERE THIS WEEK FOR BALL, PARADE

Queen to Be Crowned Tuesday Night, Floats to Cover 7 Miles Wednesday.

Veiled Prophet festivities this week will again bring before St. Louisans the two traditional spectacles connected with the opening of the fall social season here—the ball Tuesday night and the parade Wednesday evening.

At the ball, to be held in the elaborately-decorated convention hall at Kiel Auditorium, 10,000 guests in formal evening dress will watch the ceremony of crowning the young woman chosen as the Queen of the Prophet's Court of Love and Beauty.

The parade, a three-hour pageant of music and floats designed this year by the noted St. Louis artist Fred Conway, will follow a seven-mile route in the downtown area before sidewalk crowds including St. Louis small fry, the most enthusiastic—and most informal—of the Prophet's adherents.

To Be on KSD-TV.

Thousands more will be able to watch and hear portions of the ball and parade by television and radio.

Post-Dispatch Station KSD-TV will televise the ball from 9 to 10:30 p.m., Tuesday, and the parade on Wednesday starting at 9 p.m., as the floats pass Twelfth boulevard and Olive street.

Post-Dispatch Station KSD will broadcast the sound portion of the telecast of the ball Tuesday and in addition will present an interview with the new Queen and her special maids in their dressing room from 10:30 to 10:45 p.m.

The station will broadcast a description of the parade floats at 6:15 p.m. Wednesday at the Prophet's Den.

A film of the coronation of the Queen will be shown on the NBC-TV network program "Today," on Wednesday between 7 and 8 a.m. The program is carried over KSD-TV.

Started 77 Years Ago.

The Veiled Prophet pageant began 77 years ago, in 1878, but because of lapses during war years, the ball will be the seventy-second. The Queen will be the fifty-fifth crowned.

At the convention hall, three large openings framed with architraves of gold and bone-white and hung with pomegranate-colored draperies are being arranged as the background for the coronation ceremonies.

Candelabra placed between the openings will light the setting. The four special maids of honor and the ceremonial priests will be grouped on each side of the throne chairs, while the Prophet's Krewe and the maids and matrons of honor will occupy places on descending terraces to the right and left.

Guests of the ball have received with their invitations notice concerning the special traffic plans for routing and parking vehicles. They may use

STEVENSON WILL OFFER TO RUN IN NOV. 19 SPEECH, FRIENDS ASSERT

Expected to Tell Illinois Democrats Campaign Must Be Based on Issues and Not Personalities.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1955, Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 1—At a regional meeting of Democrats on Nov. 19 former Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois will declare himself available for the nomination of his party in 1956. Although Stevenson will not confirm this even to the political leaders who are coming in ever-increasing numbers to his law offices here, it is the confident expectation of his closest advisers.

As in the months leading up to the Democratic convention of 1952, Stevenson is again being accused of playing coy. From his perspective it is not coyness—an accusation he resents, but a conviction that if the leaders who control the machinery of the party want him to be their candidate again, knowing all about him and about the kind of campaign he would wage, then they will join as they did in '52 to make him their choice.

Campaign on the Issues.

If it works out as his dedicated admirers believe and hope it will, then the future for Stevenson will shape up more or less as follows:

At a dinner speech on the evening of Nov. 19 he will declare himself willing to make the race again. In that speech he will say that he can make only his own kind of campaign—a campaign based on the issues and not on personalities. If his party wants him to be the candidate, it must be on that basis.

The popular response to this declaration, both within the party and from independent voters, will give the impetus to the growing belief that he is the inevitable choice. He has a far better chance than any other available candidate, it is argued, to bridge the conflicts within the party, and his is the only name, as the opinion polls show, which evokes a large national response.

Although the decision is not finally taken, it is most unlikely that Stevenson's name will be entered in the presidential preference primaries which, starting with New Hampshire in March, have in the past stirred fierce intra-party rivalries. In Stevenson's view the outcome of these primaries will not determine the nomination.

To Speak Throughout U.S.

Speaking throughout the country in the months ahead, but not too often, Stevenson will emerge by midsummer as the choice of most of the Southern and Northern Democrats who want to unite to win. As the nominee of a united and revivified party, he will not have to campaign on his own and with the help of eager amateurs as he did three years ago, but with a strong and effective party organization solidly behind him.

This is, of course, a rosy view. It may not turn out that way at all. Many Democrats are already saying that if he wants the nomination, then he must get out and fight for it. They complain that they don't want another Hamlet, to be or not to be, act.

They ascribe his reluctance to "get in there and fight" to his intellectualism, his eggheadism. But it may actually be the smartest kind of politics. It has frequently been demonstrated in the past that there is nothing more fatal than continuously running for President. One example is Harold Stassen, who panted so long and so avidly for the prize that he has just about eliminated himself from consideration. On the other hand a modest reluctance, on the basis of "there must be someone better qualified than I am," has often had a salubrious effect. The outstanding example in this class is President Eisenhower.

Since the President's heart

DRIVE TO BOOST VOTE ON SCHOOL, CIGARETTE TAX ISSUES TUESDAY

Parent-Teacher Groups to Ring Doorbells, Distribute Leaflets and Present Radio Broadcasts.

Parent-teacher organizations in St. Louis and St. Louis county planned to make a final effort today and tomorrow to bring out a large vote in support of a public school proposal and a related proposed cigarette tax increase being submited in next Tuesday's special state election.

There will be spot radio announcements, doorbell ringing and the distribution of leaflets in the final effort, spurred by forecasts of a light turnout at the polls in St. Louis and elsewhere in Missouri.

One of the measures up for approval or rejection by the voters is the so-called school "foundation" program. It would establish a new system of distributing state aid to Missouri's public schools, and set up new financing goals calling for increased state educational grants. It will be listed on the ballot as Referendum Measure No. 2.

Tax to Finance Plan.

Referendum Measure No. 1 is the proposal to impose a state cigarette tax of 2 cents a package to help finance the foundation program. If approved, the tax would bring in an estimated $9,000,000 a year, all of which would be earmarked for the schools.

Precinct polling places in the city and county will be open from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.

City and county voters will receive only one ballot, on which both of the referendum proposals will be voted. No political offices are at stake in Tuesday's election.

The measures must be voted upon separately. To vote in favor of a proposal, the voter must mark an X in the square in front of the word "for." To vote against a measure, an X must be placed in the square in front of the word "against."

Each proposal will become effective if approved by a majority of those voting on it. The school foundation program would take effect immediately; the cigarette tax next Jan. 1.

Joseph P. Uxa, chief clerk of the St. Louis Election Board, estimated that about 75,000 city voters would cast ballots in the election. This would represent 22 per cent of the city's 336,878 registration.

Chairman John J. Cole of the St. Louis County Election Board said he expected a light vote in the county, but declined to estimate the turnout. About 220,000 persons are eligible to vote in the county.

Confusion Likely.

There is likely to be confusion among some voters in six county townships, where precinct boundaries have been materially altered in preparation for the use of voting machines next year. Consolidations and revisions in Hadley, Creve Coeur, Washington, Lincoln, Normandy and Jefferson townships have reduced the number of voting districts by 38.

The present precincts will be used in the eight other county townships Tuesday, but these districts also will be revised extensively later.

In Jefferson City, the Secretary of State's office estimated a state-wide turnout next Tuesday of about 650,000, or less than one-fourth of Missouri's estimated 2,750,000 eligible voters.

Favorable weather was in prospect for the election. St. Louis Weatherman Harry F. Wahlgren said it looks as Sumptuous Apartments Set Up By Peron for Teen-Age Girls

Dictator Evicted Tenants From Building—Reporters Tour Palaces.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 1 (UP)—The government disclosed today that the Argentine revolution caught ousted President Juan D. Peron in the midst of transforming an eight-story suburban apartment house into a mirrored-bedroom hideaway for a bevy of teen-age girls.

Police said Peron had evicted all the tenants from the building, which was located around the corner from his official palace in the fashionable Palermo district. He had installed Nelida (Nelly) Rivas, his 16-year-old mistress, in the luxurious penthouse apartment.

The six lower floors were to have been occupied by other teen-age girls recruited from the ranks of the Union of High School Girls, officials said.

The revelation about the apartment house was the latest in a series of government reports on Peron's private life which were designed to shatter his pose as an austere servant of the people.

"State of Siege" Goes on.

Meanwhile, Provisional President Eduardo Lonardi put an end today to the "state of internal war" proclaimed four years ago by Peron but announced that the "state of siege" Perón imposed on the country last month will remain in force.

An official announcement said the "internal war" regulations imposed after an abortive revolt in 1951 were unconstitutional and charged that Peron "used them as a political instrument to suppress all freedom and rights" in Argentina.

One feature of the regulations was a provision that the government could arrest anyone at any time and imprison him indefinitely without charge or trial. Some of Peron's political foes spent more than a year in jail without so much as a preliminary hearing.

Under the state of siege, Lonardi's government wields approximately the same powers, but at least the siege regulations are constitutional.

Earlier, the revolutionary government had put 41 big business enterprises—including the Argentine branch of the Capehart radio, phonograph and television company — into an economic freeze pending an in-

TV IN U.S. GETS 'COMMERCIAL' IN RUSSIAN PAPER

MOSCOW, Oct. 1 (AP)—The Literary Gazette, official newspaper of the Soviet Writers' Union, ran what sounded like a free commercial for United States television today.

The paper told Russian television viewers to watch for the latest United States television newsreels on the state-operated television network Oct. 4.

The story said the program will include the recent big fires at Whiting, Ind., the lumberjack celebration at Cherry Springs, Pa., the eastern United States floods, water skiing at Lakeland, Fla., and cowboy rodeos.

The paper applauded a Soviet-American agreement to exchange television newsreels and said American television stations have begun "regular showings of Soviet documentaries and popular scientific and sports newsreels."

FRENCH WARN U.N. VOTE SHAKES UNITY OF NATO

Two Members of Alliance Split With Others on Holding Debate on Algeria.

By WILLIAM J. HUMPHREYS
The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

PARIS, Oct. 1—The French Cabinet will meet tomorrow night to discuss whether to break off relations with the United Nations or to take less drastic action that will register this country's displeasure with the United Nations General Assembly's vote yesterday to debate France's role in Algeria.

Premier Faure and his ministers are to confer after the return from New York of Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay, who walked out of the Assembly yesterday following the vote.

Two Other Problems.

Officials here pointed out that the cabinet also must resolve two other problems as a result of the assembly's "interference in an internal French matter."

1. French relations with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Officials said the political unity of NATO is on "very dangerous" ground because one of its members, Greece, voted against the Western powers for an Algerian debate, and another member, Iceland, displayed its sympathies for a debate by abstaining.

2. Whether Faure and Pinay should make their scheduled "courtesy call" to Moscow later this month. The Soviet Union voted for the Algerian debate although French parliamentarians had been assured in Moscow that the Soviet Union considered Algeria to be altogether a French problem.

Whether to have a clean break with the U.N. is a decision that can only be taken by the National Assembly, according to officials. But the Cabinet, in its discussion tomorrow, will take an initial step by deciding what course to recommend.

Although official feelings here today generally seemed hot enough to expect France to break with the U.N., some Ministry of Foreign Affairs authorities said France would never strike such a blow at the U.N.

Asked what moves France could make to show its feelings, these authorities said the political delegation now ordered home could remain here for the rest of the tenth session of the General Assembly.

What About NATO.

What to do about NATO seemed just as pressing an issue for France today. French authorities pointed out that had Greece and Iceland voted as

BOYCOTT CALLED AFTER VOTE IN ASSEMBLY FOR ALGERIA DEBATE

Pinay Leads Departing Diplomats, Including Permanent Paris Representative to U.N., Herve Alphand.

By ARCH PARSONS JR.
The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 1—Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay of France and eight members of his country's delegation to the United Nations left for home tonight, one day after their walkout from the General Assembly.

Before boarding a plane, Pinay told newsmen that French representatives "would not attend any United Nations meetings, whether in regard to Algeria or anything else" until the French government has reviewed the situation.

Cabinet Meeting Called.

The Paris cabinet is scheduled to meet tomorrow, following the return of the U.N. delegation, to decide its future course in regard to the U.N. as result of yesterday's 28-to-27 decision by the Assembly to debate the French-Algerian problem. The French delegation walked out of the Assembly hall in protest. It returned to Paris on orders of Premier Faure.

Among those leaving with Pinay for Paris was Ambassador Herve Alphand, France's permanent representative to the U.N. Alphand's departure was unexpected at this time because it had been announced earlier that he would stay here a few days before going to Paris for consultations.

Pinay declared France "will not ask a modification" of the decision taken by the Assembly. He added:

"The government alone can decide future relations with the U.N. We do not limit ourselves to be absent from the room when the Algerian question is debated.

"The whole delegation to the General Assembly is leaving New York and our permanent delegation is awaiting orders from the government and will avoid all contact with the headquarters of the U.N."

'Dangerous Interference.'

Speaking of the role of the United Nations, Pinay said:

"This organization was founded in the interest and aims of friendly governmental relations. When it interferes in the internal affairs of governments and states, it is a dangerous situation."

Asked if the new situation would affect a planned trip to Moscow by French Premier Faure, Pinay said: "In view of what has happened in the U.N. General Assembly with regard to Algeria, it does not create enthusiasm for the trip. Now it is too soon to speak, in view of the situation. The atmosphere is not too favorable."

Russia voted with the majority for debate of the Algerian issue.

Of equal significance with Pinay's departure was that of Alphand.

Backbone of Participation.

Alphand is a member of the French delegation to the Assembly, too, but at least as important are his duties as permanent delegate. A nation's Assembly delegation participates in U.N. affairs only for the duration of the Assembly—about three months. A nation's permanent delegation works at the U.N. all year 'round. It is the backbone of a government's participation in the U.N.

During Alphand's absence, it is understood, the other members of the permanent delegation will not attend any U.N. meetings.

The French boycott of all U.N. meetings is expected to last until the French government completes a review of its relations with the U.N.

It was learned that Pinay was in touch, either personally or by telephone, with the United States and British representatives and with U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold during most of today.

None of these diplomats would say a word publicly about the situation, but it is not believed that France will go so far as to withdraw permanently from the UN.

Macmillan Comment.

(The Associated Press reported from Washington that British Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan, in the capital for informal talks with Secretary of State Dulles, characterized the incident as UN "growing pains." "I think they (the French) protested against what they regarded as dealing in their in-

WHITE HOUSE AID BRIEFS NIXON ON WORLD SITUATION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (UP)—Vice President Richard M. Nixon got a detailed briefing on world and domestic problems today in his role as standin for the President.

Col. Andrew J. Goodpastor, White House staff secretary, spent 40 minutes in Nixon's office outlining the highlights of a "whole series" of White House staff reports. It was the first such briefing given the Vice President. It is normally given the President to keep him abreast of developments in foreign and domestic affairs.

Nixon also conferred with Richard Guylay of the Republican National Committee, and Harold E. Stassen, the President's adviser on disarmament.

The Vice President and Mrs. Nixon attended a private luncheon at the home of Mrs. Alice Longworth, widow of Speaker Nicholas Longworth. Nixon also attended a stag dinner given by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles tonight in honor of Britain's foreign minister, Harold Macmillan.

Long-Distance Direct Dialing Goes Into Effect in Belleville

A new dialing system, enabling Belleville telephone subscribers to dial directly to such places as Washington, D.C., and San Francisco, was placed into operation early today by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. The changeover from the old manual system was made at 1:01 a.m.

The telephone company's new $3,200,000 exchange building at B and First streets contains the new direct distance dialing center, one of the first to be installed in the country.

In addition to being able to dial Washington and San Francisco, one- and two-party subscribers may dial Chicago, Oklahoma City, Little Rock, Philadelphia and nearby communities such as St. Louis, O'Fallon and Lebanon.

Those wishing to make a long distance call simply dial the city's code number and the number of the party they wish to speak to. An electronic device perforates a paper tape, times the call and records the charges. A spokesman for the company said the device would not work on four-party lines. Early next year limited direct distance dialing will be possible for subscribers in Ferguson, Florissant and Berkeley.

Millionaire's Son on Cut-Rate Honeymoon With Stewardess

FRANKFURT, Germany, Oct. 1 (AP)—A millionaire's son took off here today on a 'round-the-world honeymoon trip at reduced rates—because he married an airline stewardess.

As an airline employe, she can take him on the flight for a total of $3500 for both compared to $7000 for other couples.

SULTAN LEAVES MOROCCO, BUT HANDS COUSIN HIS AUTHORITY

Delegation of Power Complicates French Program of Naming Regency for Protectorate.

By CARL HARTMAN

RABAT, French Morocco, Oct. 1 (AP)—Sultan Mohammed Ben Moulay Arafa finally left the throne of Morocco today and handed France a new problem by delegating the seals of office to a cousin.

The aging, white-robed sovereign rode through an early morning calm to a nearby airport. There he boarded a special French military plane while French guards rendered full honors. Two hours later he had landed in Tangier, in effect, in crownless exile. Technically, he was still sultan and he was still on Moroccan soil, but both were legal fictions.

His departure appeared to come just in time to save Premier Faure's coalition from a parliamentary upset next week.

Moulay Arafa was accompanied into exile by his wife and servants. (The United Press said seven women from his harem also went to Tangier with the sultan.)

Delegates 'Cares.'

In a vaguely worded farewell message, the sultan said he was delegating the "cares" of looking after affairs concerning the crown to his cousin, Moulay Abdallah Ben Moulay Abdel Hafid. This action surprised and puzzled French officials in Paris.

Pierre July, French Minister for Moroccan and Tunisian affairs, told reporters in Paris that France would not necessarily uphold Resident-General Pierre Boyer de Latour on this point. He said the government was awaiting a more complete report from Rabat on the circumstances of the sultan's exit.

July described the delegation of the seals of office to the cousin as an "intermediate" step which "is not incompatible" with the over-all French plan. Nationalists in Paris termed the sultan's step "illegal" and urged immediate action to put the original French plan into effect.

The French plan called for a three-man regency, indorsed by the resident-general and Moroccan nationalists, to take over from the monarch while Morocco's internal charter and relationships with France are being revised. The regency council was to name a new and widely based Moroccan cabinet for this purpose.

Deal With Colonials.

On the basis of preliminary reports, De Latour made a deal with irate French colonial leaders in Morocco. The colonials have campaigned vigorously for Moulay Arafa's retention as the best way to block limited home rule in Morocco. De Latour apparently agreed to let Moulay Arafa hand the official seals to his cousin in order to prevent a clash, perhaps bloodshed, between French colonials and French troops. In return, the colonials refrained from demonstrations and Moulay Arafa's departure took place without disturbance.

Officials here regarded the cousin's position as a temporary one, pending formation of the regency council. It was not clear whether the cousin held the same view of his function.

The sultan's departure had been expected under heavy pressure in France, Morocco and the United Nations for about three months. When it came, it seemed to satisfy no one.

The sultan's cousin is a dark, portly man of about 50 from the sultan's own native city of Fez. He married one of the sultan's nieces and has been working in a government office in Rabat which handles Moslem religious endowments.

French officials put Moulay Arafa on the throne two years ago in the hope of discouraging the nationalism that attended his exiled predecessor, Sidi Mohammed Ben Youssef.

But nationalistic feeling boiled up in two years of bloody riots. The French finally demanded that Moulay Arafa step down to make way for a reform plan designed to give the French protectorate a form of home rule.

French Delegates Leaving for Home

ternal affairs, with which we have considerable sympathy," Macmillan told reporters.)

In any case, the French decision to stay out of all U.N. affairs, even on a temporary basis, is considered to be as formidable a protest against the U.N. as any nation has made since the world organization was founded 10 years ago. No nation ever has quit the U.N. entirely.

One member of France's Assembly delegation will remain behind to attend a meeting at U.N. headquarters on Monday. He is Jules Moch, veteran French disarmament expert, who will attend a meeting of the U.N. Disarmament Commission's five-nation subcommittee.

France, however, considers this not an exception to its U.N. boycott, but an underling of it. It was made clear today that while the subcommittee is technically a U.N. body, it was convened for its current series of disarmament talks not by the U.N., but by the Big Four heads of state at the Geneva summit conference in July. Moch, it was understood, will attend on that basis.

Alphand's absence, meanwhile, will leave vacant France's seat on the U.N. Security Council—and also the seat of the Council President. Under the Council's system of rotating the presidency alphabetically by nations each month, Alphand was scheduled to be in the chair for October.

The Council, at present, has no meeting scheduled but a meeting is expected soon on the question of admission of new members to the U.N. The Council must report to the present session of the Assembly on this question.

Debate Assigned.

Following yesterday's vote on Algeria in the Assembly, the formal debate on the question of that area's relations to France was assigned to the Assembly's main, or No. 1, Political Committee. That committee consists, as do all Assembly committees, of the Assembly's entire 60-nation membership.

It will be up to the committee to decide at its first meeting, probably next week, exactly when the debate on Algeria is to begin. The debate is not expected to commence at least until France has completed its review of the present situation.

It is doubtful that the Assembly will be able to take any action on Algeria even when the debate is completed. An Assembly resolution on Algeria would be considered, under Assembly rules, an "important question" requiring a two-thirds majority in the Assembly. On the basis of yesterday's close vote, it is believed doubtful that any type of resolution could muster such a majority.

Following is a tabulation of yesterday's vote:

For debate on Algeria (28)—Afghanistan, Argentina, Bolivia, Burma, Byelo-Russia, Costa Rica, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, Greece, Guatemala, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Liberia, Mexico, Pakistan, the Philippines, Poland, Saudi Arabia, the Soviet Union, Syria, Thailand, Ukraine, Uruguay, Yeman and Yugoslavia.

Against (27)—Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, France, Britain, Haiti, Honduras, Israel, Luxemburg, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Peru, South Africa, Sweden, Turkey, United States and Venezuela.

Abstained (5)—El Salvador, Ethiopia, Iceland, Nationalist China and Paraguay.

France has boycotted committee meetings and some Assembly sessions in the past when the U.N. insisted on discussing Tunisian and Moroccan matters. South Africa, target for U.N. inquiries into its racial policies, has boycotted committee sessions.

Led by Chief Delegate Jacob A. Malik, the Russians stalked out of the General Assembly in January 1950 and boycotted the U.N. for seven months. It was in this period that the Security Council, minus a Russian representative, voted to intervene in the Korean war.

Malik returned on the day he was slated to take over the Council presidency Aug. 1, 1950.

U. S. Officials Sure France Won't Quit U.N.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (UP)—United States officials expressed confidence today that France will not withdraw permanently from the United Nations.

They said the French boycott of the U.N. General Assembly over the Algerian issue appeared to be primarily a gesture for French public opinion.

At the State Department, however, officials did not hide their concern that even a temporary French withdrawal might impair the prestige and effectiveness of the world organization, and rock the international boat at a time when stability and Western unity is urgently needed.

They pointed out that recent meetings between Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, French Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay and Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan of Britain had resulted in complete agreement over the position the Western powers will take at the Oct. 27 Big Four foreign ministers meeting. They hoped nothing would happen between now and the meeting with Russia at Geneva to disturb this harmony.

FRENCH WARN U.N. VOTE SHAKES UNITY OF NATO

the other NATO allies had, there would have been no debate on Algeria.

In becoming NATO members, Greece and Iceland both had given recognition to the status of Algeria as part of France, according to French officials, since the North African territory is specifically mentioned as a part of the Western world protected by the treaty.

Although officials said they did not want to convey the impression that NATO is confronting a "crisis" as the result of the vote, they maintained it put Western unity on "very dangerous" ground because "errors of this kind, once they have a precent established, can accumulate very rapidly."

Opinion Split About What French Cabinet Will Do.

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

PARIS, Oct. 1—Opinion was divided among top North African advisers today on what the French Cabinet would decide to do in the wake of the United Nations General Assembly's decision to debate France's actions in Algeria.

"If it were up to me," one of the Cabinet's most eminent North African counselors said, "I'd tell the U.N. to stay out of French affairs (in North Africa) and just resign."

But he quickly added, "The Government will never do it."

Another top counselor on North Africa had a different view.

"If France is ever forced to choose between North Africa and even the Atlantic alliance itself," he said, "I think it will quit the Atlantic alliance."

Although France rules Algeria as part of France and claims that its people are all French citizens, the Moslem natives of Algeria have only a small fraction of the political representation enjoyed by the French of the homeland. Their social benefits, their living standards, and the places they achieved in French life, all are inferior to that of other Frenchmen.

In many respects Algeria still has the earmarks of a colony.

INDIANS TO TRY MARCH ON GOA AND DAMAO TODAY

BOMBAY, India, Oct. 1 (AP) Hundreds of left-wing Indian demonstrators advanced today toward the frontier of Portuguese-ruled Goa and Damao.

They planned to try to make a peaceful entry into the two enclaves tomorrow—the eighty-sixth anniversary of Mohandas K. Gandhi's birth. Opposition from Portuguese border guards is taken for granted.

MOST POWERFUL SHIP, FORRESTAL, JOINS U.S. FLEET

Huge Carrier Formally Commissioned—First Atomic-Age Man-of-War.

PORTSMOUTH, Va., Oct. 1 (UP) — The supercarrier Forrestal, a 60,000-ton weapon of war, was commissioned into the Navy today with the hope its instruments of death need never be used in battle.

The largest ship of American fighting fleets "is a weapon of war dedicated to peace," Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas said at the commissioning ceremony.

But should war come, the gigantic flattop may well be within range to "strike the first retaliatory blow," added James H. Smith Jr., Assistant Navy Secretary for Air.

Born in controversy and built over considerable opposition, the Navy proudly took it into the fleet, and even as it did so began thinking about bigger and more powerful atomic-age ships.

"In time," the Navy said in a statement, "even the Forrestal will be surpassed by another ship, but for the present and the foreseeable future this carrier will fulfill the needs of the Naval air arm."

On the Forrestal's hangar deck, just below its four-acre flight deck—1036 feet long—the Navy's high command, with quiet pride, described the $197,859,000 carrier as "the most powerful man-of-war afloat . . . a symbol of the Navy of tomorrow . . . an effective defense of our way of life."

4000 Attend Ceremony.

Low cloud ceilings and drizzling rain canceled out Navy plans for an air parade of its latest planes over the supercarrier. About 4000 persons gathered in the vast hangar deck for the ceremony.

With the Forrestal, Thomas said, will go "atomic submarines, missile ships, powerful jet aircraft, sleek destroyers, forming an illusive, hard-hitting, fast-moving task force."

He described the ship, which can clip the ocean waters at 40 miles an hour, as "an important portion of the physical fighting power of this nation placed on a rapidly moving platform amidst the sovereign seas to help preserve the peace of the world."

In clipped, strong words, Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, Chief of Naval Operations, told the ship's 3500-man crew they were the men who would give the ship its character.

"She was a cold mass of steel until this moment," Burke said. "Now she is alive." Then he wished them "fair winds and smooth sailing."

Honored, too, was the late James V. Forrestal, first Secretary of Defense, for whom the carrier is named. John A. Hill, chairman of the board of the National Security Industrial Association which Forrestal founded, presented a bust of the secretary.

Admiral Radford on Deck.

Standing on deck as the Navy received the ship from the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., was Admiral Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who once endangered his career by battling for super carriers.

The Forrestal is the first of a new line of warships which will be able to launch atomic bombers and jet fighters against targets 1000 miles away. Two sister ships, the Saratoga and Ranger, are building, and the Independence and Kitty Hawk have been authorized.

Atomic carriers, which the Navy is thinking of, could well be 15,000 tons heavier than the Forrestal.

A 65,000-ton supercarrier was approved for building by Congress in 1948. But in April, 1949, then Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson scratched it. It was to have been the U.S.S. United States.

A year after the Korean war started, the Forrestal was started in July 1951. The ship, wide enough to hold the British Queens Elizabeth and Mary side-by-side on her flight deck, was launched and christened by Forrestal's widow last December.

California Governor Omits Nixon From List of Favored Candidates

Knight Names 5 He Would Back for Presidential Nomination — Convinced Warren Would Not Accept.

By EARL MAZO

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Oct. 1—Gov. Goodwin J. Knight, who could be one of the most powerful figures at the Republican national convention in San Francisco next year, named today five men he favors for the Republican presidential nomination if President Eisenhower does not seek re-election. He prefaced all comment, with the "hope" that Mr. Eisenhower will run after recovering completely from his heart attack.

Significantly, only one of California's four possible Republican candidates—Senator William F. Knowland—was on the California Governor's list.

Knight pointedly omitted Vice President Richard M. Nixon, his arch opponent, and did not mention Chief Justice Earl Warren, for whom he expressed great admiration and respect, only after saying he was convinced Warren is so devoted to his judicial assignment he would run under no circumstances.

Although Gov. Knight is known to be actively interested in the nomination for himself, he also left out his own name, without comment.

(Asked about the omission of Nixon's name, Knight said that certainly it should have been included, the Associated Press reported.)

Knight's List.

With Knowland on Knight's list were: Ambassador to the United Nations Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, Gov. William F. Stratton of Illinois, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles of New York and Gov. Christian Herter of Massachusetts.

Knight is the first major leader in his party to discuss publicly and frankly since the President became ill in Denver a week ago possible alternates to Mr. Eisenhower.

The California governor's unqualified antagonism toward Nixon may be of more significance to the future of Republican politics in America than his friendship for Knowland, Lodge and others.

Nixon is generally considered the leading candidate for the Republican nomination at present. His role as an administration leader during the President's illness could add immeasurably to the Vice President's stature within the party and throughout the country. But without the support of his home state Nixon's chances of winning the nomination would be severely hampered.

Discounted by Nixon Faction.

Leaders of the Nixon faction in California discount Knight's opposition and contend if the Governor persists, he will be vanquished in a showdown in the California primary next June.

Most Republican leaders here agree, however, that such a showdown would only intensify bitterness within California Republican ranks.

The practical political facts are these: Knight is governor of the largest state with a Republican administration. He is in firm control, at present, of the California Republican organization. He aims to head his state's huge 70-vote delegation, which is second in size only to that of New York, to the convention at San Francisco, and is host-chairman of the convention literally in his own backyard.

Thus Knight's views are likely to be weighed carefully by Republican leaders everywhere during the next 10 months.

BRAZIL TO VOTE TOMORROW ON NEW PRESIDENT

4 Candidates in Confusing Race — Result May Not Be Known for Week.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Oct. 1 (AP)—Brazilians elect a new president Monday for a five-year term. Four candidates are in a race so close the winner may not be known for a week.

Eleven million out of 15,000,000 qualified voters are expected to cast ballots. Counting starts Tuesday and the outcome may not be decided until the last returns are in from remote area.

The campaign has been bitter and confusing. The major parties are split and none of the four contenders—Juscelino Kubitschek, Gen. Juarez Tavora, Adhemar de Barros and Plino Salgado—is expected to receive a majority. Kubitschek seems to be leading the field.

The most controversial figure in the contest is 37-year-old rancher Joao Goulart, new president of Brazil's Labor party and candidate for vice president on Kubitschek's slate. He served as minister of labor under Dictator-President Getulio Vargas, who committed suicide Aug. 24, 1954, when he was ousted from the presidency in a palace coup following disclosure of fraud in his administration.

All of the candidates are running on platforms promising development of agriculture and heavy industry and support of the labor laws which Vargas introduced by decrees.

The winner takes over next January from the caretaker government of Joao Cafe Filho, who stepped up from the vice presidency after Vargas killed himself.

The Vargas scandals have been a big issue in this campaign, but the dead president still has a large following, which Kubitschek claims will supoprt him. Kubitschek, 53, a surgeon and former governor of populous Minas Gerais state, is the nominee of the Social Democratic party which holds a majority in the Congress elected last year and of the Labor party which Vargas headed.

Communists have declared for Kubitschek and Goulart, but the candidates deny seeking Communist support.

Gen. Tavora, 56, professional soldier and a conservative, is the candidate of the National Democratic Union and supported by Christian Democrats and Socialists.

GUATEMALA HEAD TO VISIT U.S., HIS HOST TO BE NIXON

DENVER, Oct. 1 (AP)—The Denver White House announced today that President Carlos Castillo Armas of Guatemala will pay a state visit to Washington, as scheduled, at the end of this month with Vice President Nixon as his host.

President Eisenhower earlier this year invited the Guatemalan chief executive to visit Washington. His illness will prevent his serving as host.

Instead of spending the first night at the White House—the usual procedure for visiting dignitaries—Castillo will stay at nearby Blair House.

The Guatemalan President, accompanied by his wife and an official party of seven, will arrive in the capital Oct. 31 and leave for New York Nov. 3. They will remain in New York for four days and then go to Detroit and St. Louis for a day each.

The schedule calls for arrival in Houston, Tex., Nov. 9 with the party going to New Orleans Nov. 11 and leaving for Guatemala two days later.

ENGINE TROUBLE MADE NAVY QUIT ON GRUMMAN JET PLANE IN 1953

$28,000,000 Was Lost on Project Two Years Before First McDonnell Demon Was Dropped.

By DAVID R. WALLIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Difficulties with Westinghouse jet engines caused the Navy to abandon one type of Grumman fighter plane nearly two years before it gave up on the original McDonnell Demon and the first Chance Vought Cutlass for the same reason, the Post-Dispatch was told today.

The Navy lost $28,000,000 on the Grumman project, which was canceled in January 1953, Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas has said.

A representative of Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corp. of New York said today the Grumman F10F, designed as a high-performance all-weather fighter, could not be brought into production as planned in 1952 because "the engine would not do the job."

By October 1951 the Navy had ordered 82 of the F10Fs and was planning to increase the order to 274. Only one of the planes was flown, the Grumman spokesman said today, and it "would not fly fast enough." There were no crashes or emergency landings in testing of that model, he said.

Designed for J-40 Engine.

The planes had been designed to use the Westinghouse J-40 engine, the same as the engine in the F3H-1N Demon manufactured by McDonnell Aircraft Corp. of St. Louis. Chance Vought Aircraft, Inc., at Dallas, used the Westinghouse J-46.

Secretary Thomas testified about the Grumman project before a House subcommittee last Feb. 4.

A subcommittee member said: "You have given this plane up as a bad job. It just didn't come out right, so every nickel you put in it is just lost."

"That is right," Thomas replied.

Another witness, Capt. H. T. Dietrich of the plans co-ordination division of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics, said: "We ran into difficulties all the way through our program that we had not anticipated.

"When the programs were originally conceived they were thought to be sound. We are going through this trans-sonic area and into the sonic area, and it has posed problems that we didn't know about until we got into it."

Trans-sonic Explained.

His reference to the trans-sonic area was to flying just below and in the general range of the speed of sound, about 650 to 800 miles an hour.

McDonnell is producing now a new version of the Demon, using an Allison engine, with which no difficulties have been reported.

Staff men of the House subcommittee on military operations started looking into the Navy plane procurement record this week after the Navy said that 50 of the original Demons, contract for which had been cancelled last November, were still grounded at St. Louis because the engines were underpowered.

They started by conferring with Secretary Thomas and other top Navy officials, and Monday the inquiry will be extended. Subcommittee investigators plan to go to the McDonnell plant at St. Louis, the Westinghouse engine plant at Kansas City and the Westinghouse head office at Pittsburgh, Pa.

Curtis Criticism.

In St. Louis meanwhile Congressman Thomas B. Curtis (Rep.), Missouri, criticized the Navy's replies to charges of McDonnell Demon deficiencies.

Curtis, who had some experience in Naval procurement in World War II, said the difficulty stemmed from engineering errors which only show up in testing prototypes of the planes or engines. However, he said, the Navy should have been on the watch for these and corrected them. He said either the Senate or House Armed Services Committees should make a public report on the matter.

View of Plaza After Demolition Work Ends

—By Lloyd Spainhower, a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Aerial photograph of the Plaza redevelopment area taken yesterday after demolition of the last of 87 buildings. The tract of eight and one-half blocks bounded roughly by Market, Olive, Fourteenth and Eighteenth streets is now ready for development for a public park and a private housing project. The park, to link Aloe and Memorial Plazas, will cover the three blocks cleared along Market street (upper left). Ford Apartments (foreground), twin-towered Catholic Basilica of St. John and white stone Centenary Methodist Church (center), and Eighteenth Street Garage (top) will be left intact.

WOMAN TIPSTER IN PAY-OFF CASE HELD FOR SAFETY

She Says 'Boy Friend' Gave Her Black Eye — Operation of Two Houses Involved.

A 23-year-old waitress who is reported to have given important information in the police pay-off inquiry is being held at Police Headquarters for her own protection, the Post-Dispatch was told last night.

The woman has a black eye, which she said was given to her by a "boy friend," who hit her with a tire tool. She would not identify the man.

Other sources said she had been beaten as punishment for talking to investigators for the Circuit Attorney's office.

Eugene Freeman, assistant circuit attorney, brought the waitress to headquarters Friday night and requested that she be held temporarily.

The woman is reported to be familiar with operations of two disorderly houses in the Central Police District. The houses, operating intermittently, are in the 200 block of South Sixth street and the 700 block of South Broadway.

Houses Kept Operating.

Despite an intensive inquiry into brothel operations in St. Louis, resulting from allegations that some policemen have been receiving pay-offs, the two houses have continued their attempts to keep going.

The waitress is reported to have made statements to circuit attorney investigators concerning certain policemen, particularly in respect to special details assigned to stop operation of the brothels.

For the last six months, police have attempted unsuccessfully to stop operations at the South Broadway establishment. When a detail of officers was stationed in front of the place, visitors would enter through the back door. When the detail was in the back, customers arrived by the front.

The police morality squad, led by Lt. John Doherty, made two raids on the South Sixth street house this summer and, for a time at least, stopped operations.

At the South Broadway establishment, however, Doherty's men found no one in the brothel when the officers entered. Finally, police discovered that the occupants were using a hidden wall panel to slip into an adjoining house, whose occupants maintained an air of respectability.

On Alert for Threats.

In the meantime, the slugging of the waitress has alerted authorities to watch for other incidents suggesting intimidation of witnesses in the pay-off investigation.

Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd, who has been on a two-week trip to Los Angeles and Las Vegas, Nev., seeking evidence in the pay-off inquiry, is expected to return today.

'GROWL TEST' TOMORROW FOR AREA AIR RAID SIRENS

Air raid sirens in St. Louis and University City, Brentwood, Maplewood and Ladue will be given their monthly "growl test" at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

They are tested regularly the first Monday of each month to check their working order, but for only a few seconds and the sirens are held to a low pitch.

The last test, Labor day, all but three of the 127 in use worked properly.

Four New Express Bus Lines To Begin Operating Next Month

They Will Serve Army Record Center, North and South County — Another Line to Be Extended.

Public Service Co. will add four new express bus lines and extend another express line in November, the company announced yesterday.

John C. Baine, president, said two of the rapid transit routes will be inaugurated in time to accommodate employes of the Army Record Center, on Page boulevard west of Woodson road, when the center opens Nov. 1. The other lines will go into service by Dec. 1.

The other new lines will be the Lemay Ferry Express and the Bissell Hills Express, serving persons living in south and north St. Louis county. The South Side Express line will be extended.

Cross-City Line.

A cross-city express line will be operated to the Army Record Center beginning at the Hampton-Gravois Loop. It will go east in Gravois avenue, north in Kingshighway and west in Page to the center.

The other Record Center line will start at Third street and Washington avenue. Busses will go west in Washington, north in Compton avenue, and then west in Easton avenue and Page boulevard to the Center. On both of these lines busses will reverse the same routes in returning.

The Lemay Ferry Express will start at Morris and Telegraph roads. Busses will go north in Telegraph, northeast in Lemay Ferry road, Alabama, Ivory and Michigan avenues, west in Bellerive boulevard, north in Virginia avenue, east in Meramec street, north in Compton avenue, northeast in Gravois, north in Twelfth street, east in Chestnut street, north in Seventh street, and east in Delmar boulevard to Sixth street.

Busses returning on the Lemay Ferry Express route from Sixth and Delmar will go south in Sixth, south in Compton, west in Gasconade street, south in Virginia avenue, west in Bellerive, continuing south in Virginia, southeast in Ivory, Alabama and Lemay Ferry, south in Telegraph road, west in Arlee avenue, south in Basil street and west in Morris avenue to Telegraph.

Bissell Hills Route.

The Bissell Hills Express will start at Chambers and Bellefontaine roads. Busses will go north in Bellefontaine, west and south in Coburg Lands drive, west in Cabot drive, south in Ashbrook drive, east in Chambers, southeast in Bellefontaine and Broadway, west in Angelica street, south in Ninth street, west in Chambers street, south in Tenth street, east in Carr street, and south in Eighth street to Pine street.

From Eighth and Pine, returning busses will go west in Pine, north in Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, east in Branch street, north in Ninth, east in Angelica and thence by way of the reverse inbound route.

The South Side Express line will be extended from the Gravois-Hampton Loop west in Gravois and Weber road to Mackenzie road, and south in Mackenzie to Gravois. Returning busses will go northeast in Gravois and then reverse the outbound route.

Baine said the expansion plans, which will increase the company's express lines to 15, will be extended further if the public gives sufficient patronage to rush-hour service. Shopper express lines then will be considered for off-peak periods, he said.

ROBBERY CHARGE AGAINST TONY DI MARTINO DROPPED

A charge of armed robbery against Tony DiMartino, manager of Frank (Buster) Wortman's Terrace Lounge on the East Side, was dismissed yesterday at the request of Assistant State's Attorney Marvin W. Goldenhersh.

The warrant was issued after five men, all armed with pistols, seized an automobile Sept. 17 from England's garage, 805 Exchange avenue, East St. Louis, after it had been towed in for being illegally parked in front of the Terrace Lounge.

Goldenhersh told the Post-Dispatch he asked for dismissal of the charge at a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Harry J. Cassin because of insufficient evidence to show that DiMartino appeared at the garage. Previously, garage employes said they could not identify DiMartino.

MAN, 60, FALLS TO DEATH FROM MO.PAC.BUILDING

Harry W. Morgan Plunges From 14th Floor—Had Been on Sick Leave.

Harry W. Morgan, chief clerk in the freight claims department of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, was killed yesterday when he jumped or fell from the fourteenth floor of the Missouri Pacific Building at Thirteenth and Olive streets.

The body was identified by a son, Harry N. Morgan, 301 Dawson court, Webster Groves, who told police his father had had a heart attack six years ago and was suffering from a paralysis that had reached the brain.

Police estimated the body fell about 160 feet. It struck a trolley wire guide cable about 25 feet from the street, landing on the head in Thirteenth.

John Petric, bartender at 1233 Olive street, said he saw the body strike the guide wire. "It then fell head first to the street," he said.

Morgan, 60 years old, lived at 5284A Waterman boulevard. A railroad company employe told police he saw Morgan on the fifteenth floor of the building writing a note. Police found a torn note in his trousers pocket giving the telephone number of his home and asking that an undertaker be notified.

He fell from the fourteenth floor typing bureau office. Four persons working there did not see him enter. His tan hat and top coat were found beside an open window.

Morgan's office was on the seventh floor. Police believe he used the elevator to get to the fifteenth floor, then walked down to the fourteenth after writing the note.

George A. Stover, freight claims manager, Morgan's immediate superior in the company, said Morgan had gone on sick leave Sept. 7 and was to have returned Oct. 10 with the understanding that he could have more leave if necessary.

He had been chief clerk in the department about four years and had been with the company 38 years.

Besides his son, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ureil Morgan, another son, James I. Morgan of St. John, and four sisters.

Funeral services will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Schnur undertaking establishment, 3125 Lafayette avenue, with burial in Memorial Park Cemetery.

ST. LOUIS TAKES JURISDICTION OF RETARDED BOY

Judge Acts After Two Counties Refuse to Accept Child Abandoned by Father.

St. Louis will assume jurisdiction in the case of Robert Russell, 6-year-old mentally-retarded boy, because Jefferson and Washington county officials failed to act, Circuit Judge David J. Murphy told the Post-Dispatch last night.

Benjamin S. Russell, the child's father, was freed Tuesday of a charge of abandoning Robert, who was found wandering in the 700 block of South Broadway the evening of Sept. 7.

Judge Murphy said he talked with Jefferson county officials about returning the child there but was informed that county would not be able to take care of him. Murphy said he felt the answer would be the same from Washington county. There had been diverse opinions about which county was Russell's legal residence.

View of Officials Here.

Circuit court officials here said all evidence indicated the father is a resident of Jefferson county. But Prosecuting Attorney Stewart O'Brien of Jefferson county said he had no valid evidence that the boy's father was a resident there.

"It is our hope that we will be able to get the child in a state institution eventually," Judge Murphy said, "but I have no idea when it will be possible to do that, so I feel St. Louis will have to take jurisdiction."

Judge Murphy said he does not know at this time where the boy will be placed. At present he is being kept on a temporary basis at City Hospital. "They're kind about a thing like this at City Hospital, but there's a limit to what they can do," Murphy remarked.

May Find Foster Home.

He said an attempt probably would be made to get the boy into some local institution or foster home. "I think there are a lot of people who would like to take care of a child like this," the judge said. "We may be able to get him in a foster home on a temporary basis."

Testimony was given at the trial of Russell that state institutions for the mentally retarded are badly overcrowded and that there is a long list of applications for admittance.

PRESIDENT HALF THROUGH HIS CRITICAL PERIOD

following the cardiographic examination.

The President received five reading records sent by the Denver Association for the Blind, including one story, "Vengeance Valley," by Luke Short, one of his favorite western authors.

3 More Weeks in Hospital.

Although the President's recovery to date has been satisfactory, his doctors expect him to remain in the hospital for at least three more weeks.

Another month of convalescence will follow, possibly at his Gettysburg (Pa.) farm or some other restful spot.

The President's doctors said in their 7 a.m. bulletin:

"The President had a good night's sleep. He slept continuously from 10 p.m. to 6:20 a.m.

"He feels relaxed and comfortable this morning. His temperature is normal. His pulse and blood pressure continue to be stable and satisfactory.

"The President's breakfast this morning consisted of applesauce, oatmeal with skimmed milk, a poached egg, a strip of beef bacon, a slice of whole wheat toast and a glass of skimmed milk."

Beef bacon comes in strips similar to pork bacon except that it is cut from the back and sides of a steer rather than from a hog. It is cured and smoked like pork bacon.

The atmosphere at the temporary White House headquarters at Lowry Air Force Base was almost down to a calm normal today in sharp contrast to the distressed furore which followed the announcement last Saturday of the President's attack.

The news rocked the world and caused floods of speculation on both its political and diplomatic aspects. But one week later the President appeared to be slowly but definitely on the mend.

On Rigid Diet.

He has been eating regularly but is kept rigidly on a diet of only 1600 calories a day. Day by day he has been allowed to spend more time visiting with Mrs. Eisenhower and other members of the family.

However, his contacts with the duties of the office have been limited to brief sessions with one or two top aids and the minor task of signing the papers last night.

Although he well may be back at the White House in Washington within two months, Mr. Eisenhower is expected to forego for the indefinite future all ceremonial and protocol occasions which require his personal appearance. Many of these may be delegated to Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

The illness also means the likely cancellation of the normally heavy White House winter social season.

One of the tasks confronting the Fitzsimons medical staff is making hospital confinement bearable for a man of Mr. Eisenhower's active nature. Planning on ways to reduce his boredom was being given equal thought with his gradual return to exercise of actual presidential authority.

The President continued to listen to softly-played musical recordings from time to time and occasionally is read to by Mrs. Eisenhower or one of the four Army nurses in attendance.

Dr. Paul Dudley White of Boston, internationally recognized heart specialist who flew here last weekend, will return to Denver late next week for another check on the President and consultation with the medical experts in daily attendance.

White will help the other doctors plan the medical future of the President as he moves out of the two weeks critical period and into the less confining time of convalescence.

Danger Period Not Over.

Throughout, however, both the doctors and the temporary White House emphasized that nothing will be done to speed up time of recovery specified by the medical men. They emphasized repeatedly that the President is not yet past the danger period.

Hagerty, asked how soon the President can pick up the actual reins of government, told reporters, "I would like to insist that the doctors are in charge of the case and (Adams) and myself at all times will ask the doctors for their decisions before taking any actions."

Hagerty emphasized that although the doctors will be calling the turn on how much the President can do, they will have no role in governmental or policy decisions.

Hagerty and Adams conferred with Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, the White House physician, Maj. Gen. Martin E. Griffin, commanding general of the hospital; Col. Byron E. Pollock, head of the Fitzsimons heart section; Col. Thomas W. Mattingly, heart expert from Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, and Col. Don Carle, Fitzsimons deputy commander.

Hagerty said there are few additional papers on hand at the moment that require the President's attention, but that he may be permitted to sign a few more routine documents next week.

Not Tired by Signing.

He said the President had not been tired "at all" by the minor exertion of holding the documents in one hand and scrawling his name with the other last night.

Stressing the importance of the first two weeks, Hagerty told reporters that "nobody on the Government side is going to disturb that two weeks." He said "everybody on the White House and medical staffs is interested in just one thing—getting the President well."

Adams will fly back to Washington next week to attend the National Security Council meeting Thursday and Cabinet meeting Friday.

Mrs. Eisenhower planned to receive communion tomorrow at a private service in her hospital quarters. The service will be conducted by Lt. Col. Robert L. Schock of Los Angeles, Protestant chaplain at Fitzsimons.

VEILED PROPHET HERE THIS WEEK FOR BALL, PARADE

either the Fourteenth street or Fifteenth street entrance to the auditorium. Automobiles are to proceed to City Hall parking lot after discharging passengers.

Largest of the parties which are customarily held after the ball is over will be the Queen's supper dance at Hotel Jefferson, where the Queen and her maids and many of the season's debutantes will be present with their escorts.

Parade Route Unchanged.

The parade, following the same route as last year, will begin at 7:05 p.m. Wednesday at Kingshighway and Lindell boulevard.

It will be led by the Veiled Prophet, on a float with several of his courtiers, followed by 17 floats illustrating the parade's theme—suggesting possible future careers for children, to help them answer the question adults generally ask about what they want to be when they grow up.

The Queen will have a float of her own this year for the first time. Her special maids, who previously have accompanied her, will be on a separate float. The two floats will be at the end of the parade.

The floats are titled as follows:

Veiled Prophet; Storekeeper; Teacher; Fireman and Policeman; Farmer; Nurse and Doctor; Davy Crockett; Artist and Sculptor; Actor, Clown, Magic, Music, Dance; Lawyer, Judge; Mother; Scientist, Chemist, Physicist, Botanist; Soldier, Sailor, Marine, Aviator; Architect, Engineer, Builder; Banker; Athlete; Clergyman; President of the United States; the Queen, and Queen's court.

In case of rain on Wednesday, the parade will be held Thursday or the first clear evening after that.

SHOT AND KILLED IN BAR, UPSHOT OF 8-MONTH FEUD

Anderson Gillespie, a chauffeur, was shot and killed last night in the Tampico Bar, 1201 South Compton avenue, by a man with whom he had been feuding for eight months.

Police said Hubert Carr, a Negro, living in the 2700 block of Hickory street, surrendered at the Lynch street station and told them he had fired four revolver shots at Gillespie in self defense, three taking effect in the chest and shoulder. Gillespie also was a Negro.

Witnesses reported, however, that Carr walked into the bar with his pistol drawn and began shooting, police said. A pistol was found in Gillespie's possession but it had not been fired. Gillespie, 50 years old, lived at 10041 Conway drive, Ladue, where he was employed.

EMERSON GETS CONTRACT FOR 'HONEST JOHN' ROCKETS

A $4,553,639 contract for production of "Honest John" rockets for the Army has been awarded to Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co., Col. William A. Evans, commanding officer of the St. Louis Ordnance, announced yesterday.

The award thus assures continued manufacture of the weapon by Emerson, which received its first contract for the "free-flight" rocket in January 1954.

DOG SOUGHT, BIT BOY

Mrs. John Krombach, 1330 Hawthorne avenue, Richmond Heights, is trying to find the owner of a small dog which bit her son yesterday, to determine if the dog is free of rabies.

The dog is described as black and white in coloring and short-haired, with a sore front paw and a small bell on its collar. Mrs. Krombach said her 8-year-old son, David, was bitten on the right hand in the 6900 block of Delmar boulevard. She emphasized she has no wish to take any action against the dog's owner.

COURT TO HEAR ARGUMENTS ON 'HOT ROD' MOORE REPORT

Sheriff Arthur C. Mosley of St. Louis county yesterday filed suggestions in opposition to exceptions made by attorneys for Robert H. (Hot Rod) Moore to the report of Norwin D. Houser, commissioner of the St. Louis Court of Appeals.

Judge Houser's report recommended that Moore be turned over to Sheriff Mosley to serve out a 60-day jail sentence for a traffic law violation in Glendale. The recommendation was on Moore's petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

The three judges of the Court of Appeals will hear oral arguments tomorrow on the exceptions to the ruling by Judge Houser and take the matter under submission. Final disposition will depend on the court's decision, since it is not bound by the commissioner's findings. The 60-day sentence was ordered for the notorious traffic law violator by the Pike county circuit court which had taken the case from Glendale police court on a change of venue.

3 KILLED, 6 HURT IN CITY, COUNTY AUTO CRASHES

Two Fatalities in Intersection Accident — Man Killed in Head-on Collision.

Three persons were killed and six others injured in two automobile collisions in St. Louis and St. Louis county early yesterday.

Miss Heise.

The dead: Miss Fern Heise, 22 years old, 3452A Pestalozzi street; Herman A. Marggraf, 53, Graeser road, Creve Coeur, and Robert E. Craig Jr., 25, 341 South Old Orchard avenue, Webster Groves.

Miss Heise was crushed to death when she was pinned under one of two automobiles which collided at Ohio avenue and Arsenal street. Police were told she left a dance at Southwest Turner Hall with two young men. The men apparently were taking her home when their automobile collided with another, jumped the curb and stopped against a tavern. Her body was beneath the machine when police arrived.

Craig was hanging head down from an open door of the automobile. He died yesterday afternoon at City Hospital.

Owner Seriously Hurt.

The owner of the automobile, Jack F. Kenny, 24, an electrician, 4917A Winona avenue, suffered serious head injuries and is in City Hospital.

The second machine stopped 40 feet north of the intersection, in Ohio avenue. The occupant, Carl Sawyer, 31, a city fireman, 4615 Shenandoah avenue was hanging unconscious from an open door. He also is in City Hospital with a skull injury.

Miss Heise, an employe of Concordia Publishing Co., was from Steelville, Ill., where her parents live. She had accompanied her roommate, Miss Dolores Groth, to the dance, but left without Miss Groth. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

Struck Head On.

Marggraf, an employe of McDonnell Aircraft Corp., was killed when his automobile was struck head on by another machine on Lindbergh boulevard, north of Olive Street road, at 12:45 a.m. He was pronounced dead at St. Louis County Hospital.

Ronald Crotzer, 19-year-old filling station attendant, driver of the second machine, was quoted by police as saying the wheels of his automobile began vibrating, and when he applied the brakes the machine swerved across the road. Crotzer, who lives at 3342 Chaucer avenue, Overland, is in County Hospital with a fractured leg and internal injuries.

Passengers in Crotzer's machine who were injured, were: William Lemley, 18, 402 North Elizabeth avenue, Ferguson, fractured jaw and head injuries; Miss Ann Schumacher, 16, 3817 Waco avenue, Normandy, head injuries, and Miss Sally Petty, 18, 10214 St. Anthony lane, St. Ann, fractured ankles.

Veers Off Highway.

Eugene Hanner, East Alton, suffered serious chest injuries yesterday when the automobile he was driving veered off Highway 140 at Elm Grove avenue in Hazelwood and struck a utility pole.

Three men, passengers in the car, suffered cuts but were released after treatment at St. Louis County Hospital. They are Luther Peck and Emert Null, also of East Alton, and James Palmer, Wood River.

The four are employes of the Ford Motor Co. plant in Hazelwood and were driving north on the highway after leaving work, Hazelwood police said. Hanner is 26.

Woman Struck by Auto.

Mrs. Ernestine Mae Banks, a Negro, 120 East Haven street, suffered head injuries and cuts of the scalp last night when struck by an automobile at Haven and South Broadway. She was taken to City Hospital. She is 58.

A man who said he was Virgil Cochran, a Negro, of the 2500 block of Glasgow avenue, was arrested by police and booked suspected of leaving the scene of an accident. Police said the license number of his automobile was furnished by a witness.

Cochran told police he did not know anything about the accident. He said he was asleep in the back seat and a friend of his was driving the car.

St. Louisan Killed in Arkansas Automobile Accident.

Leon C. Sheets, an equipment installer in the Western Electric Co. St. Louis office, was killed and a fellow-worker, William L. Gaston, seriously injured in an automobile accident early yesterday near Cabot, Ark., about 15 miles northeast of Little Rock.

State police said an automobile in which the two were riding struck a bridge abutment.

Sheets, 24 years old, came to the St. Louis office from his home in Little Rock about two years ago. He recently had been living in Belleville, with his wife and two children. Gaston, 23 and single, lives at 4642A Westminster place.

60,000-Mile Walk Ended

NEWARK, N. J. (AP)—William J. Truesdell retired recently as a mailman after 48 years on the job. He figures he walked 60,000 miles and delivered 600 tons of mail.

30-DAY OUTLOOK: ABOVE NORMAL RAIN DUE IN AREA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—The Weather Bureau said today its 30-day outlook for October calls for temperatures to average below seasonal normals over most of the nation except for above normal in the south and near normal in the north Atlantic states, Ohio valley, and Far West.

Colder weather is indicated in the northern plains and warmest in the extreme southeast.

Precipitation is expected to exceed normal over most of the country except for subnormal amounts west of the Continental Divide and also along the Gulf and south Atlantic coasts.

French Production Rises.

PARIS, Oct. 1 (AP)—French industrial production during August was 10 per cent above the same period for 1954, government figures showed today.

7 HOME BUILDERS OFFER TO BUILD MALINE SEWER

They Would Get Money From $100 Assessments and Funds Held in Escrow.

A proposal under which a one-mile section of trunk sewer along polluted Maline creek would be built and financed by a group of seven subdivision and real estate developers at a cost of about $575,000 is being considered by the Metropolitan St. Louis Sewer District, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

The builders would get their money through $100 assessments against the homes and business establishments being served, and also from sewer funds now held in escrow. The plan was presented to the district board of trustees last Tuesday.

John M. Bogdanor, chairman of the board, said the trustees hope to be able to meet with sponsors of the plan this week to discuss it fully. He said many problems would have to be explored, such as whether escrow funds could legally be used in the manner proposed.

Subdivision developers who submitted the proposal were Schuermann Building & Realty Co., Vorhof-Duenke Real Estate Co., Charles S. Reynolds Construction Co., Vincent P. Wieck, Bruno Salzman, Eugene R. Riley and G. J. Nooney & Co. The seven operators have been building a total of between 700 and 800 homes in the area annually.

Advantages Claimed for Plan.

Advantages which sponsors say would accrue under their plan are as follows:

Actual construction could start in a minimum of time—perhaps 90 days—since the builders are ready to put up cash. Under the bond issue plan as provided under the sewer district's charter, work probably would not start for at least a year, it was said.

Construction would be cheaper because there would be no interest to be paid on bonds and no discounting of paper by contractors if the special tax bill method were adopted.

The plan would be less expensive to individual homeowners because the assessment would be only half the $200 per lot now held in escrow for eventual sewer construction. However, the escrow funds on deposit for the area to be served by the one-mile section would be made available to help pay for construction.

$368,000 in Escrow.

A total of about $368,000 is held in escrow for the total of nine miles of Maline creek sanitary sewer needed. Most of this money is held by the sewer district. The one mile to be built under the home builders' proposal would be immediately upstream from the Bellefontaine Neighbors section of the creek which already has a 60-inch trunk sewer.

Under the proposal the trunk sewer would be turned over to the sewer district as soon as construction cost had been paid off by the assessments. Thereafter new homes built would be connected to the trunk without charge.

The plan before the district board is similar—though on a smaller scale—to one presented by the Vorhof-Duenke firm about a year ago and rejected by the board on the ground the sewer would not go under district control until it was paid off. Another objection was that the assessments against new homes would be in the nature of connection charges.

LINDENWOOD COLLEGE TO MARK 128TH YEAR

The 128th anniversary of the founding of Lindenwood College will be observed at a convocation at 11 a.m. Saturday on the campus at St. Charles, with Mrs. M. M. White of Lexington, Ky., as the principal speaker.

Mrs. White, wife of the dean of arts and sciences at the University of Kentucky, is an alumna of Lindenwood.

The convocation will be part of alumnae weekend activities, which will include the showing of "The Linden Leaf," a new movie about the college, Friday night and a luncheon Saturday at which F. L. McCluer, college president, and Siegmund A. E. Betz, professor of English, will speak.

KNOWLAND URGES U.N. TALK ON NATIONS RUSSIA SEIZED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (UP)—Senate Republican leader William F. Knowland said today the United Nations decision to debate the Algerian question should open the door for U.N. discussion of the status of three Baltic nations seized by Russia in World War II.

The California Republican said in a statement that if the U.N. wants to debate Algeria "it would be an opportune time" to discuss also the "forced captivity of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia." He said the three countries "were forcibly taken behind the Iron Curtain in 1941 despite solemn treaty pledges of the Soviet Union in 1939."

Salk Shots in Puerto Rico.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Oct. 1 (AP)—Dr. Juan A. Pons, secretary of health, says Puerto Rico is ready to start giving children Salk vaccine inoculations against poliomyelitis without charge through government agencies within three weeks. The United States has set aside $1,282,490 for the work on this island.

JAPAN INSISTING RUSSIA RETURN SEIZED ISLANDS

TOKYO, Oct. 1 (AP)—Japan's chief negotiator to the Russian-Japanese peace talks said today Japan is insisting on unconditional return of southern Kuriles, Shikotan and Habomai islands.

Shunichi Matsumoto told newsmen that Russia's offer to return Shikotan and Habomai islands on condition that they not be fortified "would be an infringement of Japanese sovereignty and is not acceptable to Japan."

Matsumoto, who returned to Tokyo today from the London talks, reaffirmed Japan's stand after conferring with Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu.

Matsumoto also repeated Japan's position that disposition of southern Sakhalin and the northern Kuriles should be determined by a conference of World War II Allied powers. Japan renounced its claim to those two territories in the San Francisco peace treaty.

That treaty, however, did not specify who would assume control of the two areas. The Soviets occupied them and contend they were given them by the Yalta agreement.

Drive Started for Big Voter Turnout Tuesday

though Tuesday will be partly cloudy and moderately warm, with no immediate indication of rain.

Three Types of Aid.

The foundation program would set up a simplified system for apportioning the state's multi-million dollar educational grants among Missouri's 4000 public school districts. Although full financing of the plan would require additional revenues, the distribution system would apply to any amount of money appropriated by the State Legislature for this purpose.

It provides for the payment of three types of aid to qualifying districts. To qualify, the district would have to levy a local tax for school operating purposes of at least $1 on each $100 assessed valuation.

If the plan was approved by the voters and fully financed, the state would make a flat grant of $75 a year for each pupil enrolled in a public elementary or high school.

A separate "equalization fund" would be established to give additional aid to "poorer" districts whose local tax revenues are limited because of a small tax base. The state would supplement local revenues so these districts would have $110 a year per pupil, in addition to the $75 flat grant, for operation of their schools. If the revenue from a $1 local levy failed to amount to $110 a year per child, the state would pay the difference.

Grants Based on Teachers.

The third fund is designed to provide an incentive to improve teachers' educational qualifications. School districts would receive additional state grants ranging from $100 to $300 per teacher, depending upon the number of college credit hours earned by each teacher.

If there was not sufficient money to finance this program in full, the available funds would be distributed in each category on a pro rata basis.

Objectives of the measure, sponsors assert, are to provide a more equitable method of distributing state funds, to force many small rural districts to pay more for the operation of their schools, and to raise teaching standards in the classrooms.

At present, the bulk of state school funds are apportioned on the basis of the number of teachers, and elementary school districts can qualify by levying a local school tax of only 65 cents. Under the new plan, most of the funds would be distributed on the basis of the number of pupils.

Cost Estimates.

Estimated cost of financing the foundation program in full ranges from $64,000,000 to $67,000,000 the first year. With Missouri public school enrollment increasing at the rate of about 17,000 a year, the amount needed to put the plan into full operation would be higher in subsequent years.

The last Legislature voted to give the schools 37.5 per cent of all state general revenues in the 1955-57 biennium. On the basis of official estimates, this is expected to amount to about $52,000,000 a year. Sponsors of the foundation program contend the $9,000,000-a-year in additional cigarette tax revenue is necessary if the plan is to be adequately financed.

Miss Julia B. Schmidt, who is directing the St. Louis campaign for adoption of the two proposals, said the drive has been taken over largely by parent-teacher groups. She said a lack of funds has handicapped the effort.

Leaflets urging support of Referendum Measure No. 2, the school foundation program, will be given to public school children tomorrow to take home to their parents. No mention is made in these leaflets of the cigarette tax proposal, although the P.T.A. groups are supporting both. The St. Louis Board of Education is backing the foundation program, but has avoided taking a position on the tax proposal.

Miss Schmidt said members of the parent-teacher organizations will distribute sample ballots at most of the polling places in the city Tuesday. She is principal of the Blow and Maddox Schools, and is head of the St. Louis district of the Missouri Teachers Association, one of the leading sponsors of the two proposals.

Action by Leagues.

The Leagues of Women Voters of Metropolitan St. Louis are making a drive to get out a vote for the school program, but have taken no stand on the cigarette tax. They have set up public booths in support of the campaign in downtown St. Louis, Ferguson, Kirkwood and University City.

The St. Louis League will furnish information to city residents who want to know where to vote. They may obtain the information by telephoning FO. 7-7166.

The County League will not provide the usual local service for county voters because of the precinct revision there. Voters wanting information were asked to call the league office, FO. 1-4846, or the County Election Board, VO. 3-6360.

There has been no organized opposition to the foundation program, but the proposed cigarette tax has run into strong opposition from state AFL and CIO groups and from tobacco distributors. The labor groups are backing the foundation plan, however.

Tax Called Unwise.

In a closing attack on the tax proposal, John I. Rollings, president of the AFL Missouri State Federation of Labor, declared that the proposed earmarking of cigarette tax revenues was "unwise" as a matter of Governmental fiscal policy.

He said the proposed levy would add $7.30 a pear to the tax bill of the average cigarette smoker, who already is paying $40 a year in existing federal, state and local taxes on cigarettes.

"If it is shown that the schools need more money to finance the foundation program, we would not object to the money being raised by a more equitable tax, such as the state income tax," Rollings said.

Three new groups, meeting at the St. Louis County Library, 6814 Natural Bridge road, Pine Lawn; the Central Public Library, 1301 Olive street, and at the Carpenter Branch Library, 3309 South Grand boulevard, are beginning this year.

TWO POLIO SHOTS FOR THOSE 1 TO 9 BY WINTER'S END

Plans for Distribution of Vaccine to Be Disclosed by State This Week.

Dr. James R. Amos, director of the Missouri Division of Health, expressed confidence yesterday that all children in this state 1 through 9 years of age will have received two shots of Salk polio vaccine by the end of this winter.

He told the Post-Dispatch that plans for state distribution of the vaccine under the voluntary control plan would be announced by his office late this week.

This program for which Congress appropriated $30,000,000 last summer, is intended to insure that no child in the susceptible age groups is denied vaccine because of inability to pay for it.

No 'Means Tests.'

While individual states are allowed great latitude in deciding who is to receive free shots, "means tests" will not be permitted, Dr. Amos said the basis of distribution in Missouri would be explained when the plan is announced.

The plan also permits the state to allow some of the vaccine to be sent through normal drug channels where it becomes subject to prescription by private physicians. He said a total of 112,000 shots have been distributed through these private channels in this state since the embargo on the vaccine was lifted.

While the current top priority is being assigned to the 5-through-9 group, Dr. Amos said he felt fairly certain the next priority would be the 1-through-4 bracket.

The program to be announced later this week is separate from the one provided by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis for school children in grades one and two last spring. That program was not completed during the last school year because of the embargo that was placed on the vaccine by the United States Public Health Service.

Plans in St. Louis Area.

However, it is expected the second round of shots will be completed this month or next in the St. Louis area but the shots will be restricted to those children who received their first shots last spring.

Dr. Lloyd L. Tate, director of health and hygiene for the St. Louis public schools, said he hoped to set up the inoculation program for about the middle of the month. The parochial school program is being handled by the City Health Division.

Consent blanks to be signed by parents are being circulated in both the public and parochial schools of the city. St. Louis county schools, public and parochial, have been notified by the County Health Department to set up their programs at their convenience as the serum is available.

Students in private schools in the city may receive their second shots any Saturday this month by calling at the City Health Division immunization clinic in the Municipal Courts building from 9 a.m. to noon. The number of such students is small.

GERMAN NEAR END OF 4-MONTH HIKE VISITS ST. LOUIS

Werner Martin, German photographer and world hitchhiker, left St. Louis yesterday for Chicago, nearing the end of a four-month trip covering 15,000 miles in North America.

The kindliness of Americans has very much impressed him, Martin said. By hitchhiking, he believes he meets a representative cross-section of America. When he returns to Duesseldorf next month he hopes to lecture on America and show some of the 3000 pictures he has taken here.

One of the most interesting experiences he had was a two-day walk through the Grand Canyon, carrying his 60-pound pack with four cameras, he declared. It was as quiet as within the Arctic Circle, where he has also hitchhiked, he said.

Martin, who visited the Mississippi riverfront and Forest Park while here, said he has hitchhiked from Lapland in northern Europe to Timbuktu in Africa. "Next year," he said, "I plan on seeing South America."

Wants Teetotaling Diplomats.

LONDON, Oct. 1 (AP) — James Hudson, secretary of the National Temperance Federation, wants British diplomats to take a voluntary oath not to drink. He cited the government's white paper saying Donald MacLean and Guy Burgess, missing diplomats who served as Soviet agents, were heavy drinkers.

An Invisible Barrier May Have Kept You From the Skin Beauty You Long For!

MAX FACTOR'S new discovery, SECRET KEY throws open the barrier that may be in your skin . . . thus enabling your creams and lotions to work most effectively!

"WHY do women with dry skin problems never seem to get the help they long for, even from the most expensive creams?" "WHY do so many women keep switching from one 'Oily Skin' treatment preparation to another?" "WHY do blackheads and blemishes still persist even when a woman follows the strictest corrective beauty routine?" ...For years, we of Max Factor searched for the answers to these puzzling questions. And this search revealed the startling fact that there is often a chemical barrier in the skin itself that keeps creams and lotions from getting in and working most effectively! When this barrier exists the SECRET KEY, a remarkable liquid formulation, returns the skin to correct acidity-alkalinity balance . . . and by so doing opens the way through for creams and lotions to do their beautifying work! We followed with exactly the right corrective treatment groups for the dry, the oily, the disturbed and the normal skin, each group formulated to follow right behind the SECRET KEY and help the skin to help itself.

HOW IS SECRET KEY USED?

TO RESTORE NATURAL RADIANCE to your skin, Secret Key may be used alone after cleansing.

TO CORRECT A DRY SKIN, use with related Dry Skin Creams: Double Depth Cleansing Cream, Enriched Hormone Cream, Active Moisturizer!

TO CORRECT AN OILY SKIN; use with related oily skin creams: Gentle Foam Cleanser, Facial Pack, Vita-Night Cream.

TO CORRECT A DISTURBED SKIN, use with Gentle Foam Cleanser and Clear-up antiseptic lotion.

TO SOFTEN AND SMOOTH NORMAL SKIN use with Double-Depth Cleansing Cream and Velvety Night Cream.

MRS. E. R. M'CARTHY NAMED OFFICER OF WORLD Y.W.C.A.

Mrs. Eugene R. McCarthy, 8481 Ellenwood avenue, Clayton, has been elected a vice president of the World Young Women's Christian Association, it was announced yesterday by the international organization in Geneva, Switzerland.

In her new post, Mrs. McCarthy will represent the World Y.W.C.A. council in the Atlantic and Caribbean areas and South America. She was elected at the quadriennial meeting of the council, which she attended last month at Royal Holloway College near Windsor, England.

Mrs. McCarthy, whose mother, Mrs. Joseph H. Roblee, was one of the founders of the St. Louis Y.W.C.A., is a former president of the local association. For the last several years she has served as chairman of the Central region, national vice president at large, a member of the executive committee of the World Y.W.C.A. and an American member of the World "Y" council.

Stevenson May Offer To Run in Nov. 19 Talk

attack in Denver, there has been a marked increase of interest in Stevenson reflected in his calling list and his correspondence. His speaking trip to Texas and his meeting with Senate majority leader Lyndon Johnson and Speaker Sam Rayburn were planned long before the President was stricken.

"People seem to think," Stevenson has told recent callers, with some acerbity, "that I should be more interested now. I am concerned with principles, beliefs, convictions. I believed the Democrats should take over the national Government whether President Eisenhower ran for re-election or not."

As he has indicated in recent speeches, Stevenson accuses the Republicans of substituting words for deeds; of talking about the need for schools, highways and the peril in declining farm prices but doing nothing about these and other problems confronting the country. He has felt, too, that hero worship of President Eisenhower has tended to silence the kind of continuing criticism essential to healthy helf-government. Thus what would have been denounced as "appeasement" under the Democrats was hailed as a great triumph for the President when at the Geneva conference last summer he sat down with the Soviet rulers to try to negotiate a truce in the cold war.

More and more will be heard in his speeches about the mistakes of the Republican Administration and the way in which those mistakes have been either ignored or glossed over. One of his close associates summed up his strong convictions and his apparent reluctance to get in the party factional strife by way of the presidential primaries this way: "Adlai wants to fight not Democrats but Republicans."

Stevenson's law offices on the eighth floor of the Continental Illinois National Bank building in the heart of Chicago's financial district might be those of any other successful lawyer. By a curious coincidence the offices just down the corridor are those of Dwight H. Green, whom Stevenson defeated for re-election as Governor in 1948.

But there is one exceptional feature in Stevenson's own walnut-paneled private office. On the wall is a large framed facsimile of the handwritten autobiography which Stevenson's grandfather, Jesse Fell, a newspaper editor, persuaded the Civil War President to write at the time of Lincoln's nomination when he was comparatively unknown in the country. This family connection with Lincoln is a source of deep pride to the former Governor.

Seems More Confident.

Those who have talked with him in recent weeks agree that Stevenson seems more confident, more at ease with himself than at almost any time during the last four or five years. This does not mean confidence that he will again be the Democratic nominee in '56. Far from it.

It means that he feels he has come through a difficult phase and that he is now as a consequence ready for the nomination should the leaders of his party agree that he is the best man for it. After his overwhelming defeat by President Eisenhower in '52—the Republican candidate carried 39 states to nine border and Southern states in the column of the Democratic candidate—Stevenson told friends that he was willing to accept the fate of a defeated candidate and make way for another choice at the next convention.

But he was still the titular head of the party, the leader of the opposition, and as such he had an obligation. Under the American system, unlike the parliamentary system with the leader of the opposition challenging the government in the Parliament, the terms of that obligation are not defined.

Nevertheless, Stevenson felt he had a duty to perform and he certainly did not leave his own political future out of consideration in formulating his plans. He felt that he should be out of the picture during the first session of a Republican Congress with a Republican President in the White House.

Traveled Around World.

In this first phase he made his round-the-world trip, studying and writing on the problems he found in each area. In the second phase he participated actively in the effort to repay the $800,000 Democratic debt incurred during the '52 campaign and also to strengthen and solidify the party. At fund-raising dinners Stevenson spoke in every part of the country to large and enthusiastic audiences.

The third phase began with his announcement last fall that he felt obligated to resume the practice of law in order to try to make some money. As a public figure without a public office and the apparatus of public office he was carrying an extraordinarily heavy and costly burden of correspondence.

The defeated candidate seems to have been reconciled to the probability that three years out of office after such a crushing defeat would consign him, as he put it, forever to the wings. But now he finds himself still onstage and he takes a quiet satisfaction in what has been largely a personal achievement.

Wanted to Remain Governor.

His present ease of mind has, however, still another source. While almost no one would believe him in the months leading up to the '52 convention when he tried to say no by every means short of shutting the door on the presidential nomination once and for all, Stevenson did want to run for re-election and undertake to complete the reforms he had initiated. Furthermore he felt he had a commitment to the people of the state to run for the governorship again.

As all human motives are mixed, the then Governor may have been aware that it was not a good time to run since the Democrats had been in power for 20 years. But no one who saw him in those months when he was so tormented by indecision could doubt the genuiness of his desire to stay for four more years in the Governor's office.

Now he has no such commitment. He is free to take a nomination. And while understatement is one of his strong characteristics—and a most unpolitical one—there is every indication that he is ready and willing.

He is fully aware of what his rivals for the Democratic nomination have to offer, and he speaks of them with admiration. It is most unlikely that he will contest openly with them for the prize. Stevenson is concentrating on defeating the Republicans whom he believes to be prisoners of the past and of the deep and divisive party conflicts obscured by President Eisenhower's great personal popularity.

MONSANTO CO. TO EXPAND PLANT AT TEXAS CITY, TEX.

Plans for expansion of ethylene production facilities at the Texas City (Tex.) plant of Monsanto Chemical Co. to increase production capacity 150 per cent were announced yesterday. A spokesman for the company declined to reveal the cost of the project.

Construction is expected to get under way next March. The new facilities are expected to be in operation early in 1957. The entire ethylene production is earmarked for use by the company, chiefly at its plastics division at Springfield, Mass.

Ethylene is used as an intermediate in the manufacture of plastic materials.

DOCTOR'S DUSKY DEFINITIONS

BOURNEMOUTH, England, Oct. 1 (AP)—Dr. J. L. Burn told the National Smoke Abatement Society that smog, smaze and smoil "are all deadly."

He defined smog as smoke and fog, smaze as the heavy, acrid haze that hangs over industrial towns and smoil as the smoky haze produced by burning oil.

Mrs. Eisenhower's 'Dander Up,' No Second Term if She Has Way

Son Backs Her—Intimates Pick President's Wife to Win 'Battle of Gettysburg' Against Professional Politicians.

BY SAM B. ARMSTRONG
National Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

DENVER, Oct. 1—Those Republican leaders who cling tenaciously to the hope that President Eisenhower will be their nominee in next year's election reckon without an equally determined "anti-Eisenhower" campaign.

Mrs. Eisenhower, not long after becoming First Lady, let it be known to friends that once was enough and that she preferred the privacy and comfort of the Gettysburg (Pa.) country home they soon acquired.

By the insistence of Republican strategists, appealing to the President's sense of duty and loyalty, inculcated by army training, Mr. Eisenhower was made keystone of the party's 1956 campaign plan until the world was shocked by the news of his coronary thrombosis last Saturday.

Now it would appear that Mrs. Eisenhower has been provided, unfortunate though it may be, with an unanswerable argument by which her position will prevail.

'Really Has Dander Up.'

Intimate friends of Mrs. Eisenhower, aware of how keenly she has felt on the second-term question for so long, now declare she "really has her dander up."

Within a few hours after the President was taken to Fitzsimons Army Hospital she established herself in a four-room suite across the hall from his room on the eighth floor.

There she has remained and there she proposes to stay as long as the President is there.

If his present rate of improvement continues it has been recommended by his physicians that he go by plane, not to Washington, but to the Gettysburg farm to continue his convalescence. He is not to be barred from conferences but would "stay out of general circulation," Dr. Paul Dudley White, Boston heart specialist, has said.

Dr. White and the attending physicians have made it plain that while the President's progress has been most encouraging, complications may arise. "For the first two weeks we keep our fingers crossed," Dr. White has repeatedly emphasized.

Son Opposes Second Term.

Joining his mother in her arguments against a second term has been Maj. John Eisenhower. And most vociferous of all has been Mrs. Eisenhower's mother, Mrs. John S. Doud, whose Lafayette avenue home is occupied by the Eisenhowers when they are in Denver.

When the Republican state chairmen called on the President here last week he appeared to be in the pink physically. But even then he counseled against basing plans on one man.

"Now, as long as we have a man in the leadership position, why, of course, as a party, we are going to be loyal" he said. "We are going to help in the fight.

"But humans are frail and they are mortal. Finally, you never pin your flag so tightly to one mast that if the ship sinks you cannot rip it off and nail it to another.

"It is sometimes good to remember that."

Mrs. Eisenhower has been visited by few persons other than her mother since she moved into the hospital. With her secretary she has been quite busy acknowledging messages from friends.

Before Maj. Eisenhower left Wednesday to return to Fort Belvoir, Va., the collaborated in selecting phonograph records which then were tap-recorded by the Signal Corps to be available for the President when he is in the mood for music.

They also selected recordings of books, such as are used by the blind, to help him while away the hours of his convalescence. They included mysteries, Westerns, and some Shakespeare.

Visited By Allens.

Besides Mrs. Dowd, Mrs. Eisenhower's visitors this week were Mr. and Mrs. George E. Allen who returned to Washington after the call. They had dinner with the Eisenhowers at the Doud home the evening before the President was stricken.

Mrs. Allen was one of Mrs. Eisenhower's close friends during the war years when she led a rather lonely life as an army wife in Washington. She has retained this relatively small group of friends in spite of the heavy social burden imposed by her position. With them she enjoys bridge, canasta, scrabble and discussing plans for the Gettysburg home.

Threatened with a rheumatic heart since her youth, Mrs. Eisenhower has been unable to join her husband at golf, fishing and the more active pursuits that naturally appeal to him.

In deference to her health she was forbidden by her physician to take part in the campaign after Mr. Eisenhower was nominated in 1952. Ignoring this advice, she became a spirited campaigner and a most valuable political asset throughout the strenuous tours.

Now, however, she is equally determined to make the most of the warning afforded by her husband's coronary attack. Such warnings, when heeded, often assure a normal life expectancy, physicians are quick to point out. A life of moderate activity in the country would be ideal from their viewpoint.

Mrs. Eisenhower's intimates are picking her as the winner in "The Battle of Gettysburg."

ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION TO AID STAMP COLLECTORS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—The Post Office Department today offered stamp collectors a chance to share in the Navy's forthcoming expedition to the Antarctic.

The department said that when the expedition shoves off next month it will be supplied with special stamp cancellation markers and official cachets. The cancellation markers will be for use at Antarctic post offices to be established temporarily at three locations—Little America, Byrd Station and Pole Station.

The Navy has agreed to handle not more than 10 special cancellations per collector. Requests should be addressed to "Operation Deepfreeze," United States Naval Base, Norfolk 11, Va., and be there not later than Nov. 8. The covers should carry a 3-cent stamp for surface mail and six cents for air mail.

ALLEN SEEKS TO COUNTER RED OFFER TO EGYPT

Confers With Nasser — West Said to Require Regaining Confidence of Arabs.

CAIRO, Oct. 1 (AP)—Assistant Secretary of State George Allen sought today to counter Communist arms offers to Egypt in a meeting with Prime Minister Gamal Abdel Nasser. There appeared to be a growing feeling in the Arab world that the West's first job is to regain Egyptian confidence.

Allen and the British, French and Russian Ambassadors all saw Nasser in a busy round of diplomatic conferences during the day.

The Premier and Egyptian leaders declared broken promises were a prime reason for Egypt's switch from the West to the Communist bloc for arms.

Denies Reports.

After his two-hour meeting with Nasser, Allen denied he discussed the possibility of canceling American economic aid to Egypt as a reprisal for its arms deal with the Czechs. Press reports that he was bringing such an "ultimatum" had infuriated Egyptian leaders and made Allen's difficult mission even more difficult.

Allen withheld comment when asked if he offered Egypt anything new, but reports from well-informed quarters persisted that he explored ways of supplying Egypt with some kind of American arms as a counter to the Czech deal.

Egypt has refused to sign a mutual security agreement to qualify for the arms grant and lacks the hard currency to buy outright. Even if arrangements could be made for financing United States arms sales to Egypt, major problems remain.

Nasser has indicated clearly he no longer trusts Western promises. He has accused all three big Western powers of breaking pledges to deliver arms. He says political considerations caused the cancellation of such promises. He says British and Americans withheld deliveries pending the Suez canal settlement.

Nasser says the French canceled deliveries because of Egyptian support of North African nationalists. Informed Egyptian sources say Nasser will need solid guarantees before he relies on the West again.

Arms Question.

A second problem arises over the types of arms. Nasser wants planes, tanks and artillery to match the weapons France has been supplying Israel. The United States usually speaks of much smaller equipment when discussing selling arms to Egypt.

Allen later met the Egyptian Ambassador to Washington, Ahmed Hussein, and British Ambassador Sir Humphrey Trevelyan. Allen expects to remain in Cairo until Monday, but an embassy spokesman said it is uncertain whether he will see Nasser again.

Nasser was the object of diplomatic wooing by all four major powers today. French Ambassador Armand du Chayla was kept waiting half an hour before the Premier received him. Du Chayla reportedly called to discuss Nasser's charges that France has touched off a Middle East arms race by selling heavy arms to Israel.

Nasser next met British Ambassador Trevelyan, who informed him of "the grave view" the British government takes of the Czech deal.

As soon as Trevelyan left, Allen and American Ambassador Henry Byroade came in for a two-hour talk. They were followed immediately by Soviet Ambassador Daniel Solod, who said he discussed "current affairs" with Nasser. Asked if he thought the West had a right to object to the Czech arms deal, he sarcastically snapped: "What right?"

SCOTT AIR BASE PILOT KILLED IN CRASH OF JET

Plane's Engine Apparently Failed as He Was Approaching Runway.

Second Lt. Ronald Fay Ferguson of the Eighty-sixth Fighter-Interceptor Squadron of Scott Air Force Base was killed yesterday afternoon when his F-86 Thunderjet crashed and burned near the air base.

The 23-year-old jet fighter pilot, who entered service from Hollis, Me., was approaching the north-south runway when his plane pancaked into a cornfield at the north boundary of the field. It burst into flames but firemen from the base succeeded in pulling the body from the wreckage.

Authorities at Scott Base said Lt. Ferguson was on a local training mission and had just completed a "touch and go" practice landing a few minutes earlier. In this type of landing, the wheels touch the landing strip but the pilot takes off again without making a full stop. The plane appeared to be functioning normally at that time, they said.

Apparent cause of the crash was a flame-out or engine failure. The plane was a total loss.

Lt. Ferguson was a member of the squadron assigned to the defense of the St. Louis area from possible aerial attack. He was commissioned in May 1954. He had come to Scott Base last Sept. 9 from Perrin Air Force Base, Tex.

He was the son of Mrs. L. T. Toner of Marathon, Fla.

4 AMERICAN JETS DRIVEN OFF, SAYS COMMUNIST CHINA

TOKYO (Sunday) Oct. 2 (UP)—Communist China said today four United States jet fighters intruded over the Tsingtao area Sept. 24 and were driven off by Red interceptors and anti-aircraft fire.

The Peiping radio said the four planes were F-86 jets. It said they headed for the Tsingtao area from Osan, South Korea.

The broadcast made no claims of damage inflicted on the United States jets. It said they "intruded over Tsingtao and Hsiehchia island, then turned and flew over Tsangkow area north northwest of Tsingtao city." It said they then split into two groups.

According to the radio, patrol planes of the "Chinese peoples liberation army" intercepted the four jets and they were fired on by anti-aircraft batteries.

"The raiders then flew off in a southeasterly direction from Tsingtao," the broadcast said.

STOCK SLUMP A 'CURIOUS TRIBUTE' TO EISENHOWER

LONDON, Oct. 1 (AP)—The News Chronicle said today the stock market reaction to President Eisenhower's illness was a "curious tribute" to one man's greatness.

"If Marshal Bulganin, Sir Anthony Eden, Dr. Adenauer or even Chou En-lai were to fall collectively or individually ill next week, it is probable that the markets would take it with comparative calm," the liberal newspaper commented in an editorial.

"Here is the new yardstick of contemporary greatness, when one heart's palpitations can set the world's money ticker tapes chattering as confidence declines.

"It is not simply that what is bad for Eisenhower is bad for General Motors, or for the Republican party. It cannot be explained away by Wall Street's influence on other markets. This curious tribute reflects apprehensions far outside the world of business."

YUGOSLAVIA, U.S. REACH ACCORD ON DIFFERENCES

Communique Issued After Five Days of Talks Between Murphy and Tito.

BELGRADE, Oct. 1 (AP)—Yugoslavia and the United States announced tonight they have settled their "differences of opinion and reached a clearer understanding of their objectives."

The announcement was made in a joint communique issued after five days of talks between United States Deputy Under Secretary of State Robert Murphy and President Josip (Tito) Broz and his top aids. The communique said:

"The visit of Deputy Under Secretary Robert Murphy to Belgrade has provided an opportunity for frank and fruitful discussion of a wide range of problems of mutual interest to Yugoslavia and the United States.

Clearer Understanding.

"As a result, differences of opinion have been settled and a clearer understanding of objectives has been reached. This has been achieved in a very cordial atmosphere and should establish a solid basis for further co-operation between the two countries."

The communique said the talks "gave further evidence of the confidence and mutual respect which has been established between the two countries in recent years."

Murphy had come here to discuss American-Yugoslav relations in the light of Yugoslavia's recent improvement of ties with the Soviet Union.

In ap ress conference tonight, Murphy said the United States-Yugoslav controversy over the inspection of American arms delivered to this country was caused by a misinterpretation of the word inspection.

Murphy said a completely satisfactory formula had been found to settle the dispute.

"The United States in no sense will leave the impression that it wishes to dominate the Yougoslav armed forces," he said.

Observation of Arms.

He explained that "observation of arms" delivered by the United States was the proper term. Yugoslav circles had defined the word inspection as meaning the right of complete control and refused to permit a United States military mission to take up such a job.

Answering a question regarding Yugoslavia's request for an American license to build jet fighters, Murphy said:

"We would be delighted to see Yugoslavia manufacture jet planes." But, he added, the financing of the project is a complicated question in which Yugoslavia is expected to make proposals.

He said that Yugoslavia asked for American wheat shipments, but would not disclose the amount requested. He announced that negotiations on details of mutual economic problems and on United States aid to Yugoslavia will continue here at a lower level.

Murphy announced several Yugoslav scientists will visit the United States to study the industrial use of atomic energy.

Asked if Yugoslavia gave assurances that it will not export strategic war materials, Murphy said it informed the United States of the amount of lead it is to export to the Soviet Union under a new trade agreement. He added:

"I should doubt that this question will create difficulties."

Murphy told reporters that Tito looked very well and that he did not discover any signs of illness. The news agency Tanjug announced today the President is suffering from rheumatism and will undergo treatment at his Brioni island retreat.

TRADING COMPANY OFFICIAL GOING TO SOUTH AMERICA

Francis Doll Jr., vice president of St. Louis Trading Co., has been selected to represent the United States on a six-week trade mission to South America, Assistant Secretary of Commerce H. C. McClellan announced yesterday.

He will leave Oct. 18 for Washington for discussions and orientation. A graduate of the Washington University School of Foreign Service, Doll will work with United States Trade Information Centers, diplomatic officials and American firms exhibiting at the Pan American Fair in Bogota, Colombia.

Purpose of the trade mission is to further friendly relations between participating governments through personal discussions and consultations on an informal basis with foreign officials and private business men. Doll lives at 8110 Roxburgh drive, Clayton.

TUBERCULIN TESTS RESULT IN 28 POSITIVE REACTIONS

Tuberculin patch tests given 2400 school children in the R-9 School District in St. Louis county by the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis in co-operation with the Academy of General Practice and school authorities resulted in positive reactions in 28 children, it was reported yesterday.

Dr. Walter C. Gray, patch testing chairman of the academy, said the patch test is only a screening process. He emphasized that a positive reaction does not mean a person has tuberculosis, but indicates exposure to someone who has the disease.

Free chest X-rays will be given positive reactors and their contacts Oct. 10 by the mobile X-ray unit of the Tuberculosis and Health Society.

LOBSTER SMACK MORE FUN THAN GIANT FORRESTAL

FALMOUTH, Me., Oct. 1 (UP)—Maine folks may not build 'em as big—but they have just as much fun.

While Navy brass was flocking to Portsmouth, Va., today for commissioning of the supercarrier Forrestal, Falmouth residents flocked to see Art Blake's new home-built lobster smack.

It's engine purred on dry land as Blake got ready to launch the 34-foot boat in the Presumpscott river Monday or Tuesday. He said he still hadn't picked out a name.

"We'll christen her with tobacco juice and she's already decked out with gasoline station flags," the 67-year-old Blake said.

"Oh, yes, she's sure some comparison with that Forrestal, but to me she's just as much fun and twice as useful."

The bill for the Forrestal came to almost $200,000,000, but Blake said he "got by with about $100 cash."

"Biggest expense was nails," he said.

New Classroom Use of TV To Be Tested Over Channel 9

Basic Lectures, Demonstrations in Four Courses to Be Televised for Public Schools.

A new classroom use of television will be tested in the St. Louis public schools this year, Superintendent of Instruction Philip J. Hickey said yesterday.

Basic lectures and demonstrations in four courses will be presented over KETC. Results will be checked against the conventional method of having teachers give the material in classrooms.

The experiment is being financed with a $94,000 grant from the Fund for the Advancement of Education.

Educational television now is used in the schools here and elsewhere primarily to supplement rather than replace classroom presentation, Hickey explained.

Direct Teaching.

"In this project," he said, "we are going to see if there are some curricular areas in which direct teaching, such as the basic lectures and demonstrations, can be given as well, or better, on television as by present methods."

There are several possible advantages in TV presentation, the superintendent said. The work can be given to all pupils by outstanding teachers. By combining several rooms during the televised instructions, some teachers can be freed for consultations with parents and other non-classroom duties.

"One of the crying needs in the elementary schools," he said, "is for teachers to have some time free from classroom work."

Subjects to be taught are spelling in the lower elementary grades, a ninth grade science course and two literature classes, one at the high school and the other at the elementary school level.

The spelling program will begin some time this semester and the other three classes will be presented in the second term. Details nave not been completed.

Drills and additional instruction, Hickey said, will continue to be given in classrooms by the regular classroom teachers.

When the four classes are all on the air, he said, they will take a total of about an hour of television time daily. This will be in addition to KETC's present day-time offerings for public, private and parochial schools in the St. Louis area.

Joint Venture.

Production of the programs is being undertaken jointly by the station and the school system.

Hickey, optimistic about the future of educational television, said he believes it will become a basic part of classroom instruction in the years ahead. He predicted that St. Louis, birthplace of audio-visual education, may some day be cited as one of the pioneer cities in the fundamental development of educational TV.

TEAR GAS BREAKS UP RIOT IN MASSACHUSETTS JAIL

BOSTON, Oct. 1 (AP) — Screaming, stone-throwing inmates of Suffolk County House of Correction battled more than 150 police and firemen for more than two hours tonight. Thirty guards, policemen and firemen were struck by stones but none was injured seriously.

About 250 prisoners, nearly all serving terms for minor offenses, started several fires in the jail yard, broke windows and furniture and for a time withstood all efforts to control them.

Police and firemen gradually herded the men from the yard into a cellblock by using streams of water. Once in the building, the inmates smashed nearly everything breakable and threw pieces at police and firemen.

Tear gas was fired into the cellblock and the men straggled out one by one. As they reached the doorway, they were grabbed by police and hustled into a nearby prison wing.

The rioters were not cowed by several shotgun volleys fired over their heads at the height of the uprising.

DELAY IN INQUIRY ON RELIGION LAID TO PRESSURES

Jewish Leader Dr. Israel Goldstein Protests Against Senators' Postponement.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP) —A backstage controversy over the wisdom of conducting public hearings on religious freedom is behind the indefinite postponement of a Senate subcommittee's plan to start such hearings next week.

This was disclosed today by a spokesman for the Senate subcommittee on Constitutional rights as Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the American Jewish Congress, protested against the postponement.

"American democracy is based on the assumption that the people can be trusted in a discussion of all public issues," Dr. Goldstein telegraphed the Senate group.

"It is unthinkable, therefore, that the committee should now reverse this course and yield to pressures from whatever source to suppress the open consideration of so fundamental a question as religious liberty."

Time to Study Replies.

Subcommittee Chairman Thomas C. Hennings (Dem.), Missouri, announced the postponement in a brief statement yesterday, saying it would give committee members more time to analyze replies to questionnaires the committee staff has distributed on religious freedom. More than 10,000 were sent out.

The announcement set no new date for the hearings, which were to have begun Monday.

Questioned in Hennings's absence today, the subcommittee spokesman said a dispute is going on over the wisdom of attempting to conduct open hearings on the subject.

Opposition to the hearings has not come from any single religious faith, he said, adding that Protestants, Catholics and Jews have made representations to the subcommittee on both sides of the question.

Objections have been made, he said, that the projected hearings would unnecessarily open up sores between religious faiths and denominations and arguments unrelated to the basic issue of religious freedom.

Others, however, have favored the hearings on the ground that they would help to clarify and improve understanding of religious issues that have given rise to controversy in the past.

No Decision on Canceling.

The spokesman said the subcommittee members had not yet had an opportunity to familiarize themselves thoroughly with the opposing views.

He emphasized that no decisions has been made to cancel the hearings, but said it was possible it might be determined that the subject should best be handled through analysis of the replies to the subcommittee's questionnaires rather than through public hearings.

The hearings on the freedom of religion clause of the First Amendment were to have opened the subcommittee's projected inquiry into whether the freedoms guaranteed by the Bill of Rights are being eroded.

Still tentatively set to start Oct. 17 are two weeks of hearings on the free speech and press guarantees of the First Amendment.

WRONG NUMBER MAKES WOMAN'S HOME A THEATER

LONDON, Oct. 1 (AP)—Mrs. Constance Cooper finds it's easier to pretend that her home is a movie theater than to try to explain it isn't.

The trouble began a year ago when the telephone directory listed a theater's number as WAN 0256 — which is Mrs. Cooper's number.

Mrs. Cooper appealed to Britain's state-owned telephone system. Officials were sorry, but nothing could be done for at least a year and a half. A new directory will be published then.

Calls continued to pour in.

"I've been summoned from my bed, from my bath, from my garden and my TV set," said Mrs. Cooper. "I've been called from my kitchen and meals have been ruined. Then I gave up."

Each week Mrs. Cooper looks up the titles of the films the theater will be showing, jots down the starting times and other pertinent information.

"I find it much easier to recite the information than to try to explain the situation," she sighed, "but it does get tiresome."

Last week she answered 200 wrong numbers.

$6939 IN CONTRIBUTIONS FOR PEREGRINE SOCIETY

Contributions of $6939 have been received so far in the 1955 campaign of the St. Louis Peregrine Society for $50,000 to supply medicines and other items to home cancer patients, it was announced yesterday.

NEW GRAND JURY OPENS COUNTY TERM

Judge Instructs It to Give Close Attention to Gambling Law Enforcement.

A new circuit court grand jury was impaneled in St. Louis county yesterday and was instructed to give close attention to enforcement of gambling laws.

Circuit Judge Raymond L. LaDriere, in his charge to the September-term jury, said:

"Situated as we are in a populous community adjacent to a large metropolitan area, there is grave danger that any lessening of vigilance in the strict enforcement of gambling laws may be followed, as is usual, by a wave of crimes of violence and corruption.

"For gambling is a cancer, which, unless quickly incised or exterminated, may weaken and ultimately destroy things that we highly prize."

Judge LaDriere directed the jury's attention to the various state laws relating to gambling violations.

Elmer W. Wagner, 750 Hawbrook avenue, Glendale, a sales represeniative for G. H. Walker & Co., was named foreman of the jury.

Other members are: Arthur F. Bangert, 903 St. Antoine street, Florissant, president of St. Louis County Bus Co.; Bernard Steinbach, 1141 South McKnight road, Richmond Heights, president of Missouri Flower and Feather Co.; John E. Schnarr, Manchester road, Glencoe, real estate dealer; Gordon W. Gerell, 121 Elm avenue, Glendale, electrical engineer.

Murray J. Getter, 45 Godwin lane, Ladue, manager of a life insurance company; Ivan E. Thompson, 940 Liggett drive, Crestwood, vice president, Engineering and Developing Co.; Oliver J. Kratz, 10001 Lakeside drive, Affton, real estate dealer.

Fred G. Zimmerer, 7805 Genesta avenue, Affton, pattern maker; Edward Hermsmeyer, 10087 Stimson drive, Riverview, general contractor; Leonard Langeneckert, 7132 Forest Hills drive, Northwoods, treasurer of Ely & Walker Co., and Edward O. Rosenkoetter, 2270 Redman avenue, Baden, a farmer.

NOISE OVER KIRKWOOD POSSIBLY A SONIC BOOM

A loud noise, which may have been a sonic boom, was heard by many residents in the Kirkwood and Clayton areas yesterday.

A spokesman for McDonnell Aircraft Corp. said a Voodoo jet fighter was on a test flight at the time and was traveling faster than the speed of sound.

A sonic boom is created when an airplane goes faster than sound. Sound travels at the rate of about 740 miles an hour at sea level.

SUES TO BREAK WILL OF TIMOTHY CRONIN

Miss Irene Tesreau Says Union Boss Promised to Marry Her.

Suit to break the will of Timothy R. Cronin, former boss of the AFL Service Car Drivers Union and head of Parkalot, Inc., was filed in circuit court yesterday by Miss Irene Tesreau, who said Cronin, a 50-year-old bachelor, promised to marry her and to leave her his estate.

An inventory filed following Cronin's death last Jan. 31, placed a value of $99,054 on the estate which included three pieces of real estate listed only at $1 each.

Miss Tesreau, a waitress employed at David Creely's Four-Fifteen Restaurant, 415 Chestnut street, asserted in her petition that on Nov. 15, 1953, Cronin asked her to marry him. She consented to become his wife, the suit stated, and Cronin promised to leave her his property.

She subsequently performed household duties and nursing services for Cronin, and expected to marry him, she said. She asks judgment for $96,272.

The suit is directed against Mrs. Catherine B. O'Connell, 6008 Guilford place, sister of Cronin and executriv of the estate, and nephews and nieces who also are beneficiaries, and Mercantile Trust Co., co-executor.

Cronin, who lived at 6201 Itaska street, died of internal hemorrhages, following an illness of several months. He maintained offices at Parkalot, Inc., a large filling station at 815 North First street.

Great Features back up Chevrolet Performance: Anti-Dive Braking—Ball-Race Steering—Outrigger Rear Springs—Body by Fisher—12-Volt Electrical System—Nine Engine-Drive Choices in all models—and, finally, the great scientific, technical and engineering resources of General Motors.

The safer car wins . . . and Chevrolet's the winning car

Every checkered flag signals a Chevrolet victory in official 1955 stock car competition—not only against its own field but against many American and foreign high-priced cars, too!

On the stock car tracks, this go-getting Chevrolet is making the high-priced jobs turn green with envy . . . and making the other low-priced cars wish they'd stayed home in the garage!

Let's translate this into your kind of driving.

You've got to have faster acceleration to win on the tracks. And that means safer passing on the highways.

You've got to have better springing and suspension to nail you to the turns. Again, safer and happier motoring for you.

You've got to have big brakes that act but fast and smooth . . . and easy, accurate steering. More things that make your driving more secure and more enjoyable.

But it's more fun to try these things out than just to talk about them. So come in and let's take a ride.

AIR FORCE GROUNDS ALL C-47 TRANSPORTS

Cleaning Compound Used in Some Could Clog Fuel Lines.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP) —The Air Force has grounded all C-47s, work horses of the transport fleet since World War II, because of the possible use of a cleaning and preservative compound in a few fuel tanks. The compound could clog fuel lines under certain conditions, the Air Force said yesterday.

The Air Force reported it was unable to make an immediate estimate of the total number of these aircraft in service at home and abroad. A spokesman estimated that the number runs into the thousands.

At the Pentagon the Air Force said that the decision to ground the two-engine transport planes was made after a routine inspection by the Air Materiel Command and that the action takn was prcautionary.

A spokesman said that all Air Force commands still using this type have been ordered to inspect the fuel tanks to determine whether the cleaning compound has been used. The spokesman explained that if the compound, whose exact description was not made public, has been used in any tank it can be detected promptly and easily.

Base commanders were authorized to free their C-47s for use as soon as they check their planes for the use of the compound.

TEACHER BITTEN TWICE IN SNAKE HANDLING LESSON

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz., Oct. 1 (AP)—Cecil McGirr, high school biology teacher, suffered two bites on the left index finger yesterday while teaching his class to handle a rattlesnake.

"I don't know about my students, but I learned a good lesson," he said. "When you are handling a poisonous reptile, always keep your attention on the loaded end. "I just got careless."

McGirr's left arm was blackened and swollen from hand to shoulder. His condition was given as satisfactory. He is 45 years old.

U.S. SAYS SALK SHOTS CUT POLIO RATE SHARPLY

Asserts Incidence in Vaccinated Was 25 to 50 Pct. Under That in Non-Vaccinated.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (UP) —Health and Welfare Secretary Marion B. Folsom announced today that Salk vaccine proved so effective this year that vaccinated children have suffered "25 to 50 per cent" less polio than the non-vaccinated.

It was the Government's first statement on the way the vaccine has performed in the inoculation of 7,000,000 children. Its optimistic preliminary conclusion: "Very encouraging."

Folsom noted that many of the youngsters received only one of the three shots needed for full protection. It is also known that many were exposed to polio before they were injected.

In spite of this, Folsom said preliminary studies show that the polio rate is running "roughly 25 to 50 per cent below the rate among nonvaccinated children in the same age groups."

Prediction on Supply.

Folsom also predicted there will be enough Salk vaccine to take care of all children from 5 through 9 before the end of the year. Enough already has been released, he said, to provide two injections for three-fourths of the 15,903,000 children in the top-priority 5-through-9 group.

Although he could not be positive, he said "present indications" are that enough vaccine will be released in the next two months to supply two shots to all the remaining youngsters.

He said October probably will be "the biggest month" for vaccinations since the inoculation program got underway last April. With the reopening of schools, he said State Health Departments all over the country have resumed vaccination programs.

Folsom, who took over the Health, Education and Welfare Department only recently, announced that the Government's vaccine advisory committee will meet soon to determine what age group should be given top priority on vaccine when the 5-through-9 youngsters have been taken care of. This is expected to include children younger than 5.

Boost in Production.

Folsom said vaccine production has increased substantially since the Government overhauled its safety standards May 26. It rose from 3,000,000 doses released in July, to nearly 6,000,000 released in September. Less than 9,000,000 doses are needed to take care of the 5-9 group.

"I have been advised," Folsom said, "that vaccine production and clearnace for the next few months can be expected to continue at about the present rate. The first objective is to give two injections to all children in the 5-9 group. I am told it is possible that this objective can be met by the end of the year."

DR. SALK PLANS FURTHER TESTS

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 1 (AP)—Dr. Jonas E. Salk, discoverer of the polio vaccine, said today he plans to test a number of polio vaccine preparations that appear from laboratory tests to be somewhat more potent than those he worked with heretofore.

"It is not a new vaccine," emphasized the 49-year-old Pittsburgh bacteriologist. "Our prime purpose is to make the vaccine 100 per cent effective. To reach that goal it will be necessary to conduct a series of experiments similar to the studies on dosage."

Dr. Salk said the tests will be made within the next few weeks in certain selected Pittsburgh schools on children enrolled in kindergarten or the first three grades. He made the disclosure in an article published by the Allegheny County Medical Society.

"We are still trying to work out the most effective way to use the vaccine," said Dr. Salk. "We want to obtain information on antibody status in all children who were inoculated one or more times."

Dr. Salk said for the tests blood will be drawn from the finger tips of the youngsters to determine the presence or absence of antibody for each type of (polio strain).

"Some persons have antibody, others do not," said Dr. Salk. "The object of these studies will help us evaluate the composition and levels of potency that will produce the highest proportion of individuals with antibody after a one, or two, dose course of primary immunization."

Dr. Salk said children who possess no demonstrable antibody for any of the three types will receive the vaccines under tests providing they have parental consent. This also was required in the original tests.

All children who require an inoculation because the finger blood tests indicate the absence of antibody to one or more types, said Dr. Salk, will be inoculated without further blood tests except for another finger blood test after the necessary number of inoculations are giving to produce antibody to all three types.

Airline Cuts Military Fares.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (AP)—Pan American World Airways announced today it will cut its fares for military personnel by 40 per cent for travel between the United States and Europe, beginnig Nov. 1.

OUTLOOK DRAB FOR OFFICERS AS UNIFORMS CHANGE

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

PARIS, Oct. 1 — American army officers serving in Europe are complaining about a sudden order from Washington requiring them to discard their olive drab uniforms. The order was issued by Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff and wartime commander of the 101st Airborne Division, who is noted as a stickler for neatness.

The "O.D. shade 33" uniform which he has now barred for everybody not actually serving with troops is the battle-dress type made famous by Gen. Eisenhower. Under Taylor's order it will be supplanted by "pinks and greens," a uniform with a dark green, conventional jacket and light khaki trousers. On Oct. 1, 1957 the "pinks and greens" will give way to the "greens," a conventional uniform made entirely of dark greenish-khaki cloth, for on-duty wear.

Off-duty, all officers will be required to wear "Army Blues."

Gen. Taylor defends his smarten-'em-up policy on the ground that the Air Force and the Navy look a lot snappier than the Army.

SOLDIER FLEES STOCKADE, NEARLY ENDS UP TARGET

FORT KNOX, Ky., Oct. 1 (AP)—The stockade guards were far behind, so the young soldier stopped his running. He could walk his way to freedom now.

He might even sit and rest a spell, he thought—just as the first roar of heavy gunfire shook the earth under his tired feet.

Then he saw the tanks closing in, and the billowing smoke screens being laid down. Grenades burst around him, and the hills echoed the blasts of deafening rifle fire.

He was startled to think, he confided after yesterday's nerve-wracking experience, that the Army would go to this extreme. How could it place so much importance on just one G.I. who had tired of stockade life and had broken away from a clean-up detail?

What he didn't know was that the 144th Ordnance Company and a unit of the Third Armored Division were engaged in war practice; that they were using blank ammunition. In his dash, he had run to the middle of a maneuver area.

Military authorities withheld the soldier's name, but they were sure no place ever looked better to him later than the post stockade.

Not Going.

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UP)—An 82-year-old woman called police headquarters recently after she and her 88-year-old husband read about Civil Defense plans to evacuate the city if it is threatened by a hydrogen bomb attack. "I just called to tell you we're not going," she said and hung up.

RED CHINA, JAPS, SEOUL PARADE MILITARY MIGHT

Anniversaries Marked—Peiping Defense Chief Talks of Freeing Formosa.

TOKYO, Sunday, Oct. 2 (AP)—Red China, Japan and South Korea paraded their military strength yesterday in separate anniversary celebrations in the uneasy Far East.

Red tanks, artillery, long-range guns and batteries of rocket launchers lumbered across Peiping's ancient Imperial Palace square. Jet bombers and fighters barreled across the sky.

It was National day—sixth anniversary of the day the Peiping regime proclaimed its rule for all China.

Mao Tse-tung, ruler of China's 600,000,000, and other Red leaders watched from the square's tower wall as units of the great military power they have built marched past.

Artillery Pieces.

"Salvos of 100 artillery pieces ripped through the air," said a Peiping broadcast.

"To liberate Taiwan (Formosa) is the unshakable will of the Chinese people," declared Marshal Peng Teh-huai, defense minister, in the main address of the day.

The day did not go unnoticed on Formosa, where the Nationalist government took refuge after its military debacle of 1949. Newspapers acidly predicted the eventual downfall of the Red regime.

Units of Japan's reborn army, trim but tiny, rolled through Tokyo's streets past lines of silent Japanese for the first time since the bitter defeat of Japan.

It was the first anniversary of the official creation of Japan's growing self-defense force. Like the South Korean army, it is largely equipped by the United States.

The parade of truckloads of soldiers, big guns and tanks followed a review on downtown Meiji Plaza by Prime Minister Hatoyama. Emperor Hirohito, who always reviewed his troops on a snow-white horse in Japan's days of empire, was not present.

Tight ranks of olive drab-clad soldiers, white gloves pumping, strode past the reviewing stand in the plaza not far from the old imperial parade ground that once rang to the tramp of the imperial army.

Seventh Birthday.

South Korea celebrated the seventh birthday of its air force by putting on review the 15 Sabre jets given it by the United States.

Great crowds lined the fields and the Han river around Seoul as the Sabres dived through the sound barrier and sent their supersonic booms echoing across the rolling hills.

"This great day is possible only because of the immeasurable assistance of the United States," said Lt. Gen. Kim Chung Yul, air force commander, in the day's main address.

Next Tuesday at Muktong, in the eastern suburbs of Seoul, South Korea will graduate the first 156 cadets from its "West Point." The military academy was founded four years ago at United States suggestions.

CAPT. TOWNSEND IN DUTCH WITH DUTCH OFFICIALS

BRUGES, Belgium, Oct. 1 (UP)—Royal Air Force Group Capt. Peter Townsend is in Dutch with Netherlands frontier officials for crossing the border into Holland while hunting in Belgium with a party of friends, it was disclosed today.

Townsend and his friends were rounded up by Dutch officials who found the air attache in Brussels had neither a Dutch gun permit nor a Dutch hunting license. They confiscated his shotgun and released the group after questioning them.

Belgian painter Medare Tytgat, a member of the hunting party, said the incident occurred Sept. 20. He said Townsend now faces a small fine.

SISTER THERESA TAKES POST AS HOSPITAL ADMINISTRATOR

Sister Theresa, who received a master's degree in hospital administration from St. Louis University this year, has assumed the duties of administrator of Incarnate Word Hospital, 1640 South Grand boulevard, it was announced yesterday.

She succeeds Sister Mary Columban, who was transferred to San Antonio, Tex. The new administrator had served previously on the staff at Mercy Hospital, Oklahoma City.

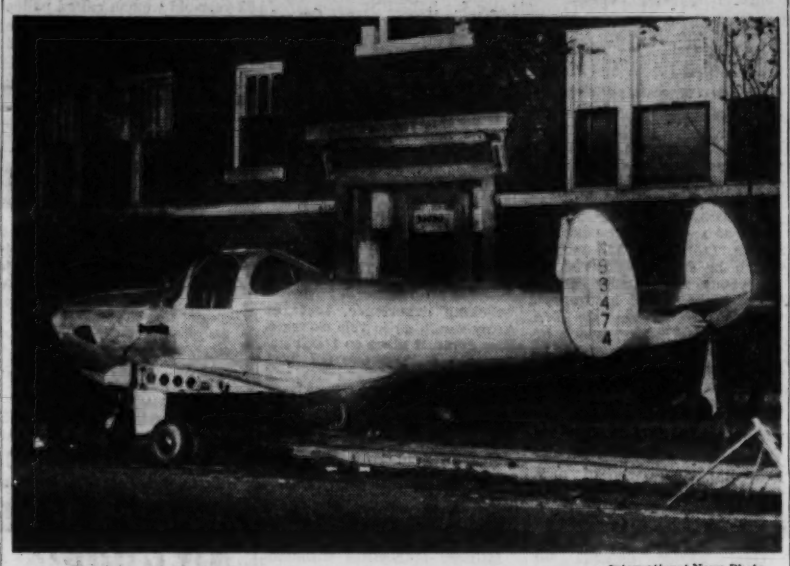

The hospital here, operated by the Sisters of Charity of the Incarnate Word, has 120 beds.

RED CROSS TO CONDUCT SOCIAL WELFARE COURSE

A special six-month training project to develop a corps of volunteer social welfare aids to do personal contact work for the St. Louis Chapter, American Red Cross, was announced yesterday.

The training program will be under direction of Miss Emma Puschner, who retired from the Red Cross staff last December, but is returning to conduct the training project. Persons wishing to serve as social welfare aids were asked to telephone, or visit, the chapter's headquarters at 3414 Lindell boulevard.

Curb Service for Plane

—International News Photo.

Drivers passing the residence of James A. Sutera, on Chicago's north side, have been puzzling about wingless aircraft parked at the curb. Sutera, the owner, a former lieutenant in the Army Air Corps, had a simple explanation. He brought the plane home to overhaul in his spare time.

ACTOR JAMES DEAN IS KILLED IN CRASH

Movie Star's Sports Car in Collision—Funeral to Be in Indiana.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 1 (AP)—James Dean, the young actor who could well become Hollywood's first posthumous Academy Award winner, will be buried back home home in Indiana.

From Paso Robles, Calif., near where the 24-year-old star was killed last night in his 150-mile-an-hour German sports car, his father announced funeral services would be next Saturday in Fairmount, Ind. Burial will be in Grant's Memorial Park in nearby Marion, Dean's birthplace.

Fairmount is the town where Dean was a farm boy and starred in basketball, track and debating at high school. In 1949, he won first place in the National Forensic League contest.

Here at Warner Brothers, the studio where Dean zoomed to stardom in "East of Eden," everybody was stunned, especially on the set of "Giant," his last movie. Dean finished his scenes only the day before his death.

Four hours after the rest of the company had reported for work today, not a camera had turned. Elizabeth Taylor, his co-star, took it the hardest. Make-up men were unable to get her ready for shooting because of tears.

Not since the screen debut of Marlon Brando had any actor made such a bow as had Dean in "East of Eden." Many critics considered it the male Oscar performance to beat.

Dean, once a motorcycle enthusiast, had just recently paid $7000 for the German Porsche Spyder. He was en route to Salinas for the road races there when killed in a collision.

Dean had burst on the local sports racing scene last spring at Palm Springs in what many thought was a publicity stunt. He amazed thousands by winning the first race he entered.

His studio forbade him to enter any races while working in "Giant." He had intended to drive his station wagon north but changed his mind at the last minute and took the racer.

As he whizzed on State Highway 41, a 1950 Ford turned left off U.S. Highway 466. There was an almost head-on collision. Suffering from multiple arm fractures, internal injuries and a broken neck, Dean died before reaching a hospital.

His companion and mechanic, Rolph Wuetherich, suffered a broken jaw and leg.

Donald Turnupseed of Tulare, driver of the Ford, suffered only minor bruises.

CITY ISSUED 722 BUILDING PERMITS IN SEPTEMBER

A total of 722 building permits authorizing construction estimated to total $2,386,293 were issued last month by the Building Commissioner's office, William Dale, statistician, reported yesterday. Eighty-five new dwelling units weer authorized and 42 such units wrecked, resulting in a net increase of 43 units.

In September 1954 construction totaled $11,883,214, but this included the $6,500,000 Darst Apartments housing project containing 660 dwelling units and erection of a $1,250,000 public school at 1927 Cass avenue. During the first nine months of this year, construction totaled $37,500,000 as compared with $53,500,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Among building permits issued yesterday was one for erection of "the new Frontenac Apartment Building at the southeast corner of Kingshighway and West Pine boulevard at an estimated cost of $3,000,000, plus a $400,00 garage. The building will contain 173 units, including four penthouse apartments.

ITALY'S OLDEST GENERAL IS 100, HAS TOAST OF WINE

BRESCIA, Italy, Oct. 1 (AP)—Italy's oldest living general, Luigi Mazzoldi, marked his 100th birthday today with a toast in wine.

"I made it without even noticing," said the veteran of grim, World War I battles in the Alps.

Mazzoldi was commander of the Fifth Alpine Regiment in the first World War.

EDEN OFF TO SEE QUEEN; TALK ON PRINCESS HINTED

ABERDEEN, Scotland, Oct. 1 (UP) — Prime Minister Eden flew to Scotland today to see Queen Elizabeth and possibly discuss the romantic life of her sister, Princess Margaret.

Eden's weekend visit to Balmoral Castle was officially described as "the normal visit the Prime Minister makes at this time of year." Edinburgh's influential newspaper, The Scotsman, said, however, that the official reason was being "viewed with increasing skepticism."

The general, though unconfirmed, belief was that some sort of statement soon would be issued to clear the air of gossip concerning the Princess and Royal Air Force Group Capt. Peter Townsend.

Margaret also was at Balmoral. She turned 25 Aug. 21 and no longer needs the Queen's consent to marry.

Townsend, 40-year-old divorced father of two children, is in Italy, preparing to ride in a gentleman jockeys' race tomorrow at Merano. His tour of duty as air attache in the British Embassy at Brussels is due to end shortly.

723 STATE TRAFFIC DEATHS THIS YEAR, 37 ABOVE 1954

A total of 102 Missourians died in traffic accidents in September, bringing the number of traffic fatalities for the first nine months this year to 723, the Missouri State Highway Patrol announced yesterday. This year's traffic death toll to date is 37 more than at this time last year and 30 more than for the first nine months in 1953.

Col. Hugh H. Waggoner, superintendent of the patrol, said at the present rate, more than 1025 persons in the state will die in traffic accidents this year. He said at the end of the first three months, the state wide traffic toll was 29 less than for the same period last year. From April 1 to Sept. 30, he stated that 66 more persons were killed than in the corresponding six month in 1954.

"Speed is the killer," Col. Waggoner said. "Drivers have failed miserably to realize the deadliness of excessive speed."

300 VOLUNTEER RESERVISTS BEGIN TRAINING TOMORROW

Three hundred volunteer reservists and 73 National Guardsmen will be received at Fort Leonard Wood tomorrow to begin training under the new Reserve Forces Act.

The reservists, all under 18½ years of age, will get six months' active duty training in combat and engneeir subjects. They then return to the reserve units which enlisted them to complete the remainder of their eight-year military obligation. Twenty-five of the young soldiers will report to the 102nd Reserve Infantry Division here.

National Guardsmen will get eight weeks' basic training and return to their units. A provisional training regiment has been formed to handle the trainees.

YOUTH SAYS HE SMOTHERED BABY GIRL LEFT IN HIS CARE

DETROIT, Oct. 1 (AP)—An 18-year-old boy told police tonight he smothered a baby left in his care while his sister was out on a drinking party with her ex-convict boy friend.

Police said the youth, David Sumpter, was being held for questioning in the death of Shirley Ward, 17 months old.

Phipps said Sumpter told him he held his hands over the baby's mouth when she wouldn't quit crying.

The baby was the daughter of Mrs. Goldie Ward, who is convalescing in a hospital following the birth of a second child.

Police said Shirley had been left in the care of Mrs. Ann Sumpter Kelp, 27, a sister of the boy being held.

CONDOLES MAN WITH 12 CHILDREN; HE MARRIES HER

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Oct. 1 (AP)—A letter of sympathy from Mary M. McIssac to widower Frank Hudak has culminated in their marriage and a new home for 10 of Hudak's children who had been living in an orphanage.

Hudak's first wife, Sue, died May 20, 1954, leaving him to care for their 12 children. Hudak, a $56-a-week laborer said he "couldn't be a mother, father and provider" for his brood and tearfully placed 10 of them in an orphanage. His youngest, now a year and a half old, went to live with his first wife's sister in Brooklyn. The eldest, 17, no longer lives at home.

When Miss McIssac, a Boston housekeeper read of the 44-year-old widower's futile efforts to keep his family together, she wrote him. He answered and regular correspondence started.

In July, Miss McIssac visited Hudak's home, and the orphanage where the children lived. Said Hudak yesterday, "She fell in love with the children and I fell in love with her, just as the children did."

They were married Sept. 11.

M'DONNELL ENGINEER KILLED IN AIR CRASH

Plane Being Ferried by Clarence McGarvey Falls in Pennsylvania.

Clarence W. McGarvey, an engineer employed by McDonnell Aircraft Corp., was killed yesterday when a new small plane he was ferrying across the country crashed into a reservoir excavation near Ebensburg, Pa.

The plane burst into flames immediately. McGarvey was pulled from the wreckage by a bulldozer operator. He died a few minutes later.

Pennsylvania state police said McGarvey took off from the Piper Cub plane plant at Lock Haven, Pa., an hour earlier. Three other new planes which were to be delivered to the operator of a flying service at Hobbs, N.M., took off at the same time.

Cause of the accident was not immediately determined but witnesses reported McGarvey apparently tried an emergency landing after circling the area in fog.

The plane, which was scheduled to make its first stop on the cross-country trip at Columbus, O., crashed into the excavation in an open field near U.S. Highway 422, near Ebensburg, about 80 miles from Lock Haven.

McGarvey, 49 years old, was employed in the helicopter propulsion division of the McDonnell firm. He lived at 1825 North Fourth street, St. Charles, with his wife, Rowena, and two daughters, Mrs. Dolores Prinster, and Theresa, 3 years old.

MOLOTOV DEPARTS WITH WISHES FOR PRESIDENT, PEACE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (AP)—Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov departed by plane for Moscow tonight after expressing hope for the consolidating of universal peace" and hearty wishes for President Eisenhower's recovery.

A group of Soviet and satellite officials bid farewell to the veteran diplomat at New York's Idlewild airport. In a written statement, read by him in Russian and then translated by an aid, Molotov said:

"On leaving New York, first of all I want to thank the people and the mayor for the hospitality shown me.

"This time the United Nations are working in an atmosphere of a certain relaxation of international tensions. This is a reflection of the possible results of such developments as the conference of the four heads-of-government at Geneva.

"Although there are differences, still it is possible to note that members of the General Assembly show a desire to achieve further progress in the solution of unsettled issues, in the interest of development of international co-operation and the consolidating of universal peace.

"I take this opportunity to send my best wishes to the American people. I would also like to express my hearty wishes for the quickest recovery for President Eisenhower."

Indian Military Training Plan.

NEW DELHI, Oct. 1 (AP)—Prime Minister Nehru's government asked Parliament today to enact legislation to enable 100,000 Indians to receive 30 days' military training annually with a view to developing "a sense of discipline, security and self reliance."

SLACK TO BE CALLED AGAIN IN TAX INQUIRY

Grand Jury to Hear Him in Resuming Hearings on Tax Scandals.

Ellis Slack, former head of the Justice Department's tax division, will be called as a witness here Oct. 11 when the United States grand jury resumes its investigation of tax scandals in the Truman Administration.

Slack appeared several times last May before the same grand jury, which adjourned June 29 for its summer recess after looking into the whitewashing of James P. Finnegan's activities as Collector of Internal Revenue.

Slack was criticized by United States District Judge George H. Moore and Senator John J. Williams (Rep.) of Delaware for his part in the investigation of Finnegan, who received a two-year prison sentence for misconduct in office.

Slack has placed blame for delay in the investigation of Finnegan on George J. Schoeneman, Commissioner of Internal Revenue in the Truman Administration, or Schoeneman's superiors in the Treasury Department. Slack contended he made a full report to Schoeneman on the St. Louis situation and urged immediate action.

Wyllys Newcomb of New York, head of a Justice Department team conducting the tax scandal investigation, is expected in St. Louis Oct. 10. Previous witnesses have included former United States Attorney General J. Howard McGrath and other officials of the last Democratic Administration.

CITES APATHY, WARNS OF CIVIL DEFENSE DRAFT

BOSTON, Oct. 1 (AP) — A draft of the nation's youth may be necessary to strengthen civil defense because of "public apathy," Federal Civil Defense Administrator Val Peterson said last night.

Peterson told the fourth annual conference of the Civil Defense Council that "public apathy" to an enemy attack upon the United States is widespread" and that the country can no longer rely on the support of civilian volunteers.

"If the public does not present us with a solid cadre of volunteers, then we have no other alternative than to draft the young manhood of our country into civilian defense ranks," Peterson said.

The civil defense administrator pointed out that civilian defense drafts are now in effect in the Scandinavian countries and "unless our citizens realize we are now in the nuclear age, such steps will soon be necessary in the United States."

"Patriotism," Peterson said, "motivates most people now in CD posts, but apparently there are not enough patriots and a draft soon will be necessary to swell our ranks to carry out very important tasks."

WASHINGTON HOSTESS CALLS COCKTAIL PARTIES MISNOMER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (UP)—Washington hostess Gwen Cafritz said last night it is a "misnomer and unfair" to call the capital's frequent and famous cocktail parties by that name.

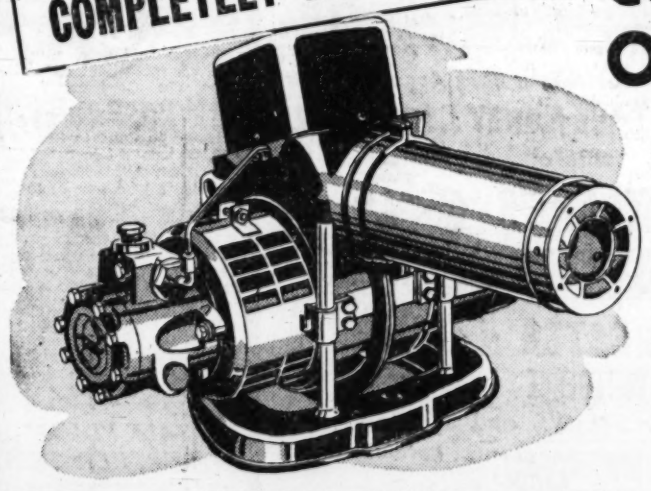

Mrs. Cafritz, who said she attends "about three a day," said the parties are "more like French salons" where one meets and talks to prominent people. "Refreshments are purely incidental," she said.

U.S. GIVES UP SUIT TO DEPORT HARRY BRIDGES

Justice Department Drops 10-Year Effort to Send Labor Leader to Australia.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1 (AP)—The United States Government, which failed to prove that Harry Bridges was ever a Communist, has given up its 10-year effort to deport the labor leader.

Lynn Gillard, assistant United States attorney, said yesterday that the Justice Department, at Washington had told him not to appeal a United States district court decision that favored Bridges.

The Government had charged that Bridges, an Australian, obtained citizenship fraudulently when he swore in 1945 that he was not and had never been a Communist party member.

Judge Louis Goodman said at the end of last summer's trial that "my conclusion is that the Government has failed to prove the allegations of its complaint as to respondent's alleged membership in the Communist party by clear and convincing evidence."

Bridges is president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

Bridges Says He and Union Feel Good About Decision.

HONOLULU, Oct. 1 (AP)—Harry Bridges today hailed the Government decision to drop its 10-year effort to deport him.

The West Coast longshoremen's leader, here for contract negotiations between his union and Hawaii's sugar industry, told a reporter it "feels good" not to have the deportation issue hanging over him.

"The union feels good about it and thinks it's about time," the president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union added.

F.D.R.'S DOCTOR GIVES U.S. ADVICE ON EISENHOWER

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 1 (INS)—The personal physician to the late Franklin D. Roosevelt said today America should "pray and keep its mouth shut" about President Eisenhower for the next 12 days.

The physician, V. Adm. Ross T. McIntire, said in Portland that the critical period after Mr. Eisenhower's heart attack will continue 12 more days.

He criticized what he called "political talk" at a time when he said the country should pray for the President's recovery.

At the same time McIntire said Mr. Eisenhower should make a good recovery. The retired admiral said: "He's in fine physical condition and should get safely past the early period of the attack and be able to serve out his term."

McIntire, in Portland for a medical meeting, denied concealing the illness of the late President Roosevelt and said the four-term President had only recurring attacks of virus infections in the spring before his death.

SENATOR GREEN 88 TODAY, SENATOR HAYDEN IS 78

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (UP)—Two of the Senate's oldest members celebrate birthday anniversaries tomorrow.

Senator Carl Hayden (Dem.), Arizona, chairman of the powerful Senate Appropriations Committee, celebrates his seventy-eighth birthday anniversary. Hayden, who has served in Congress ever since Arizona was admitted as a state in 1912, has been in Congress longer than any present member.

Senator Theodore Francis Green (Dem.), Rhode Island, marks his eighty-eighth birthday anniversary. Green is the oldest member of either the House or Senate, and next June will become the oldest person ever to serve in Congress.

Hayden will be at his home town of Phoenix. There will be no big celebration. Hayden long ago put out orders to his wife and staff that his birthday is "just another day."

Green, one of the most traveled members of the Foreign Relations Committee, will celebrate his birthday in Bangkok, Thailand. He is on a six-week, round-the-world inspection trip.

HURRICANE JANET DIES OUT, BUT CAUSES 17 NEW DEATHS

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 1 (AP)—Hurricane Janet has blown itself out in the Sierra Madre mountains but the storm indirectly caused 17 more deaths today.

Heavy rains loosed a landslide that carried 12 persons to their death in a ravine at San Rafael near Mexico City. A relief plane crashed on Yucatan peninsula, killing five others, including Diario de Yucatan press photographer.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 1 (UP)—Hurricane hunter squadron VW4 officially gave up hope today for nine fellow crewmen and two passengers who vanished aboard a plane scouting Hurricane Janet last Monday in the Caribbean sea.

A.D.A. Head Criticizes Doctor Of President for 1956 Remarks

Asserts Heart Specialist's Statement Indicates Pressure Will Be Put on Eisenhower to Run.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (AP)—Joseph L. Rauh Jr., chairman of the Americans for Democratic Action, accused one of President Eisenhower's doctors today of a "huckster performance."

Rauh said a statement by Dr. Paul Dudley White, Boston heart specialist who examined the President, indicated pressure will be exerted to force the President to run for re-election.

Dr. White said yesterday on a television show that if he were in Mr. Eisenhower's shoes he wouldn's want to run for a second term. Later, he said the remark probably had been interpreted as meaning he would give such advice to the President.

"Far from it," White said. "If the President has a good recovery, as he seemes to be on the way to establishing, and if he desires to continue his present career—which would be, of course, to the great benefit of this country and the world at large—I would have no objections whatsoever to his running again. But that remains still for the future to decide."

Rauh told a meeting of the New York A.D.A. chapter "that little huckster performance when the doctor changes his statement is sufficient to show there will be pressures" on Mr. Eisenhower to run again.

Rauh said it must be assumed that Mr. Eisenhower will not be a candidate again despite any pressures.

"No man, particularly one who has served his country with such outstanding devotion for so long should be asked to endanger his life in public office to satisfy the clamor of greedy politicians," said Rauh.

Rauh, expressing himself as shocked and grieved at the President's illness, said the 1956 campaign will be based on issues, not personalities, if Mr. Eisenhower does not run.

He asserted the President's "almost unprecedented popularity has inevitably tended to focus the campaign on personal considerations rather than, the great issues of the day."

The A.D.A. describes itself as an anti-Communist, nonpartisan organization adhering to principles of the New and Fair Deals.

In Boston, Dr. White said "there was no pressure whatsoever" involved in his statement following the television show.

"I just felt it (the TV comment) was being misinterpreted and I wasn't putting any pressure on the President whatsoever," Dr. White said.

Luxury Apartments Set Up By Peron for Young Girls

vestigation of alleged links with the Peron regime.

Marriage Report Investigated.

The provincial government of La Plata, a city which had been named Eva Peron by the ousted dictator, began an investigation of reports that Peron had been secretly married there to 19-year-old Isabel del Solar Guillen but still had pleaded with 16-year-old Nelly to join him in exile in Paraguay, bringing his dogs and motorcycles.

Peron was still aboard a Paraguayan gunboat in Buenos Aires harbor today awaiting a safe conduct pass to go into exile in neighboring Paraguay. An arthoritative source said his position would be clarified soon.

Nelly told authorities that "I'm not the only one" who received Peron's attentions at parties at the presidential palace and said girls of the students union "used to fight" to attend the parties.

Nelly told La Rason newspaper reporters at her parents' home that she met Peron in 1953 during graduation exercises as a home economics student. He gave her and the other girls billfolds containing 500 pesos (about $45).

"I was impressed," Nelly said. "I also asked for jewels and he gave me some with the name Maria Eva Duarte de Peron (the president's deceased wife) engraved on them."

A reporter asked Nelly if she wasn't jealous.

"No," she replied. "I was the only one he loved."

Nelly's mother said she saw nothing wrong in her daughter's relations with the 60-year-old former president.

"Of course we knew. What was wrong with that? The man was good to her . . . he gave her gifts," she said.

Official guides showed reporters through three of Peron's pleasure palaces in Buenos Aires—the palatial official residence in Palermo, the apartment house-harem, and the fantastic Spanish colonial bungalow playhouse where the ex-President entertained his high school girls.

United Press staff correspondent Julio C. Banzas, who went on the tour, was dazzled by the splendor of the quarters.

"The three residences were a fantastic mixture of the Arabian Nights and Ali Baba and the 40 thieves," Banzas said.

"When I stepped over the last threshold, the scent of exotic perfumes was still heavy in my nostrils. I had to rub my eyes in the sunlight to come back to everyday reality."

Heaped With Jewelry.

Most of the rooms in the rooms in the Palermo mansion had been sealed by the Government, but one that was open was heaped with treasures from the jewel boxes of Eva Peron—Gold watches and bracelets, earrings, necklaces, and trinkets of every description.

Dominating the collection was a $150,000 necklace of rubies, diamonds, emeralds, gold and platinum presented to Mrs. Peron by the Argentine Government just before she died in 1952.

Peron's bedroom upstairs contained two console radio-phonographs and two television sets.

Nelly Rivas spent her evenings in a small connecting bedroom for two years before Peron transferred her to the apartment house around the corner, police said.

When the Palermo residence was occupied, a staff of 145 servants operated it for the ex-President, who liked to refer to himself as "Argentine worker No. 1."

Conveniences in the luxuriously-furnished apartment where police said Peron installed Nelly included a blue-tiled swimming pool on a terrace overlooking the Rio de la Plata estuary.

Clothes Cram Closets.

The two mirrored bedrooms reflected the feminine touch, with dressing tables loaded with French perfumes and cosmetics, but most of the closets were crammed with Peron's suits and sports clothes.

All match folders, cigarettes and whisky bottles in the apartment's elaborately-equipped bar were stamped with the name "Peron."

Nelly also frequented the playhouse on the outskirts of Buenos Aires where police said Peron's girl friends used to parade in his late wife's expensive Paris gowns.

The white bungalow, presented to Eva Peron by a refugee German industrialist who made millions in Hitler's Germany, housed some of Peron's most fabulous treasures — paintings by old masters and other art objects whose total value may run into millions of dollars.

Trinkets on display in the playhouse included a solid gold telephone, a golden globe with boundaries and capital cities marked by jewels, and an ivory elephant with a gem-studded golden howdah on its back.

A black Rolls-Royce and a yellow Chevrolet Corvette shared the garage — two of Peron's fleet of 17 automobiles.

United States Officials Praise Lonardi Government.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—United States officials said today Argentina's new government appears to be off to a good start in reorganizing the country after more than ten years of despotic rule by Juan Peron.

Policy announcements and actions by the government of President Eduardo Lonardi were described by these officials as moderate and sensible. They declined to be quoted directly.

One Latin American expert said the Lonardi Government, after only eight days in power, "appears to be taking a very sensible approach to the vast problems of reshaping a nation long under the heel of a dictator. The Lonardi Government," he added, "has not made a single blunder yet, so far as we know."

Some officials said it was too early to make any predictions about long-range developments in Argentina, but several "encouraging" events were noted:

1. The new government appears determined to restore full liberties to the Argentineans.

2. In restoring peace, it has used force only in dealing with Peron's strong-arm groups.

3. No signs of shakiness have appeared in the government, indicating no struggle for power has developed.

4. The new government has handled itself cautiously in dealing with Argentine labor unions, long the source of Peron's greatest strength. There had been fears it might attempt wholesale ouster of union leaders. It has not done so, but seems to have won over top men in the unions.

5. The government's attitude toward foreign affairs has won unusually speedy recognition in Washington and elsewhere.

LANGER CRITICIZES TALK CANCELLATION

Takes Veterans Group to Task on 'Justice' for Sobel.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (UP)—Senator William Langer (Rep.), North Dakota, today criticized the Federal Employes Veterans Association for canceling a speech Langer was scheduled to make before the association in Boston tonight.

The association objected to remarks Langer made about seeking "justice" for convicted atom spy Morton Sobell.

Langer said in a statement issued through his office here that "I should think a veterans' group would be particularly concerned with preserving the rights of Americans under the Constitution."

"No matter with what crime a man may be charged, he should have the right to have his case fairly presented to any court of appeals," he said.

The association announced last night that it had canceled plans for Langer to deliver the keynote speech this evening before the association's convention in Boston. Association spokesmen said the action resulted from a speech Langer made Thursday before the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee in New York.

Langer said in that speech that he would intercede with Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. on behalf of Sobell, who is serving a 30-year prison term for espionage. He was convicted along with Julius and Ethel Rosenberg.

Langer said in his statement that "I do not know Mr. Sobell, I have never met him; but I want to see justice done for him or any other man, no matter who he may be."

"As long as I am a Senator or a citizen drawing breath," Langer said, "I shall always battle to help any man or woman too poor to be able to obtain his day in court, by helping to raise funds so that he may appeal his case."

GEORGE C. SCHAUMBURG FUNERAL TO BE TOMORROW

Funeral services for George C. Schaumburg, secretary of AFL Bricklayers Local 1, will be at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Ziegenhein undertaking establishment, 7027 Gravois avenue. Burial will be in New St. Marcus Cemetery.

Mr. Schaumburg, 81 years old, died of a heart ailment Friday at his home, 3421 Sublette avenue. He was secretary of Bricklayers Local 3 from 1906 to 1926. He served as treasurer of Local 1 in 1926 and later became secretary.

Surviving are a son, Karl C. Schaumburg; a brother, Jud Schaumburg, and two sisters, Mrs. Frieda Case and Mrs. Bertha Benner.

WINNERS IN HENRY SHAW CACTUS SOCIETY FALL SHOW

Mrs. William O'Connell, 9301 Scottsdale avenue, Jennings, won top honors in the annual fall show of the Henry Shaw Cactus Society at Missouri Botanical (Shaw's) Garden yesterday.

A total of 482 exhibits in 114 classes of cactus and succulent plants were entered in competition. Second prize was awarded to Carl B. Snyder, 10444 Eaglewood avenue, Overland, and third place to Fred A. Eisele, 586 Stratford avenue, University City.

The plants will be on display at the garden today.

BOYS AWAITING SENTENCE FLEE JERSEYVILLE JAIL

Two 16-year-old boys, held in the Jersey county jail at Jerseyville, Ill., and scheduled to be sentenced tomorrow on a charge of stealing an automobile, escaped Friday night.

The youths were identified as Charles Shelton of Medaryville, Ind., and Joe Frank Lapacek, San Pierre, Ind. They entered pleas of guilty last Thursday.

Mrs. Richard Burrows, who lives with her husband, a deputy sheriff, in a building adjoining the jail, reported that she left her home briefly last night about 10 p.m. Her husband was gone. When she returned she found the jail keys missing from the house, and the youths gone. They were the only ones being held in the jail.

SLIM HOPE HELD FOR IRON MINE CAVE-IN VICTIM

Two Others Rescued From 1300-Foot Level—Survived on Compressed Air.

ELY, Minn., Oct. 1 (AP)—Rescue squads fought through tons of ore rock and muck today in the slender hope that iron miner Joe Glinsek might still be alive 1300 feet underground.

It was more than 36 hours since a cave-in at Oliver Mining company's pioneer mine, one of the deepest in the world, trapped Glinsek and two since rescued co-workers, Toyvo Hill, 55 years old, and Albert Marolt, 41.

Brought to the surface at 9 o'clock last night after being kept alive by compressed air fed through a lead pipe, Marolt and Hill were given a routine check at a hospital here today and released.

But workers familiar with the perils of a cave-in said there is almost no chance that Glinsek, 43, married and the father of two children has survived.

Fleeing Timbers.

He was last seen trying to flee the falling timbers and sliding rock in a secondary tunnel near the mine's fifteenth level. Marolt and Hill, sealed off in an area 40 feet by 8, had no contact with him during their 20-hour ordeal.

Workers said it was likely that Glinsek either was buried when an overhang of dirt and mud smashed through the cribbing or has succumbed for want of air.

But relays of rescue workers kept digging, drilling and scraping in an effort to reach him.

Marolt and Hill were reached after fellow miners tunneled up from the sixteenth level, blasting part of the way.

The most terrifying part of their experience, Marolt said, came when the compressed air was turned on through the lead pipe:

"There was a terrific hissing and roaring, and we thought the cave-in started all over again."

Speaking Contact.

The two had speaking contact with rescuers through the pipe and at times engaged in light talk and forced banter. Marolt said after the first few hours they were certain they would be saved.

After being taken to the surface by the shaft cage, Marolt and Hill thanked rescue workers, went to the dry house to shower and were taken to their families. Hill is married and the father of two.

Marolt's wife said he had agreed at her insistence to take a week off from work. Both Hill and Marolt were in good spirits today and physically unharmed.

MAN WOUNDED IN CHEST IN TAVERN; ASSAILANT HELD

Eugene Boehn, a truck driver, was shot in the left side of the chest with a .32-caliber pistol bullet yesterday during a dispute in the Tick Tock Tavern, 3459 Magnolia avenue, police reported.

The said a man who identified himself as William E. Marx, a carpenter, of the 3500 block of Victor street, admitted the shooting. He told police he fired after Boehn, who was creating a disturbance, ignored Marx's order to quit it, threw a glass at Marx and advanced on him.

Marx, booked suspected of assault with intent to kill, said he obtained the pistol from behind the bar, having known of its location because he sometimes worked at the establishment as a bartender. Boehn, who lives at 3759 Kosciusko street, was taken to City Hospital in serious condition.

KARSTEN FINDS NEW 'EVIDENCE' OF BAD MAIL SERVICE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Representative Frank M. Karsten (Dem.), St. Louis, who has been feuding with the Post Office department over delays in the delivery of mail, had a new complaint today.

Karsten said he had learned that when the Post Office Department had a message of importance to be delivered in downtown Washington a departmental messenger service was used instead of the mails.

Karsten wrote Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield a letter in which he said he had found that the Post Office has a separate "messenger section" consisting of a chief and four assistants, and a number of couriers. He inclosed an envelope delivered by one of these couriers which had stamped on it, "Do not mail—by messenger."

This envelope was evidence, Karsten said, that the "postal service is as bad as I have been telling you." He asked Summerfield whether the "rubber-stamp service" was unavailable to the public, or whether it would be necessary for the average citizen to rely on special delivery service.

SYMPHONY PLANS TICKETS FOR NEEDY

Donors Asked to Purchase Concert Seats at Reduced Prices.

A plan for donation of concert tickets to St. Louis health and welfare agencies has been instituted by the St. Louis Symphony Society, it was announced yesterday. More than 400 tickets have been requested by the agencies for music lovers who otherwise could not attend concerts.

St. Louisans interested in music and the symphony have been asked to purchase tickets at reduced rates for donation to welfare agencies. Mrs. Harry E. Wuertenbaechter, chairman of the committee on donated tickets, emphasized that "these tickets will not just be turned over to the various agencies to get rid of them after they have been sold."

During the preliminary work on the subject, each agency was asked to determine the number of seats it could use each week, she said.

"The tickets have been ordered by the agencies on behalf of persons specifically interested in symphonic music," Mrs. Wuertenbaecher said. "Now it is up to us and the citizens of St. Louis to furnish the seats."

The symphony orchestra will open its seventy-sixth annual season Oct. 22 and 23 with concerts in Kiel Auditorium Opera House. Vladimir Golschmann will return for his twenty-fifth year as conductor, and Harry Farbman will be in his fourteenth year as assistant conductor and concertmaster.

Twenty-two guest conductors and soloists will be featured in the 1955-56 season. Information on season tickets, at a saving of up to 40 per cent over single admission prices, can be obtained from the symphony society offices, 1176 Arcade Building, CEntral 1-2137, or campaign headquarters at the Silver and Venetian rooms of Park Plaza hotel, FOrest 7-2315.

RUSSIAN HOUSING EXPERTS DUE IN U.S. TOMORROW

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (UP)—Russian housing experts are scheduled to arrive Monday for a month-long coast-to-coast tour to see how Americans build homes and apartments.

Headed by I. K. Kozuilla, Soviet minister of construction, the group may attend the opening of the National Association of Homebuilders' new national housing center, then be guests at a reception. They are scheduled to leave Tuesday night to start their cross-country tour at Boston.

From Boston, the Russians and their N.A.H.B. hosts and guides will go to New York City, Fort Wayne, Ind., Chicago, Barrington, Ill., Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Tucson, Tyler, Tex., Austin, Tex., New Orleans, Cleveland, and back to Washington at the end of the month for a round of conferences with industry and Government housing officials.

ITALIANS BRING MOTOR SCOOTER AGE TO INDIA

BOMBAY, Oct. 1 (AP)—Vehicular traffic in Bombay and Calcutta may soon resemble that of Italy. The scooter-age has dawned in India, with a liberal assist from Italian technicians.

Two of Asia's largest motor assembly companies, both with plants in Bombay, have begun marketing Italian-designed motor scooters. The Indian government has boosted the import of scooter parts for assembly here by reducing custom duties. De luxe models of the vehicles sell in Bombay for $368.

The first Indian-assembled Italian two-wheelers have just come off the production lines of Automobile Products of India, Ltd., and Premier Automobiles, Ltd.

Premier automobiles began this year the assembly of Italian Fiat automobiles imported in knocked-down condition under the Indian government's program of progressive manufacture. This program ousted both Ford and General Motors from the Indian market. It caused Automobile Products Of India, which formerly held license to assemble and market British cars and trucks to abandon that connection in favor of Italian scooters.

REBUILT OLD NORTH CHURCH STEEPLE TO BE DEDICATED

BOSTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—The restored steeple of historic Old North Church will be formally dedicated Oct. 12, William Phillips, president of the Lantern League and former ambassador to Italy announced today.

The steeple, made famous by Longfellow's poem, "The Midnight Ride of Paul Revere," was toppled by Hurricane Carol Aug. 31, 1954.

It was restored with $150,000 contributed by the nation's school-children and patriotic citizens.

FEWER U.S. EMPLOYES HURT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—The Government says it has saved more than $100,000 in damage payments because of a record 1954 low in the accident rate among federal employes.

These accidents cost $25,738,244 in workmen's compensation and medical care costs, a savings of $104,645 from 1953 costs.

2 COURSES IN FIRST AID

Boyhood of President—Early Farm Life Is Described—Glasses Interfered With Games So He Read a Great Deal, Especially History—His First Job Was Working in a Drug Store, Dusting Bottles.

By HARRY S. TRUMAN
Thirty-third President of the United States.

SEVENTH ARTICLE

©1955 by Time, Inc. (Publisher of "LIFE")

ONE of the difficulties I encountered in connection with being President was the intrusion of journalistic curiosity about my personal affairs and my family. Stories were being written about my early life, associations and education intended, perhaps, to shed some light on the reasons for my actions and what course I would be likely to take. Speculations about what I would do led to many baseless conclusions. Far too often they grew out of inaccuracies or even untruths about my life.

Ultimately when books came to be written about me, many questionable or untrue statements began to appear as if they were actual parts of "the record." One such book—it was a book for children—contained, it seemed to me, more inaccuracies than facts, and more false quotations than true ones from individuals who, purportedly, had been interviewed about me.

I believe it fair to say that a great deal of misinformation about me has gained a foothold in this way, and I suppose that some of these "facts" will not be dislodged easily. Still, I hope to prevent the spread of further misinformation, and for that reason I digress at this point to write about myself.

Facts of Early Life.

My parents were married on December 28, 1881. I was born in Lamar, Missouri, at four o'clock in the afternoon on May 8, 1884. When I was about a year old, the family moved to Cass County, Missouri, south of Harrisonville, where my father ran a farm and where my brother Vivian was born on April 25, 1886. In 1887 we moved to the Sol Young farm in Jackson County, six miles north of Belton in Cass County. It was named Grandview, because it was on a high point of land, the highest point in the vicinity in fact. Lawrence, Kansas, is visible forty miles west, Kansas City eighteen miles north, Lee's Summit eight miles east and Belton six miles south. My sister Mary Jane was born there on August 12, 1889.

My grandfather Truman lived with my father wherever he went, and I remember him very well. He was a dignified, pleasant man, particularly with Vivian and me. I fear he spoiled us. My grandfather Young and our lovely grandmother, who had beautiful red hair and who made wonderful cookies, also gave us free rein. My grandmother Truman had died before my parents were married.

We had the whole 440 acres to play over and 160 acres west across the road for the same purpose. Some of my happiest and most pleasant recollections are of the years we spent on the Young farm, when I was between the ages of three and six.

A Boy's Bobtailed Cat.

I had a bobtailed Maltese gray cat and a little black and tan dog not much bigger than the cat. The old cat was named Bob, because one day when he was asleep in front of the big fireplace in the dining room, a coal of fire popped out, lit on the end of his tail and burned off about an inch of it. I can well remember his yowls, and I can see him yet as he ran up the corner of the room all the way to the ceiling. The little dog was called Tandy because of his black and tan color.

These two animals followed Vivian and me everywhere we went, and me alone when Vivian was asleep or too tired to wander over the farm. I was missed on one occasion and was discovered in a corn field a half-mile from the house enjoying the antics of the cat and dog catching field mice.

On another occasion we were playing south of the house in a beautiful pasture with a lovely maple grove in front of it. We had a new little wagon all painted red. I would pull Vivian and a neighbor boy our age named Chandler, and then the Chandler boy, with Vivian's help, would pull me. We discovered a mud hole at the end of the grove, and I pulled the wagon with the two boys in it into the hole and upset it. It seemed a good thing to do, and it was repeated several times, taking turn about. When my mother found us, we were plastered with mud and dirty water from head to foot. What a grand spanking I got as the ring leader!

My grandfather Young would take me to the Belton Fair, when it was running in a big two-wheeled cart with high wheels. I would sit in the Judges' Stand with Grandpa and watch the races, eat striped candy and peanuts and have the best time a kid ever had.

Hunting Birds' Nests.

My grandfather Young had a half-sister in St. Louis who would visit us about once a year. When she came, she would take us over to the back pasture which seemed miles away but wasn't more than a half-mile. We would hunt birds' nests in the tall prairie grass and gather daisies, prairie wild flowers and wild strawberries. When we returned to the house, we'd require a good scrubbing and a long nap.

In the fall, when the apples and peaches were ripe, they were picked, the peaches dried and the apples buried in the ground with straw and boards above them. In mid-winter the apples would be dug up, and were they good! My mother and grandmother dried a lot of peaches and apples, and what fine pies they would make in the winter. There were peach butter, apple butter, grape butter, jellies and preserves, all made in the kitchen by Mama, Grandma and the German hired girl. All were good cooks.

Later, after the fall freeze, came hog-killing time with sausages, souse, pickled pigs feet and the rendering of lard in a big iron kettle in the smokehouse. Vivian still has that kettle. Mama used to tell me that the only reason it was there was because it had been too heavy for the Kansas Red Legs to carry when they robbed the house during the Civil War, burned it and killed all the four hundred fat hogs, taking only the hams.

My father had three sisters and a brother. The youngest was Aunt Matt, who was a school teacher. She'd come to see us, and it was an event, sure enough. She taught us all sorts of outdoor games. Aunt Ella lived in Independence. She was my father's oldest sister, and we saw a lot of her and her three daughters after we moved to Independence. We grew up and went to school with cousins Nellie and Ethel Noland, Aunt Ella's daughters. Nellie would translate my Latin Lesson for me when I was in high school, and I would escort Ethel to parties and learn how to be polite from her. I was always afraid of the girls my age and older.

Aunt Emma, Papa's other sister, lived on a farm about four miles northeast of the Young farm. There were four children in her family, and we really had a grand time when we spent the day with them.

Black Shetland Pony.

Those were wonderful days and great adventures. My father bought me a beautiful black Shetland pony and the grandest saddle to ride him with I ever saw. Vivian has just had that lovely saddle rehabilitated for his three-year-old granddaughter, sixty-five years later.

My father would let me ride over the farm with him beside his big horse. He and Grandpa Young were partners in the operation of the farm and the handling of herds of cattle and mules as well as hogs and sheep. I became familiar with every sort of animal on the farm and watched the wheat harvest, the threshing and the corn shucking, mowing and stacking hay and every evening at supper time heard my father tell a dozen farm hands what to do and how to do it. In addition to the six hundred acres where we lived, there was another farm of nine hundred or a thousand acres four miles away which had to be operated too.

When we moved to Independence in December, 1890, my father bought a big house on South Chrisler Street with several acres of land, a wonderful strawberry bed and a fine garden. At the same time, he was operating a farm southeast of town and went into buying and selling cattle, hogs and sheep.

We began making acquaintances with neighbor boys as soon as we were settled. We had an old Negro woman who washed for us every week and sometimes cooked for us. She had three boys and two girls, and what a grand time we had. There was also another family of Negroes who were friends of our cook. There were a boy and a girl in that family.

With our barns, chicken house and a grand yard in which to play, all the boys and girls in the neighborhood for blocks around congregated at our house. We always had ponies and horses to ride, goats to hitch to our little wagon which was made like a big one. An old harness maker in Independence made Vivian a set of double harness just like the big set. We would harness two red goats to the little wagon and drive it everywhere around the place. Years later, this good old harness man defeated me for Eastern Judge of the Jackson County Court.

Started Sunday School.

About this time my parents decided that we should start attending Sunday school. My mother took us to the nearest Protestant church, which happened to be the First Presbyterian at Lexington and Pleasant Streets, and we attended regularly every Sunday for as long as we lived in Independence.

We made a number of new acquaintances, and I became interested in one in particular. She had golden curls and has, to this day, the most beautiful blue eyes. We went to Sunday school, public school from the fifth grade through high school, graduated in the same class and marched down life's road together. For me she still has the blue eyes and golden hair of yesteryear.

My mother had taught me my letters and how to read before I was five years old, and because I had a hard time reading newspaper print, I was taken to an oculist for an eye examination. I was fitted with glasses and started to school in the fall of 1892, when I was eight years old. The glasses were a great help in seeing but a great handicap in playing. I was so carefully cautioned by the eye doctor about breaking my glasses and injuring my eyes that I was afraid to join in the rough and tumble games in the school yard and the back lot. My time was spent in reading, and by the time I was thirteen or fourteen years old I had read all the books in the Independence Public Library and our big old Bible three times through.

In 1896 my father sold the house on Chrisler Street and bought one at 909 West Waldo Avenue at North River Boulevard. I have one or two vivid recollections of the Chrisler Street place that deserve mention. In the fall of 1892 Grover Cleveland was re-elected over Benjamin Harrison, who had defeated him in 1888. My father was very much elated by Cleveland's victory. He rode a beautiful gray horse in the torchlight parade and decorated the weather vane on the tower at the northwest corner of the house with a flag and bunting. The weather vane was a beautifully gilded rooster.

First Year in School.

My first year in school was a happy one. My teacher was Miss Myra Ewing, with whom I became a favorite, as I eventually did with all my teachers.

In January of 1893, my second year at Noland School, Vivian and I had severe cases of diphtheria from which I had difficulty recovering. My legs, arms and throat were paralyzed for some months after the diphtheria left me.

The school board had decided to build a new school on South River just back of the present Auditorium of the Latter Day Saints, and I never returned to the Noland School. The new school was the Columbian, and I went to summer school to Miss Jennie Clements the summer after my sickness to catch up. I skipped the third grade and went directly into the fourth.

We found West Waldo Street to be a most pleasant neighborhood, and there were boys and girls our age all around us with whom we became acquainted at once.

We had wonderful times in that neighborhood from 1896 to 1902. Our house soon became headquarters for all the boys and girls around. Usually there were goats, calves, two or three cows, my pony and my father's horses to be taken care of. The cows had to be milked and the horses curried, watered and fed every morning and evening. In the summertime the cows had to be taken to pasture a mile or so away after morning milking and returned the same evening. The goats and calves had to be taken to the big public spring at Blue Avenue and River, two blocks south of our house, for water.

Umpire at Baseball.

There was a wonderful barn with stalls for horses and cows, a corn crib and a hay loft in which all the kids met and cooked up plans for all sorts of adventures, such as trips to Idlewild, a sort of winderness two blocks north, and pigtail baseball games which I umpired because I couldn't see well enough to bat. There was a wood pile on which my brother and I had to work after old Rube, a good

Spotlight on Nixon, Adams During President's Illness

Vice President Has Chance to Enhance Presidential Prospects — Takes Over Many White House Jobs.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.

VICE PRESIDENT RICHARD MILHOUS NIXON, 42 years old, of California, has put himself further under the spotlight this week as the understudy who has the best chance to become the star of the 1956 Republican show.

Even if President Eisenhower's recovery from a heart attack continues to make the most hoped for progress, the youthful Californian will take over many of the routine, ceremonial and procedural White House duties that do not directly impinge on the President's constitutional authority.

This will keep him in the public eye for many months, and if he exercises the same correct and creditable conduct he has shown since Mr. Eisenhower was stricken, he will further enhance his presidential prospects.

Nixon's advance from a secondary role to the center of the stage as the temporary principal during the star's illness was foreseen by Mr. Eisenhower immediately after his nomination in 1952 and wholeheartedly accepted by the vice presidential nominee.

AT A PRESS CONFERENCE in May, the President was asked whether Nixon was his personal choice for the vice presidential nomination or one of a number of different persons he had approved.

Mr. Eisenhower replied that at the time his experience with politics was so limited that he had not realized that he had any great influence in the selection of a running mate until immediately after he himself was nominated. He continued:

"And I wrote down—I said I would not do it, I didn't know enough about things that had been going on in the United States. I had been gone two years. And so I wrote down the names of five, or maybe it was six, men, younger men that I admired, who seemed to me to have made a name for themselves. And I said, 'Any one of these will be acceptable to me' and he (Nixon) was on the list."

From this list, the Eisenhower campaign managers selected Nixon and presented him to the Chicago convention as Mr. Eisenhower's choice. He was nominated by acclamation. If the late Robert A. Taft of Ohio had been the presidential nominee, he probably would have selected Senator William F. Knowland, 47 years old, of California, who made the principal nominating speech for Nixon.

As to the Vice President's part in Government, the President told his May press conference:

"I personally believe the Vice President should never be a nonentity. I believe he should be used. I believe he should have a useful job. And I think ours has. Ours has worked as hard as any man I know in this whole executive department."

Less than six months after he was sworn in, Nixon listed in an interview three definite duties he believed a Vice President has besides presiding over the Senate and voting to break a tie:

"To interpret the congressional viewpoint to the Administration. . . . To help the President and Cabinet members iron out their difficulties in Congress and help get the program through. . . . And to do everything he can from a political standpoint in behalf of the election of a Congress that will support the President."

In this interview he described the Vice President as a "political animal."

In accordance with the later day concept of the vice presidential office, Nixon, like Alben Barkley in the Truman Administration, has participated in Cabinet and National Security Council meetings. Nixon has presided over the sessions when the President was not in Washington. In addition he has been appointed to presidential commissions to study Government contracts and to work out a youth program. He and Mrs. Nixon have made good will trips to the Far East in 1953 and to Latin America early this year. They were scheduled to go to the Middle East in the near future but his trip may be canceled because of the President's illness.

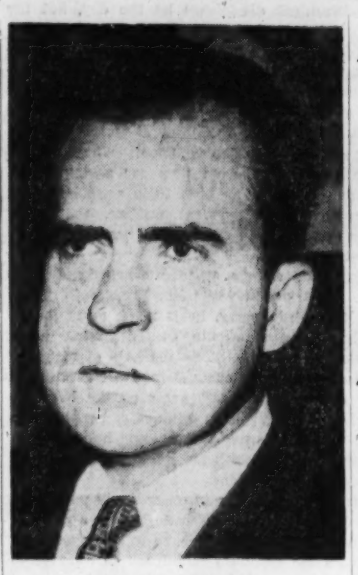

Mr. Eisenhower has called Nixon "the most valuable member of our team" and he is probably the most controversial figure in the top level group. He is no self-effacing Throttlebottom and his detractors, especially among the Democrats and independents, are more vocal than his advocates.

It is a matter of political semantics, but following are descriptive terms used by his supporters contrasted with terms used by his critics:

"Bulldog determination"—"cruel" and "ruthless."
"Telegenic"—"ham."
"Conscientious"—"intellectually dishonest."
"Versatile"—"glib."
"Trouble shooter"—"fixer."
"Adaptable"—"opportunist."
"Exposer of Alger Hiss"—"white collar McCarthy."
"Eisenhower spokesman"—"Republican smear artist."

These words of praise and censure have increased with Nixon's vigorous political and governmental activity since his election to Congress in 1946 over liberal Jerry Voorhis from the then usually Democratic Twelfth California District.

AS A YOUNG REPRESENTATIVE he was assigned to the House Un-American Activities Committee and, with the help of the late Bert Andrews of the Washington Bureau of the New York Herald Tribune, he was mainly responsible for detecting the flaws in the testimony of Alger Hiss and with Andrews he took over the famous "pumpkin papers" of Whittaker Chambers which helped convict the former State Department official.

He was re-elected to the House in 1948 after receiving, under the California cross-filing system, the nomination of both parties. In a bitter campaign in 1950, during which he demonstrated his ability to exploit his anti-Communist activities and to reflect a Communist tint to the Democrats, he was elected to the Senate over former Democratic Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas.

His selection for the vice presidential nomination by Eisenhower's campaign managers was based on four strong political qualifications:

1. He was a native son of California, which had 32 electoral votes.
2. He was a vigorous 39 years old and could help in a strenuous campaign.
3. He fitted into the Republican strategy to attack the Democrats on the Korea, Communism and corruption issues.
4. He was not aligned with the Taft faction of the party.

The lowest point in Nixon's political career occurred near the start of the Eisenhower campaign when he admitted he had received a secret subsidy of $18,000 from a group of wealthy California Republicans to help pay his expenses as Senator.

The disclosure almost wrecked the Eisenhower campaign train, as the Eisenhower managers buttonholed political reporters to get their estimate of its effect on the voters. There was persistent talk for a day or so that Nixon would be forced to vacate the second place or that Candidate Eisenhower would have to repudiate him.

Nixon's radio and television abilities saved him. In an emotional performance under expert theatrical and public relations guidance the young campaigner tugged on the heart strings of his audience by telling of his struggles against Communists and Democrats, with appropriate credit for help from his wife—who was in the studio—his two small daughters and their cocker spaniel, Checkers.

Candidate and Mrs. Eisenhower watched the television performance in a private room at the Cleveland Auditorium and in a speech a few minutes later Mr. Eisenhower told the political gathering that although Nixon had made "an error in judgment" in accepting the $18,000 he admired his courage in explaining the situation.

The next evening the presidential nominee embraced Nixon at an airport outside Wheeling, W.Va., and in another emotional scene called him "my boy." Shortly thereafter he told a Wheeling audience that Nixon had been subjected to an unfair and vicious attack," adding:

"So far as I am concerned, he has

Adams Has Been President's 'Chief of Staff'—Fills Role Similar to Hopkins's With Roosevelt.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.

DURING President Eisenhower's illness the man who will have most to say about the day-to-day business of running the Government is Sherman Adams, the sour-visaged New Englander who has been the President's top aid for the last three years.

Adams left Washington for Denver Friday to take charge of the temporary White House and to act as co-ordinator between Denver and Washington during the President's convalescence. Adams's selection for this mission was agreed upon at a meeting of the National Security Council Thursday morning.

Mr. Eisenhower has been unstinting in his praise of Adams, who, the Chief Executive said, is "the one person who really knows what I am trying to do."

If Vice President Richard M. Nixon is described as a presidential understudy, Adams might be pictured as a stage manager assigned to keep the production rolling. His work is behind the scenes. He makes speeches only on rare occasions and has not held a press conference since the day he became the Assistant to the President, Jan. 21, 1953. He is inaccessible, and accountable only to the President.

Adams is to Mr. Eisenhower something of what Harry Hopkins was to Roosevelt, Clark Clifford to Truman and Col. House to Wilson, though he is like none of these presidential confidants. His great power derives largely from the President's military background. Mr. Eisenhower always has placed extreme reliance on a competent chief of staff.

In the last war Gen. Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander, conducted much of his business through his chief of staff, Gen. Walter Bedell Smith. It was said that while Gen. Eisenhower made the decisions, Bedell Smith got the ulcers. Later, when Gen. Eisenhower took over the North Atlantic Treaty command, he picked another brilliant soldier, Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, as his chief assistant. Adams is the President's civilian chief of staff.

PERHAPS IT WAS INEVITABLE that Adams should become a controversial figure. Politicians who would not dare to attack Mr. Eisenhower because of his personal popularity, have been critical of the President's assistant. Democrats have characterized Adams as an "operator" and a "hatchet man," but numbered among the former New Hampshire Governor's most bitter enemies are conservative congressional Republicans.

In a speech some time ago, Representative Joseph L. Carrigg (Rep.), Pennsylvania, said his "general dislike" for Adams was shared by Republican leaders. Carrigg said Adams had hurt the party because of his methods of dealing with Republican legislators.

A conservative Republican Congressman told the Post-Dispatch that while he did not feel free to discuss details, he had been shocked at the pressure Adams tried to exert on Congress in the last session. As a hypothetical example, he said Adams or a lieutenant would dangle executive consideration of a flood-control project in the Congressman's district as an inducement to cast a vote in the Administration's favor on a hard-fought piece of legislation.

Probably the President knows little of Adams's daily activities, as one of the assistant's functions is to relieve Mr. Eisenhower of as many burdens as possible. If the President does know, he does not disapprove, for he has said:

"He (Adams) has not sought honor for himself. He has sought in his position almost anonymity to serve his country by working with the legislators, by working with the staff that is set up in the White House, by advising me and trying to keep me from stumbling too often. He has found that last, possibly, one of his toughest problems."

Adams has almost unlimited authority to decide whom the President is to see and what issues and problems are to be brought to his attention. An illustration of this is the treatment accorded former Senator John Sherman Cooper, a Kentucky Republican now Ambassador to India, shortly before the mid-term elections of 1954.

Cooper wanted to block the controversial Dixon-Yates power contract. His fundamental position was that the Atomic Energy Commission did not have the authority to sign a contract to perform a function which Congress had given the Tennessee Valley Authority. He wanted to present his views personally to the President partly because he sincerely held them and partly because he doubted whether he could be elected in Kentucky if he followed the Administration line and alienated friends of TVA.

Cooper's views did not coincide with those of Adams, who, as it was shown later, was directly involved in the Administration's fight for Dixon-Yates. Adams prevented Cooper from seeing Mr. Eisenhower until Mr. Eisenhower

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

As Two School Men See It

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Considerable change has taken place in the educational attitudes of Missourians since the adoption of our first Constitution in 1820 and the adoption of our present Constitution. This change is reflected in the provisions of the two Constitutions.

Then the chief principle involved was the establishment of schools "where the poor shall be taught gratis." Now the thinking is more in terms of the state's participation in education and guaranteeing equal educational opportunity for all children.

Schools have included in their offerings many services which were unknown a few years ago. These services cost money and it has been necessary to find additional funds to finance them.

The members of the General Assembly seemed to have caught a clear vision of the meaning of education in passing almost unanimously Referendums 1 and 2, which are the cigarette tax of one mill per cigarette and the foundation program, respectively.

The cigarette tax is needed if the foundation program is to be financed in full. The tax will not, as some say, work any undue hardship on anyone. It will, on the other hand, give relief in many instances to those who have been paying excessive taxes on real property.

The opposition to the cigarette tax seems to come more from those who oppose better schools than from those who smoke.

Referendums 1 and 2 have laid a new and modern foundation for public education in Missouri. Without doubt they will be recorded as one of the significant mileposts in the history of education in Missouri.

As time goes along, experience will doubtless require that minor changes be made by future Legislatures. But Referendums 1 and 2 will form a firm foundation for many generations to come for a truly democratic public school system for Missouri.

Vote for better schools Oct. 4. Vote for Referendums 1 and 2.

GEORGE M. DeWOODY,
Superintendent of Schools.
Ellington, Mo.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

It has been obvious for many years that you have no grasp of the educational problems in our state. If you were genuinely interested in making a worthwhile contribution to the children of this state, you would instruct one of your reporters to investigate thoroughly a cross-section of the schools these children attend.

It would be well for the editor of your editorial page to accompany the reporter in some of his investigations. You might be surprised by what you would find.

The insidious double-talk you do on matters pertaining to education is hurting every boy and girl in this state.

MORGAN SELVIDGE.
Superintendent of Schools.
Eureka, Mo.

Afterthoughts

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Your publishing of the Commonweal article on Emmett Louis Till was commendable. As the article points out, what happened in Mississippi is a moral disease afflicting the whole nation. Anyone who calls himself "Christian" ought to be revolted by the lack of justice shown in the case of this 14-year-old Negro boy.

But a trial was held and "outside interference" bitterly resented. What, then, can be done by people concerned about the problems of racial equality?

As individuals, we can still do at least three things: (1) Practice tolerance in our own lives, honoring in all men the dignity given them by God. (2) Support legislation protecting civil rights. (3) Contribute generously to religious and charitable organizations aiding in the advancement of Negroes and other minority groups.

As to Mr. Truman's Story

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

With respect to the Sept. 28 letter from Reader Henry P. Thym, who reminded you to cancel his subscription because of your publication of the Truman memoirs.

Thank goodness we do not have too many of the "intelligentsia" of the type he referred to when he declared there would be no need for the Post-Dispatch if the intelligentsia followed his wishes.

I suppose he treasured the memoirs of Dugout Doug. One of these days history will realize that Truman gave more to this world than many of our more revered Presidents.

ILLINOIS READER.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I have always been under the impression that the first page of a newspaper was for news. I must be wrong because the Truman memoirs have had two columns on page one and page two. That's news?

Tell me, are you going to continue with the Truman memoirs on page one till this thing is over? I suppose we can be thankful that at least President Eisenhower's illness was given space on the first page.

DISGUSTED.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

You should start a subscription to send Reader Thym back to those places in the world where thoughts like his predominate.

In Poorest Taste

The American people look back today on the first week in more than a third of a century which saw a President of the United States lie stricken with a potentially critical illness.

It has been an uneasy week. It began with shock and alarm and ended with distress and continuing regret, mixed with encouragement and even cheer as the bulletins from the Army hospital in Denver reported good days and nights "without complications."

The country also looks ahead even if it cannot see very far when it attempts to do so. For while the prospects are reassuring, there are still uncertainties. Not until the second week has passed do the physicians who attend coronary thrombosis patients feel that they are getting toward the edge of the woods. The danger to the President diminishes by the day, but the danger is not yet passed.

In this continuingly doubtful situation, it is anything but becoming for Republican National Chairman Leonard Hall and certain other party politicians to keep on talking about running Mr. Eisenhower for a second term. Whether they realize it or not, what they are saying seems to suggest that they have little regard for the President's own personal welfare, that their main interest is in having him head the G.O.P. ticket in 1956.

Any such callous attitude overlooks a basic fact. This is that while Mr. Eisenhower heads the Republican party, he is much more importantly President of the United States, made President, incidentally, by the help of many independent and not a few Democratic voters. He may be chiefly a magic name on the ballot to the Leonard Halls. To millions of people he is both Chief Executive and a warm human being whose personal health must now be a first consideration of everyone.

Just as it would be in exceedingly poor taste for some of the Democrats to launch a political sniping attack at this time, so is it the worst of manners for certain Republicans to attempt to push the sick President into a campaign a year from now when they do not know whether he will even get through next week without a setback.

Presumably this second term talk was encouraged by Dr. Paul D. White's remark to a reporter early in the week. The Boston heart specialist, who attended the President, said that if Mr. Eisenhower recovered it might be physically possible for him to run again. Later in the week Dr. White made a considered statement that places this thought in a different light. Over NBC television he said:

> Many things are possible that may not be advisable. It is up to Mr. Eisenhower to make the decision. He may or may not have complete recovery. If I were in his shoes I wouldn't want to run again, having seen the strain. It remains to be seen how active he can be in the future.

The only sensible thing for the President to do is to follow the best medical advice he can get from week to week in his convalescence. We are sure the country will be content to have him follow it.

The experience of the first week demonstrates that there is no need for unusual acts or disturbing statements. The Cabinet has met. So has the National Security Council. Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams has gone to Denver to set up a working White House organization there. In view of the great protection Mr. Adams has given the President for nearly three years, he can be trusted to guard him well now.

And so the Government goes on. Already the President has signed some routine State Department appointments. If the second term tubthumpers will restrain themselves, all will probably go as well as can be expected in the weeks ahead. But if these partisan agitators keep up their thoughtless, not to say inhuman talk, they may well cause Dwight D. Eisenhower to announce early the one decision they least want to hear from him.

New Test for Lawyers?

There are two virtues especially appropriate for lawyers. One is a high regard for the rights of individuals. The other is precision of language. Both are violated, we believe, by the proposal for examination of the "moral character" of prospective lawyers, a proposal accepted in principle by the Board of Governors of the Missouri Bar to be worked out in detail with the State Board of Bar Examiners.

Obviously lawyers convicted of defrauding their clients or of serious law violations should be suspended or even permanently disbarred. But the statutes already cover such points—points which, in any case, are not likely to be raised against a young man entering law school or, later, taking the state bar examination. Is his opportunity to qualify for the profession to be set aside for fear that on some future day he may prove unworthy?

Just how would his "moral character" be appraised? Warner Fuller, chairman of the committee which drafted the recommendation, describes it as a barrier against "undesirables." But who is "undesirable?" Mr. Fuller talks of "escapades" which might be "merely exhibiting a boyish character" or which might "indicate a more fundamental fault." Now just what is an "escapade," a "boyish characteristic," and "a more fundamental fault?"

Could it be that some lawyers—those who so frequently complain that their profession is over-crowded—are really more concerned with reducing competition than with morality?

One for All

The first United Fund campaign, which will start about three weeks hence, on Oct. 20, will present a test. Will St. Louisans support the idea of a single community fund-raising campaign as strongly in practice as they have already indicated they support it in principle? Their favorable answer will insure the continued use of this superior method as nothing else could do. It will likewise offer a persuasive new reason for those few organizations that are still holdouts to join the Fund.

The goal is the largest ever sought in a single campaign in the St. Louis area—$8,245,925. But there are other cities which, with the aid of the United Fund method, set and raised the largest quotas in their history. There is no reason why St. Louis cannot do as well as they did.

Larger than ever before though it is, the goal is still "considerably less" than that recommended by the citizen budget committees, Donald Danforth, Fund president, reports. So the Fund is not asking the community for a dollar more than needed by the 114 agencies represented. These are the 109 agencies of the Community Chest plus the American Red Cross (St. Louis and Webster Groves chapters), United Cerebral Palsy Association, Associated Hospitals (Christian, Deaconess and Missouri Baptist), St. Louis Association for Retarded Children and St. Louis Diabetes Association.

Mr. Danforth estimates that while the cost of fund-raising drives has ranged from 4.8 per cent for the Community Chest to as much as 23 per cent for one organization he did not identify, the Fund's cost will amount to only 3.8 per cent.

All these are good reasons for making the United Fund method a demonstrable success from its very first year.

At Tuesday's Election

On Referendum Measure No. 1, which imposes a state cigarette tax of one mill per cigarette or 2 cents per package—NO.

On Referendum Measure No. 2, which provides a new plan of state aid to schools called the Foundation Plan—YES.

Missouri voters, in our judgment, would be wise to mark their ballots thus in Tuesday's special election.

By far the most important issue at the election is the school Foundation Plan. It should be passed because it will bring into effect a definitely improved method of distributing state aid to schools.

Instead of distributing aid primarily according to the number of teachers, the Foundation Plan will make the basis of aid the number of pupils, thus creating incentive for further consolidation of small, inefficient schools.

It will provide funds to help pay higher salaries for better qualified teachers, thus raising teacher standards. It will require small districts which can afford it to increase their local contribution to schools, thus relieving an unfair burden on state aid. It will permit better budgetary practices by letting districts know definitely how much state aid they will receive for each new school year.

The objective of the Foundation Plan is to make possible in each district a minimum expenditure of $185 per pupil. It is probably true that this objective cannot be fully attained without levying of the proposed cigarette tax. But there is nothing sacred about the $185 figure (which was originally $175) and no urgent reason why the Foundation Plan should be fully financed this year.

Even without cigarette tax revenue, state aid to schools this biennium will be $7,000,000 larger than it was in the previous biennium. With tighter collection of sales and income taxes now under way, the increase could be even greater. As the State Tax Commission requires more and more counties to bring their property tax valuations up to a reasonable level, some districts will be able to raise more school funds equitably from local sources. The schools, therefore, are not going to suffer if the cigarette tax is defeated at this time.

We think it should be defeated. The time may come when a cigarette tax may be desirable in Missouri, but it should not be imposed until definitely and indubitably required.

If and when it is imposed, furthermore, the proceeds should not be earmarked for school purposes, as Referendum Measure No. 1 would do. Earmarking, as many states have discovered, is an evil way of taking the control of state expenditures out of the hands of the Legislature which is elected to control them. Missouri's General Assembly should get into the habit of making definite appropriations of school aid every year, as the Foundation Plan contemplates.

YES on the Foundation Plan, NO on the cigarette tax—that is Missouri's best course now.

The Dodgers Make a Discovery

The Brooklyn Dodgers, who did not give too much attention to the standings after getting off to that big lead in the National League race, did not carry this indifference too far in the World Series.

With Friday's game to their credit, they were very conscious yesterday of the difference between 2W and 2L and 1W and 3L. The latter situation would have threatened them with sudden death; the former meant, in effect, a new if shorter series, with everybody starting from scratch, and with its first game in Brooklyn. So the big guns unlimbered.

And now it is Casey Stengel who has to do a bit of worrying, having discovered that the Dodgers are not push-overs for the Yankees after all. What makes this disturbing for Casey is that the Dodgers have made the same discovery.

France's Costly Petulance

France has put itself in an awkward position indeed by walking out of the United Nations General Assembly because of the 28-27 vote to debate the Algiers issue.

As a nation already regarded as rather less than a first-class power, France hardly can afford to isolate herself by following up this walk-out by a total withdrawal from the U.N. This simply would invite other governments to show that they can get along without French co-operation, if need be. Even boycotting the Algiers discussion is ill calculated to win friends.

True, the French warned that they consider the Algerian independence agitation a purely domestic affair since they hold that part of North Africa to be an integral part of metropolitan France. They also can point out that the same Assembly refused the Greek request for a discussion of Cyprus because Great Britain maintains this is not an international issue.

But what could France lose by U.N. debate on Algiers? Arab representatives may try to make an occasion for anti-European propaganda. Yet this could be best met by a direct defense by France of her record. With French participation, the debate might even relieve Arab-European tensions, and possibly nations not directly interested might contribute to an acceptable settlement.

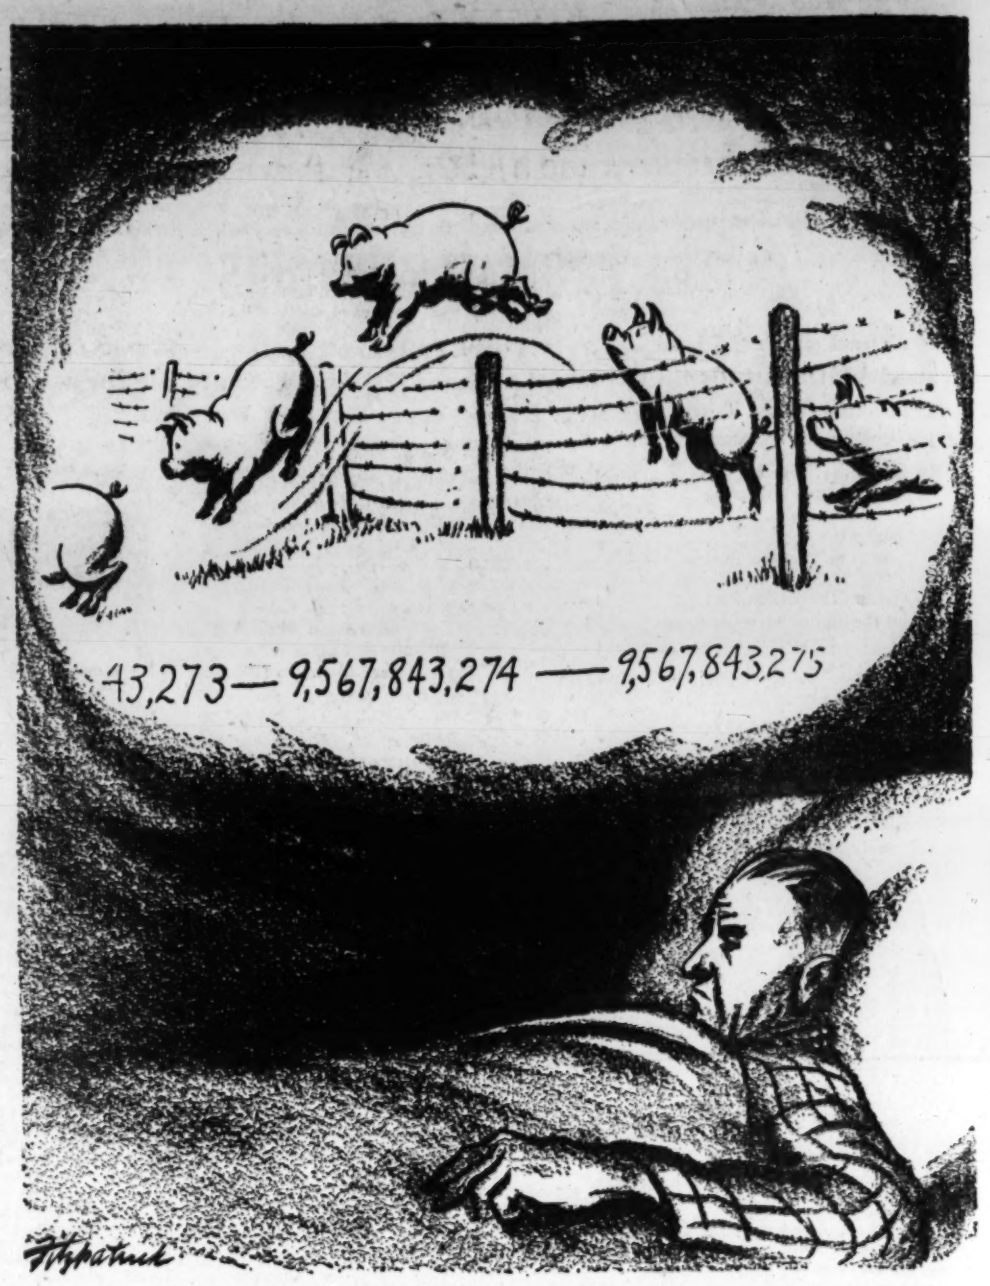

In any event, the discussion is now on the Assembly agenda and it is to be regretted that France, unless there is a change of mind in Paris, will be sulking under the pretense that she can ignore the rest of the world.

More Pavement for the Money

Toll road fever has died down in Missouri since the Legislature failed to act on turnpikes and the Federal Government began to consider increased aid to the states. Meanwhile the Automobile Club of Missouri has produced some cooling statistics against the toll road fervor.

Ralph V. Wilson, Auto Club counsel, estimates it would cost $600,000,000 to build two toll roads from St. Louis to Kansas City and to Joplin. He figures the interest on bonds for toll pikes at $430,000,000 (at 3½ per cent over 40 years.)

We have said that toll roads can be justified as emergency measures, when traffic is exceptionally heavy and a state cannot build roads to carry it. But here in Missouri the money spent for interest alone on a toll turnpike would be enough to build a fine cross state highway—and interest does not build pavement. Our traditional free highway system promises more roads for the dollars spent.

A NIGHT WITH AGRICULTURE SECRETARY BENSON

Mr. Nixon in the Limelight

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Vice President wins new attention because of illness of President; strong party man, he would face stiff battles with Congress, Wall Street Journal predicts; currently leading for 1956 presidential nomination, but clash of G.O.P. rivals is likely.

Albert Clark in The Wall Street Journal

WASHINGTON.

"The main difference between Eisenhower and Nixon is that the President always tries to avoid political conflict; Nixon doesn't—he relishes it."

An official who knows both men well gave this summation of why many people in Washington are looking for a sharp change in the congressional climate, as Vice President Richard Nixon in fact—if not in name—moves toward the "acting Presidency."

With Mr. Nixon standing in for the President, this official saw important political and legislative problems for both the Democrats and the G.O.P. when Congress reconvenes in January. Says one Democrat leader: "Mr. Eisenhower couldn't get some of his bills through Congress. I don't know what will happen now."

Richard Nixon

Although congressional Democrats had increasingly been sniping at the President in recent months, he has nonetheless enjoyed their high regard—more than one Republican has privately accused him of "bipartisanism."

Democratic Opinion of Nixon

But Mr. Nixon is a party man, and proud of it. Few Democrats express much but antipathy for him. Just how this Democratic feeling would be reflected, no one is now prepared to say. But it appeared all but certain that as an "acting President" Nixon would face a far more unruly Congress than President Eisenhower ever did.

Unless he resigned outright, making Mr. Nixon President, Mr. Eisenhower could not turn over his full authority to the Vice President or anyone else. Even now, some officials are wondering what would happen if Mr. Nixon should attempt to overrule Secretary of State Dulles on a foreign policy issue.

Despite the outstanding personality differences between the President and his understudy, Mr. Eisenhower's intimates emphasize the great respect their chief has for and the reliance he placed in Mr. Nixon. "And everybody who's had any dealings with him has tremendous respect for his ability and judgment," says one high Administration lieutenant.

Until the President fell ill, Democrats were increasingly aiming their political barbs at Mr. Eisenhower. They figured he was the man they'd have to run against next year.

G.O.P. Has Its Own Dilemma

But the Democrats have been quick to decide that the President's heart attack changes all this. They believe that the public opinion wouldn't now stand for political attacks on Mr. Eisenhower. With the Vice President looking like the man they may have to fight next year, Democratic leaders are preparing to aim their fire at him. They're convinced that Mr. Nixon, not enjoying the near-adulation given Mr. Eisenhower, is not immune to political attack.

If the Democrats are suffering from a dilemma, Republicans have a different one of their own. Political experts argue that, with the President apparently out as a candidate for re-election, the G.O.P. in Congress needs to line up more solidly than before behind their Administration's legislative program.

But without Mr. Eisenhower heading next year's ticket, there was some apprehension that Republican lawmakers might be more inclined to vote according to the dictates of their districts than in line with White House wishes, when the two viewpoints clashed.

Moreover, Mr. Nixon faces the possibility of trouble from some of his presidential rivals. His fellow-Californian, Senator Knowland, has long been considered to have White House ambitions. And Indiana's Representative Charles Halleck had been rated as one of Mr. Nixon's rivals for the 1956 vice presidential nomination. Thus, while both are loyal party men, they could hardly be expected to go out of their way to smooth Mr. Nixon's way for the presidential nomination next year.

What is Mr. Nixon's background, and how did he so rapidly rise to his present lofty position?

Quick Climb to the Top

Richard Milhous Nixon was born 42 years ago last January 9 at Yorba Linda, Calif. After graduating from Whittier College in California in 1934 and getting his law degree from Duke University, Durham, N.C., in 1937 Mr. Nixon practiced law in Whittier until 1942. For a short time thereafter he worked in Washington as a Government lawyer, until he entered the Navy in August of that year.

The young lawyer got his start in politics in 1946 when he ran for the House on a conservative platform and defeated New Dealing Representative Jerry Voorhis. In the House, Mr. Nixon distinguished himself by exposing Alger Hiss's alleged Communist ties, and by supporting the Taft-Hartley labor law.

After two terms in the House, Mr. Nixon took on another "liberal" Democrat, Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas, in a rowdy political race for the Senate. Mr. Nixon attacked his opponent as a "left-winger" and went out of his way before labor groups to defend his support of the Taft-Hartley Act.

After just two years in the Senate, Mr. Nixon was chosen as Mr. Eisenhower's running mate in 1952. The reasons for the choice look very clear. Though picked by the so-called Dewey wing of the G.O.P., Mr. Nixon was acceptable to the late Senator Taft and his followers. Mr. Eisenhower wanted a young man and Mr. Nixon was young.

Strong for President's Policies

Having helped send Alger Hiss to jail, Mr. Nixon was the symbol, perhaps more than anyone else, of the G.O.P. fight against Communism in government—one of the prime issues of 1952. Mr. Nixon is a Quaker, and that put him on the side of peace.

Finally, Mr. Nixon came from the West, a section of growing political importance and from a state that, tied with Pennsylvania, is second only to New York in political strength.

Since the 1952 election, Mr. Nixon has adopted the strategy of supporting the President's policies down the line. At no time is he known to have departed from Administration policy, once the policy was set. In return, the President has often called on the Vice President for advice and to perform missions ranging from political chores on Capitol Hill to projects involving global diplomacy.

It is against this background that Mr. Nixon now moves into his more active role in running Washington, and into the political limelight as the candidate who is currently leading for next year's Republican presidential nomination.

DUAL SCHOOL PROBLEM.

After circulating a questionnaire, a team of psychologists reports that children list their biggest problem as school. Similar queries might reveal, oddly enough, that the schools figure their biggest problem is children.

Corn Song

I.

I take my love with me at night to listen,
I take her on a warm night in July
When the bright full moon makes dewy corn blades glisten,
On a night when the soft wind hums a lullaby.
I stand by her amid this field of corn,
My arm around her shoulder, cheek to cheek;
We stand entranced until stars fade at morn
To listen to love words the corn blades speak.
The corn is like tall soldiers in straight rows,
The tall maturing stalks stand side by side;
Their tassels mingle freely when wind blows,
As if each were a bridegroom kissing bride.
A million corn blades whisper love is here
On these green acres that we cultivate;
With night enchanted and with heavens near,
We love tonight regardless of our fate.

II.

I take my love with me in somber autumn
When the wagon-wheel October moon is red
And wind frost-laden moans across the bottom.
We have returned to find that love has fled
And green corn blades we once heard whisper love
Are ripened by the autumn sun and frost
And rustle sharply when they're forced to move.
The wind will blow them thither to be lost.
The tall green stalks we knew, erect in rows,
Are broken at the top and at the knees.
We know this is the way that corn-love goes,
Caressing blades ride on each chilling breeze.
I hold my love in silence on this night
And our lips meet as they have met before,
Her once-brown hair shows signs frost is in sight;
With summer gone, we'll love in autumn more.

The Last Leave Home

To see these rugged hills of home again
Before uncertain flight through troubled skies,
To be where autumn wind sends down red rain
Has brought me moods and hot tears to my eyes.
These are the jutted hills that nurtured me,
That gave me substance since my life began;
Within whose bounds I have known liberty
As much as any mortal on earth can.
I have stood here when other winds have blown
In seasons past to watch rain-dropping leaves;
Now I recount with pleasure days I've known
Before a change to scenes beyond the seas.
Upon this earth, beneath these clouds of fleece,
I wish I could command this time to stop
That I may know again these hills of peace
Where only leaf-blood trickles drop by drop.

Long Eisenhower Absence From Job Likely to Affect U.S. Defense Program and NATO

President Is Only Man Who Can Keep Allies Together, if Even He Is Able to Do So, or Who Can Settle Wilson-Humphrey Dispute.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.

PROTRACTED absence of the President from the duties of his office—and this absence will be a minimum of two months and possibly may extend to four months even if his recovery is without complications—will have a far-reaching effect upon United States military and military-international policies.

Only the President can solve the current conflict over reductions in military spending between Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey and Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson and the Defense Department.

Only the President can resolve the undercover conflict between the politically ambitious "secretary" for disarmament, Harold E. Stassen, and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and the State Department.

Only the President has the prestige to cut through the impasse over reduction of armaments that has resulted from recent non-attributed statements by Stassen that the United States has no intention of giving up nuclear armaments.

And, finally, only the President has the prestige with our allies to halt the decay that is threatening NATO.

All of these critical problems will be exaggerated by the inability of the President to provide leadership for some time. In fact, his long absence on vacation in Denver has already created confusion in the disarmament program and he has done nothing to resurrect the faltering determination of our NATO allies.

Low Boiling Point.

It is not generally known that President Eisenhower has a low boiling point, as is often the case with persons of high blood pressure, and his anger is easily aroused and is terrifying to his subordinates. One said that those mild blue eyes can become as cold as bottomless pools of ice.

As a result of his choleric disposition, the President's staff strive to prevent problems and conflicts from being presented to him in such a way as to arouse him. Hence the digests of the news daily, the innumerable briefings and the loyal anxiety of the staff to free him from undigested conflicts.

It is not unlikely that the President's emotional intensity will make it necessary, for his very life and good recovery, to keep him free from great decisions and the resolution of conflicts within the Administration for from four to six months. The pretense will be made, of course, that the staff's and security council's decision are the President's.

The simplest of the President's current problems is due to the disagreement of the Defense Department, including Secretary of Defense Wilson, with the Secretary of the Treasury over the latter's desire to reduce military spending by an additional billion dollars during the current fiscal year.

In presenting the budget to the Congress the Secretary of Defense asked that expenditure of $35,750,000,000 be approved for the current fiscal year. At the same time Wilson said he would attempt and expected to find savings of 5 per cent during the year so that expenditures would not exceed 34 billion dollars.

Of the savings anticipated by Wilson, $750,000,000 have been identified. The search continues for the other billion, but each dollar of savings is getting harder to locate.

The Secretary of Defense is aware of some of the difficulties created by his economy effort. It is unlikely, in fact, that he will succeed in getting down to his goal. Then to have Humphrey demand on top of his genuinely earnest effort that an additional billion of savings be found was, to put it mildly, not welcomed. Wilson realizes that in addition to financial responsibility, he also has a responsibility for the nation's security.

Aids Get Wilson Backing.

While the "budget exercise" was being put on by the comptroller of the Defense Department to chart compliance with Humphrey's demand, the secretaries of the three services and their military chiefs all went to see Wilson at his summer home outside Detroit to present their objections, and all returned reassured of his support.

Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, went on to Denver after seeing the Secretary in Detroit and discussed Humphrey's proposal with the President and what the effect would be on the armed services. He told reporters, after seeing the President, that he looks for spending of more than 34 billion dollars this year, "but I don't think anybody can tell" just how much more. Thus the Humphrey effort was blocked at the time.

Humphrey was in Europe at this time, trying to find economies in the spending on foreign military and economic aid. It had been anticipated that as soon as he returned he would go out to Denver to see the President and present his case for more economies in the Defense Department.

The President both likes and respects his able Secretary of the Treasury. He also has a tendency to go along with the last person to present a case. In the Pentagon it was feared that Humphrey would win the argument. The armed services remembers how last year the President had ordered the Army to be cut back a year ahead of schedule and there was a chance that the same operation and other speed-ups in reductions and delays in spending would be worked again. As it now turns out it is Radford and not Humphrey that had the last word with the President.

Wilson Stands Pat.

Wilson has now informed Humphrey that the additional economies cannot be made without reducing forces, reducing contracts for new equipment, or slowing down deliveries. He has agreed to continue the search for every possible economy without injuring the national defense.

There is no one in the Administration but the President who could have umpired between these two strong characters. The "team" that will be running the Government for the next few months lacks the authority and the military prestige to substitute for him.

The State Department has looked upon the appointment of Stassen as special assistant to the President for disarmament with unconcealed distaste. There is an ambassador and a large staff responsible to the Secretary of State at the United Nations. This staff had worked with representatives of Great Britain, France and Canada on proposals for reduction of armaments which were made officially in London at the meetings of the disarmament subcommittee of the United Nations, of which the Soviet Union was a member, last March. The proposals, with some additional political demands as riders, were accepted by the Soviet Union and made a part of their proposal May 10.

Now Stassen leaks information that the "United States does not contemplate proceeding with atomic disarmament" despite conversations that have taken place within the subcommittee of the United Nations disarmament commission.

Dulles Speech to U.N.

In contrast to Stassen's idea that the inspection and control proposal which would provide warning against surprise attack was an end in itself, the Secretary of State, in his address to the United Nations Sept. 22, called the President's proposal only a beginning which would do "what is required of a beginning: namely, make it more possible to take subsequent steps."

"As such," Dulles declared, "it would open the way to further steps toward inspection and disarmament, which we all, and I emphatically include the United States, want to see."

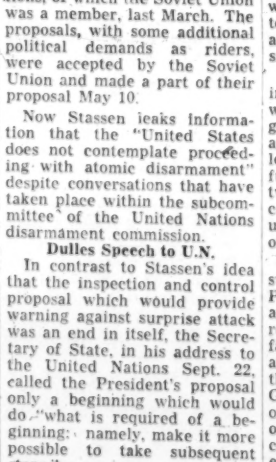

The Russians, to every appearance, would like to reduce the burden of armaments. Their proposal for inspection and control is not satisfactory to the West, but they have not closed the door to changes. However, if they believe what Stassen says—that our only interest is in an inspection and control system, a fire alarm, which would reveal targets in the Soviet Union that have been concealed at enormous expense and effort with the Iron Curtain and the Soviet security system — they will not play; there will be no progress made on reduction of armaments or in ending the threat of nuclear war.

Stassen believes that he understands and represents the President's ideas. Dulles has other ideas. The President is the one man who could cut through the knot.

Perhaps no one, not even President Eisenhower, could halt the erosion of NATO. If it can be done he is the only leader able to do it.

Not since the death of Lincoln has the absence of one man been so critical.

Former President Truman Tells Story of Boyhood

Studied Latin and History — 'I Do Not Remember a Bad Teacher . . .'

old colored man with a limp, had sawed the cord wood into the proper length for the cooking stove. The wood had to be split and carried to the wood box in the kitchen for "Aunt" Caroline's use in making cookies, corn bread and all sorts of good things to eat.

We had fantails, pouters and many kinds of common everyday pigeons. We carried on quite a trading business in pigeons, chickens, cats and pups. My mother was very patient with us and our pals and always came to our defense when we went a little too far and the various fathers decided to take a hand.

Began to Grow Up.

After a while we began to grow up. The gang scattered here and there, and shortly the serious business of education, jobs and girls began to take all our time.

Education progressed, and we learned geometry, music, rhetoric, logic and a smattering of astronomy. History and biography were my favorites. The lives of great men and famous women intrigued me, and I read all I could find about them.

We had an excellent history teacher, Miss Maggie Phelps, and an English teacher, Miss Tillie Brown, who was a genius at making us appreciate good literature. She also made us want to read it.

I do not remember a bad teacher in all my experience. They were all different, of course, but they were the salt of the earth. They gave us our high ideals, and they hardly ever received more than forty dollars a month for it.

Debt to History.

My debt to history is one which cannot be calculated. I know of no other motivation which so accounts for my awakening interest as a young lad in the principles of leadership and government.

Whether that early interest stemmed parity from some hereditary trait in my natural make-up is something for the psychologists to decide. But I know that the one great external influence which, more than anything else, nourished and sustained that interest in government and public service was the endless reading of history which I began as a boy and which I have kept up ever since.

In the process, I became very interested in the men who made world history. The lives of the great administrators of past ages intrigued me, and I soon learned that the really successful ones were few and far between. I wanted to know what caused the successes or the failures of all the famous leaders of history.

The only way to find the answers was to read. I pored over Plutarch's Lives time and time again, and spent as much time reading Abbott's biographies of famous men. I read the standard histories of ancient Egypt, the Mesopotamian cultures, Greece and Rome, the exploits of Genghis Khan and the stories of oriental civilizations, the accounts of the development of every modern country, and particularly the history of America.

Studied Lives of Presidents.

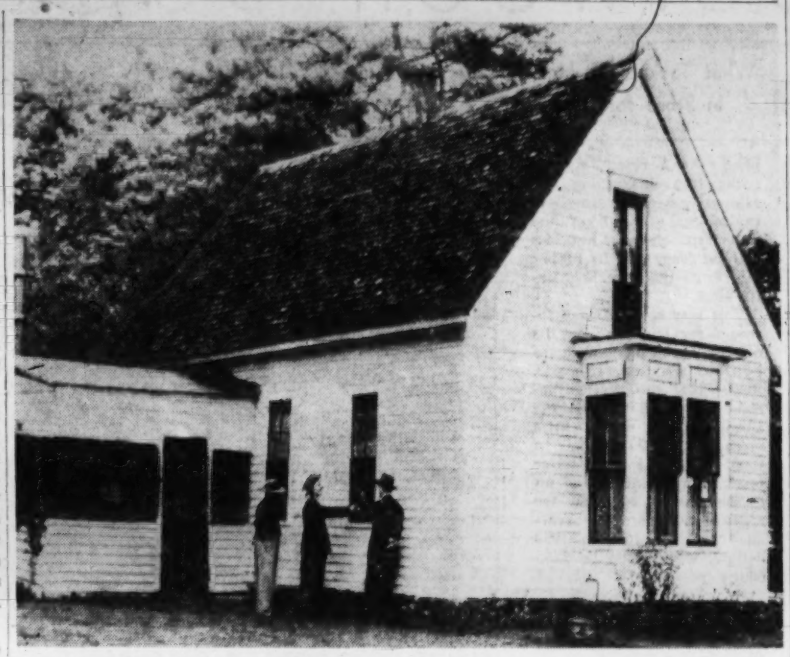

It seemed to me that if I could understand the true facts about the growth and development of the United States government and could know the details of the lives of its Presidents and political leaders, I would be getting for myself a valuable part of the total education which I hoped to have some day. I know of no surer way to get a solid foundation in political science and public administration than to study the histories of past administrations of the world's most successful system of government.

While still a boy, I could see that history had some extremely valuable lessons to teach. I learnt from it that a leader is a man who has the ability to get other people to do what they don't want to do, and like it. It takes a leader to put economic, military and government forces to work so they will operate. In those periods of history when there was no leadership, I learned that society usually groped through dark ages of one degree or another. I saw that it takes men to make history, or there would be no history. History does not make the man.

History showed me that Greece, which was not as big as the state of Missouri, left us ideas of government that are imperishable and fundamental to any society of people living together and governing themselves. It revealed to me that what came about in Philadelphia in 1776 really had its beginning in Hebrew times. In other words, I began to see that the history of the world has moved in cycles, and that very often we find ourselves in the midst of political circumstances which appear to be new but which might have existed in almost identical form at various times during the past six thousands years.

'Insubordinate General.'

Especially in reading the history of American Presidents did I become aware of the value of knowing what has gone before. I learned that the idea of universal military training, which was being hotly debated when I was in my teens, had first been recommended by President Washington in 1792. I learned of General McClellan, who traded his leadership for demagoguery and eventually defied his commander in chief, and was interested to learn how President Lincoln dealt with an insubordinate general.

These lessons were to stand me in good stead years later, when I was to be confronted with similar problems. There were countless other lessons which history taught, that would prove valuable to me. There was the miserable performance of the Committee on the Conduct of the War in the 1860's, which did such a poor job for the Federal government that Douglas Freeman, in his life of Robert E. Lee, said the committee was worth several divisions to the Confederacy. I was thoroughly familiar with the antics of that investigating committee, and as chairman of the Senate Special Committee to investigate the defense effort in the 1940's, I avoided every pitfall into which my predecessors had fallen.

I learned of the unique problems of Andrew Johnson, whose destiny it was to be thrust suddenly into the Presidency to fill the shoes of one of history's great leaders. When the same thing happened to me, I knew just how Johnson had coped with his problems, and I did not make the mistakes he made.

Witch Hunting in History.

History taught me about the periodic waves of hysteria which started with the witch craze during colonial days, produced the abominable Alien and Sedition Acts of the 1790's, flourished again in the Know-Nothing movement, the Anti-Masonic hysteria, Anti-Catholicism, the Ku Klux Klan, the Red Scare of 1919. When the cycle repeated itself during my administration in the form of anti-Communist hysteria and indiscriminate branding of innocent persons as subversives, I could deal with the situation calmly because I knew something about its background.

History taught me that the leader of any country, in order to assume his responsibilities as a leader, must know the history not only of his own country but of all the other great countries, and that he must make the effort to apply this knowledge to the decisions that have to be made for the welfare of all the people.

Worked in Drug Store.

My first paying job was opening up a drug store in Independence for Mr. Jim Clinton at 6:30 in the morning, mopping the floors, sweeping the sidewalk and having everything shipshape when Mr. Clinton came in. When everything was in order, there were bottles to wipe off and shelves to dust. There must have been a thousand bottles to dust and yards and yards of patent medicine cases and shelves to clean. At least it seemed that way, because I never finished the bottles and shelves by school time and had to start the next morning where I'd left off the day before. By the time I got around them all, it was time to start over. How I hated Latin-covered prescription bottles and patent medicine shelves.

The drug store had plate glass windows in front with a big glass jar shaped like an enlarged Greek vase in each window. Each vase was filled with colored water and oil in layers. Once a week the windows had to be washed and redecorated.

You walked through a front door on a tile floor with show cases on each side and a soda fountain on one side in front. Behind the cases on one side were interminable rows and rows of bottles with those Latin abbreviations on them. One in particular I remember, because Mr. Clinton told me to be careful not to break it. He said no more Icy Toad Feet were to be obtained. The mark on the bottle was IC TODES FOET. I never found out what it was.

Whiskey for Church Members.

In a little closet under the prescription case, which faced the front, and shut off the view of the back end of the store, was an assortment of whiskey bottles. Early in the morning, sometimes before Mr. Clinton arrived, the good church members and anti-saloon leaguers would come in for their early morning drink behind the prescription case at 10 cents an ounce. They would wipe their mouths, peep through the observation hole in the front of the case and depart. This procedure gave a 14-year-old boy quite a viewpoint on the public front of leading citizens and "amen-corner-praying" churchmen.

There were saloons aplenty around the square in Independence, and many leading men in town made no bones about going into them and buying a drink. I learned to think more highly of them than I did of the prescription counter drinkers.

I'll never forget my first week's wages—three big silver dollars. It was the biggest thing that had happened to me, and my father told me to save it for myself when I tried to give it to him on coming home that Saturday night.

After a few months at this morning and night work, my high school studies became rather heavy, and my father suggested that I quit my job and study harder, which I did.

Latin and Algebra.

I began going to my Aunt Ella Noland's house to study Latin and algebra with Cousin Nellie and Cousin Ethel and, incidentally, my beautiful young lady with the blue eyes and golden hair. This happened about twice a week; and on two other nights Fielding Houchens and I would go out to Miss Maggie Phelps and take special courses in history and geography. We were hoping to obtain appointments either to West Point or Annapolis. I was anxious for a higher education, and because my father was having financial troubles about this time, I knew he would not be able to send me to college two years hence when I finished high school. Unfortunately, my poor eyesight kept me from getting an appointment.

My high school experience is one that I will never forget. In my last year we organized a magazine for publication by the senior class and called it the "Gleam," after Tennyson's poem, "Merlin and the Gleam." It has been published ever since by each senior class. The editors were Charlie Ross, Tasker Taylor, Howard Morrison and myself, and I really think we got out a good magazine.

I was graduated in 1901 a short time after my seventeenth birthday. Bess Wallace, who afterwards became Mrs. Truman, was graduated in the same class, as was Charlie Ross, who was to be my Press Secretary in the White House.

I spent part of the summer on the farm, and during that summer I paid a visit to my Aunt Ada in Murphysboro, Illinois. She was my mother's youngest sister and a favorite of all of us. I spent a month there and had a grand time with my cousins whom I had never seen before. Aunt Ada had no children but Aunt Sally's older married daughter had lived with Aunt Ada, and had four children. Two of them were about my age. Aunt Sally's daughter, Cousin Sudie Wells and her two daughters sat on the platform in Murphysboro, in the Campaign of 1948.

Visit to St. Louis.

On the way home I stopped in St. Louis to see my mother's Aunt Hettie Powell. She used to visit us on the farm when I was very small, and I liked her very much. I saw my first professional horse races in St. Louis at that time. My cousin, Aunt Hettie's son, took me to the races, and I had a fine time.

In the fall of 1901 I got a job as timekeeper on the Santa Fe Railroad working for a contractor named L. J. Smith. I kept that job until the contract was finished, living in hobo camps along the Missouri river where the Santa Fe Railroad ran. I became very familiar with hobos and their viewpoints. I learned what it meant to work ten hours a day for $1.50, or 15 cents an hour.

Paid the Hobos.

These old hobos were characters in their own right. It was my duty to pay them off every Saturday night, if they wanted to be paid. The payoff took place in a saloon either in Sheffield or Independence. The object in paying the men in a saloon was to give them a chance to spend all their money right there and guarantee their being back to work on Monday morning. The checks were time checks and were signed by me as timekeeper. If I made a mistake in favor of the hobos, I lost the money; but if the mistake favored the contractor, he kept it. If a man drew his time under two weeks, he was discounted 10 per cent of his pay. The contractor got this 10 per cent instead of the saloon keeper. My salary was $35 a month and board, but I received a very down-to-earth experience in the handling of men.

The contract was finished along in May or June of 1902, and my father and I took a trip to southern Missouri. He had 40 acres of land in Oregon county. We visited the 40 acres that my father owned and found it more perpendicular than horizontal. It ran straight up the side of a mountain and certainly was not worth much. We returned home very much more familiar with southern Missouri land than when we left.

When we came back, I took a job in the mailing room of the Kansas City Star at $7 a week.

My father sold the house on Waldo avenue and bought another at 903 North Liberty street, where we stayed a few months, and then bought a house in Kansas City at 2108 Park avenue.

Vivian and I went to work at the National Bank of Commerce at $35 a month. We worked in that part of the bank called the "zoo" which handled the transit checks that came through the bank as through a clearing house. A short time after we started, Vivian left to go to work for the First National Bank, and I was promoted to personal filing clerk for the president and cashier of the bank. My salary was increased from $35 to $40 a month.

Up to $60 a Month.

My father traded the house at 2108 Park avenue for 80 acres of land in Henry county and moved to Clinton. I changed jobs and went to work at the Union National Bank where I was paid $60 a month as a bookkeeper. Vivian and I stayed on in Kansas City and boarded with a good old lady at 1314 Troost avenue where we paid $5 a week for room and board, which included breakfast and dinner. We usually bought a 10c box lunch and spent the noon hour eating it in a 5c picture show. We would go home weekends to be with the family in Clinton.

In 1904 we moved back to the farm at Grandview. My old bachelor uncle, Harrison Young, had been living with my grandmother on the farm, and he decided he wanted to quit. So, we moved in with my grandmother and ran the farm for the next 10 or 12 years.

When I was growing up, it occurred to me to watch the people around me to find out what they thought and what pleased them most. My father and mother were sentimentalists. My father had been raised by a religious man, Grandfather Truman, who set the women of his family on a pedestal and kept them there. No one could make remarks about my aunts or my mother in my father's presence without getting into serious trouble.

Protected His Sister.

My sister Mary Jane, named for his mother, was my father's favorite, and he made my brother and me look after her to see that she was properly protected in play and at school. We were a closely-knit family and exceedingly fond of each other.

My mother was partial to the boys, both in the family and in the neighborhood. I used to watch my father and mother closely to learn what I could do to please them, just as I did with my school teachers and playmates. Because of my efforts to get along with my associates, I usually was able to get what I wanted. It was successful on the farm, in school, in the army and, particularly, in the Senate.

Whenever I entered a new school room, I would watch the teacher and her attitude toward the pupils, study hard and try to know my lesson better than anyone else. I followed a similar program in my bank jobs. In this way I gained a reputation in the bank of always finishing the task that was set before me and of helping others get theirs done as well. Once in a while I would take the chief clerk of the Union National Bank, the head bookkeeper and the paying teller to the farm for a chicken dinner. My mother was great on fried chicken, baked ham, hot biscuits and custard pie. We would have a grand time, walk over the farm, look at the livestock, take horseback rides, and then go back to town for more work at the bank.

TOMORROW: Continuing his life story, Mr. Truman tells of joining the National Guard and the Masons, and of trying his fortune in oil. He recounts the story of how he became an artillery officer in World War I.

Press in Argentina Promised 'Freedom,' Avoids Exercising It

Newspapers Ask No Embarrassing Questions of New Regime — People Put More Credence in Rumors Than News.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 1.

"LIBERTAD" is the word most often scrawled on building fronts and shouted by groups of jubilant Argentines in the last two weeks, but indications are that true liberty still lies months or years ahead. Doubtless the rest of the world, as it watches events in this country, is most interested in the question of how soon there will be a resurgence of freedom, now that the 12-year dictatorship of President Juan D. Peron has been overthrown.

Contraditions already are appearing between the lofty expressions of policy by provisional President Eduardo Lonardi and his handling of specific problems. These discrepancies are explained on the ground Lonardi must not risk stirring the mass of Argentine workers, still mainly loyal to Peron, to a counterrevolt. The whole nation remembers that the workers' demands brought Peron back to power 10 years ago, a week after a group of army officers had banished him to Little island in the Rio de la Plata.

Later contraditions may well develop out of the nature of the upprising which began Sept. 16, and caused Peron to flee to a second exile.

The new revolt is commonly called "the revolution," but it would be more accurate to call it a putsch, or military coup. The men who planned and carried it out and now are in charge were Peron's stanchest supporters until recently. They were mainly high-ranking Army and Navy officers, devout Roman Catholics outraged by Peron's recent bitter campaign of persecution against their church.

Many Turned Coats.

A foreign observer is struck by the illogicality of the situation. The same Sherman tanks that blasted to rubble the headquarters of Peron's hoodlum Alianza Nationalista had been defending him a week earlier. The same police officers who have had to use tear gas to quell sporadic Peronista outbursts were jailing anti-Peronistas two weeks ago for "desacato," (disrespect) a month ago. The new freedom is in the same hands that enforced the old despotism.

But the main fact is that the tyrant is out, overthrown in the name of liberty.

President Lonardi's announcement about La Prensa in his inaugural address came as a shock to many who had expected him to turn back the former great independent newspaper immediately to its exiled editor and principal owner, Alberto Gainza Paz. Peron had closed down the paper in 1951 and later turned it over to the Peron-dominated General Confederation of Labor (CGT) to operate as its progaganda organ.

Deal With Labor Chief.

Instead, Lonardi let the Labor Federation's Peronista president, Hector Hugo di Pietro, announce over the government radio station and a network hookup with all private stations that the President had assured him the new government would not "modify the situation of the newspaper La Prensa."

The most plausible explanation for the broadcast is that Lonardi made a deal with di Pietro in return for the labor leader's promise to keep the workers on the job and head off a threatened wave of strikes in protest against Peron's overthrow.

La Prensa's suppression had become a chief symbol of Peron's tyranny, but it also is a special case. It was taken over by an act of the Peron-controlled Congress. Presumably, Lonardi, enforcing legality if not justice, takes the position that only another act of Congress can undo the seizure. The Congress has been dissolved, and a new one cannot be elected until the provisional government calls for elections—perhaps as long as a year or two.

Press Freedom Promised.

In his inaugural speech, Lonardi promised that freedom of the press and assembly would be reestablished immediately.

"Nothing could be sadder for me than the spectacle of a press uniformly drilled in the adulation of my government," he said. "Nobody will be molested for criticizing me. Very much to the contrary, I shall always seek in criticism, even that which shows the violence of certain temperaments, a guarantee of success or a rectification of errors.

"All those who want to fight for the common welfare from the pages of the periodical press may rest assured that in no country in the world will it enjoy a more authentic freedom."

Lonardi's first big press conference showed, however, that freedom cannot be turned on like a water faucet. Correspondents who crowded into the white room of Casa Rosada, the rose-colored government house, to hear him rattle off prepared answers to questions submitted in advance, all wanted to know about a report that the new government had arrested 12 generals and three colonels, but no one dared ask him about it. No one even thought of asking for his comment on the fact that Peron's bust had been removed. At the inauguration ceremony four days earlier it had been standing on a pedestal with those of all other former Argentine Presidents. Questions like that would have brought harassment and reprisals under Peron. Many are waiting to see how much the new regime will stand for.

Newspapers Timid.

Buenos Aires newspapers made no mention of the strong isolationist background of the new Foreign Minister, Mario Amadeo, whose resignation from a high foreign office post in 1944, when Argentina finally broke off diplomatic relations with the Rome-Berlin axis, give him a reputation as a pro-Nazi. Nor did they print any news for 24 hours about Peronista rioting in Rosario, Argentine's second largest city, in defiance of the new government.

Newspapers here apparently are acting on the theory that they have a free press as long as they don't use it too hard just at first.

More fundamental is the lack of popular faith in the press. After many years of rigid censorship, Argentines trust rumor more than the printed word. A rumor that Francisco Franco, the Spanish chief of state, had died, flew around Buenos Aires one night last week. Another had it that Peron had died, on the Paraguayan gunboat out in the harbor.

Many intelligent Argentines firmly believed the rumor a month ago, after the army had suppressed an earlier revolt by Naval and Air Force units, that United States warships were standing off the Argentine coast, ready to attack the Argentine Navy if it moved against Peron. This report was accompanied by "proof" in the form of a further rumor that pilots who used the words "roger" and "okay" were overheard talking by radio to an aircraft carrier.

This story made sense to many, since there is a widespread belief here that the United States had been helping maintain Peron in power for several years. When one American suggested the United States had more important things to do with its fleet, his Argentine companion said, "Yes, but look at the way the United States intervened in Guatemala."

War of Nerves.

Anti-Peronistas spread false reports systematically in their war of nerves against the dictatorship. Peron had good reason for his frequent condemnation of rumor-mongers. Presumably the Peronistas will use the same strategy.

The new government press secretary, Juan Carlos Goyeneche, promised there would be "no more official directives for the press." He also said Argentine and foreign correspondents would have free access to information and that newsprint supplies never again would be curtailed by the government to coerce the press.

Inquiry at Goyeneche's office disclosed the basis for a report that the new secretary has something of a Nazi background. An aid said Goyeneche was accredited by the German government in World War II, on the Russian front.

As for freedom of assembly, there is no restriction, now that the government has lifted a curfew which for a week barred groups of more than two persons on the street after 8 p.m.

Argentines are fond of assembling, whether going to a "futbol" game, swarming around a political dispute in Florida street or crowding into the Plaza de Mayo to chant slogans and hear the President speak.

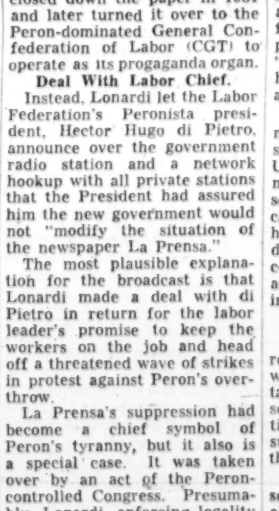

Under Perón, the CGT used to haul workers in from the suburbs by the bus load to fill the big public square for the appearances. It is an interesting question how many of those who used to shout for Peron were again in Plaza de Mayo for Lonardi's inauguration, shouting for the new president. Most observers think there was some overlap, if only of the civil servants from the government buildings around the square, but the inaugural crowd was better dressed and more of them brought automobiles than those in Peron's time.

Religious Freedom.

On the subject of freedom of worship, Lonardi has declared: "It will be my constant concern to maintain unaltered the respect for and guarantees of the church and the religious beliefs of all, whatever their creed."

There has been no clear indication yet what action he will take on various Peronista moves that were bitterly opposed by the Roman Catholic Church. The last Congress, now dissolved, passed a law calling for a national referendum in November on a proposal to separate church and state. The date of the election later was postponed six months.

What Technology Has In Store for Us

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN

Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

GEORGE SOULE

TIME FOR LIVING, by George Soule. (Viking Press, 184 pgs., including index, $3.)

WHAT lies ahead for the United States makes a fascinating subject of speculation not only for Americans but also for thoughtful people throughout the world. This nation's economic power is such that it exercises a gravitational pull on all other people whether it wants to or not; and its influence is cultural as well as economic. Noting this many foreigners profess to believe that the Americanization of mankind cannot be stayed by anything short of atomic war and both possibilities, to them, seem equally terrifying.

Sensitive Americans are also apprehensive. Without agreeing that America is completely materialistic they fear that a further preoccupation with goods, gimmicks and gadgets and an increased emphasis on quantitative rather than qualitative values will ultimately desensitize and dehumanize our whole people. Standardization, robotization and finally the extinction of democracy would then be inescapable.

With these familiar prophecies in mind it is refreshing to find a hard headed observer of the American scene—one not given to Utopian visions—who says that such a fate is by no means predetermined. On the contrary he believes that the "modern age" toward which the United States is now leading the world could amount to another "renaissance" in which the creative urges of mankind would again express themselves through a new and vital art and on a new and higher level.

THIS observer is the economist George Soule. Mr. Soule presents his conclusions in a book called "Time for Living" whose first chapters are devoted to an outline of our technological and economic progress over the last 85 years or so. The achievement thus revealed is stupendous and quite without precedent in the recorded history of man.

The whole Western World, of course, was transformed by the Industrial Revolution but it was in the United States that its technological lessons were most intensively applied. As a result, without going into intervening and related processes, the per capita real income of the American people has increased every year by 1.9 per cent from the year 1870 until 1950.

This may seem a small increase for one year but its effects are compounded; so by 1953 we find, says Mr. Soule, that the average income per family in the United States was a little more than $5000 a year. In itself this is a high water mark. But if this rate of increase should continue for another 80 years the average family income, in 1953 dollars, would then be $25,000 a year.

IN Mr. Soule's opinion based on the studies of many economists and statisticians this is indeed a likely development. All the signs favor it; the acceleration of labor saving devices, the replacement of human skills by mechanical skills, the development of new materials and new sources of energy. It is also highly likely that working time will decrease proportionately as income goes up.

What then? When every family has a $25,000 annual income and a worker spends no more than 24 hours a week on the job, how will society and human values be affected? Will the people die of boredom because all their wants have been fulfilled? Or will they use their ample lejsure in cultivating the graces of life, seeking spiritual and intellectual goals that are now but dimly envisaged and in waging war on such ancient enemies of mankind as fear and greed?

Mr. Soule does not commit himself to any specific prophecy. But he thinks it is at least possible that the majority of men will devote themselves to intensified and expanded forms of spiritual, intellectual and artistic activity.

THIS is not merely a wish, says Mr. Soule. A tendency toward the kinds of activity whose rewards are not measured in terms of dollars are increasingly in evidence. Already American workers have shown in many instances that they prefer to take their share of increased production in greater leisure. Already, too, millions of Americans are devoting more and more time to extracurricular and unpaid service in behalf of various civic, artistic, educational, religious and charitable enterprises. These services may be trivial or significant but they are all similar in being free from the values set in the market place.

In brief, Mr. Soule believes that the race of men will try to become like gods and not like overfed pigs in a furlined sty. In spite of human perversity and the dangers that always beset the progress of man this seems a more soundly based prophecy than Mr. Orwell's "1984" or Mr. Huxley's "Brave New World."

1874 was known all over the West as the Great Grasshopper Year. The insects descended upon the land in columns 150 miles wide and 100 miles long. Hundred-acre cornfields vanished in a few hours. The above cartoon—an illustration in THE SETTLERS' WEST—shows an eastern periodical's view of the homesteaders' plight. It was captioned "Savage Indian and his new ally," but the Indian was a minor irritant compared to his fearsome steed.

The Saga of the West

THE SETTLERS' WEST, by Martin F. Schmitt and Dee Brown. (Charles Scribner's Sons, 258 pgs., 300 photographs, $7.50.)

Reviewed by A. MERVYN DAVIES

"THE SETTLERS' WEST" is these two authors' third volume telling the history of the West in photographs and running narrative. The first, "Fighting Indians of the West," gave the story of the struggle between the United States and the Indian tribes. The second, "Trail Driving Days," began with the evolvement of the Longhorns from Spanish cattle brought to this continent in 1521, and ends with the Great Blizzard of 1887 which virtually wiped out the greatest range herds in the world.

Now in the new volume it is the story of the westward march of the emigrants that is told. The chapters show the lands where they settled, what they found and what they did; the towns that they sited, and how and why they grew; religion and education on the frontier; how the pioneers amused themselves—the Wild West shows and the rodeos, the music halls (usually called "Opera House"); how they maintained law and order and ran their politics.

The "characters" and mythmakers that came out of the West are well represented: Davy Crockett, "prototype for the western legends, the tall tales and Texas brags," Horace ("Go-West") Greeley, Hank Monk, Greeley's legendary coachman immortalized by Mark Twain; Buffalo Bill, Bret Harte, Capt. Jack, the Poet Scout, Charlie Siringo and his Texas Cow Boy.

The authors have done a magnificent job, by picture and text, of bringing to life the West of homesteaders and land agents, of little towns destined some to grow and some to die, and of the farms out on the lonely prairie. Nature now, not the Indians, was the principal enemy they had to contend with; in particular drouth, blizzard and the grasshopper.

The Migration West

THE AMERICAN FRONTIER: OUR UNIQUE HERITAGE, by Nelson Beecher Keyes. (Hanover House, 384 pgs., $3.50.)

Reviewed by JULIAN RAMMELKAMP

THIS is a popular history of the frontier which covers in episodic form the sweep of westward migration in North America from the earliest pre-Columbian explorations to the cattle, mining and lumbering frontiers into which the West was segmented in the latter part of the nineteenth century.

The book has an overall thesis—that "it was in the white heat of the frontier that American character was patterned and formed"—but after stating this the author forgets it and simply unreels many a fascinating story connected with the conquest of a continent. This, the telling of a good story, is his intent, and as such the book is well worth a couple of evenings of entertainment.

A meticulous historian might well object to some of the author's inclusions and judgments. Scholars no longer accept, without a great deal of watering down, the thesis of Frederick Jackson Turner that the wilderness by itself "patterned and formed" the American character. The American character was and is a complex matter which has been molded by several important influences, and the experience of living in or near a vast area of vacant forest and plain has been only one of them.

Then again, the inclusion of the Kensington Runestone in this account, around which the author builds a fanciful story of Norse penetration into Minnesota in 1362, is questionable. At least one modern authority, S. E. Morison, holds it to be a modern forgery.

In the later stages of the book, when he describes the gold rushes, cattle drives and the lumbering industry, the author writes not only with color and gusto, but with reasonable accuracy.

Famous Frontiersman

BUFFALO BILL: KING OF THE OLD WEST, by Elizabeth Jane Leonard and Julia Cody Goodman. (Library Publishers, 320 pgs., $4.95.)

HELL AMONG THE YEARLINGS, by Edmund Randolph. (W. W. Norton & Co., 308 pgs., $3.75.)

Reviewed by ARMAND W. REEDER

THIS biography of Col. William F. Cody is not a Ned Buntline version of the famous frontiersman, but an account of his life as his sister Julia Cody Goodman knew it and as she told it to Elizabeth Jane Leonard, with particular emphasis on the early years of Cody's life when his reputation was in the making.

William Frederick Cody was born in Scott county, Ia., on Feb. 26, 1846, and he was only 8 years old when the Cody family moved to Kansas—"bleeding Kansas" as it was known in those days, when it was deciding for itself the great issue of slavery or freedom.

As a militant anti-slavery man, young Billy's father, Isaac Cody, was thrown in the midst of the seething cauldron of hate engendered by the controversy. His life was in danger many times from the "border ruffians" who sought to drive the anti-slavery people out of Kansas, and it was little Billy who fought by his father's side. An injury at the hands of the ruffians was the direct cause of Isaac Cody's death. Billy was only 11 years old at the time and made up his mind to be the bread winner.

Billy's first job was with Majors and Russell, a freight hauling outfit as messenger boy. He was advanced to bullwhacker and killed his first Indian at the age of 12 when redskins attacked his wagon train. At 13 he was the youngest Pony Express rider. He then tried trapping and later became a scout for the United States Army. His services in the Indian campaigns attracted the attention of Gen. Phil Sheridan, who made him Chief of Scouts.

The nickname "Buffalo Bill" came from his prowess as a hunter and while supplying meat for the track workers on the Kansas Pacific Railroad, he was credited with having killed 4280 bison in one year.

When Ned Buntline, the dime-novelist, met Bill Cody, he was fascinated by the fast-talking, engaging young frontiersman, and as a result he wrote novels so full of the romance of the West with Buffalo Bill as the hero, that the accounts of his exploits made even Cody gasp with amazement.

Cody's association with Buntline gave him an idea and in the early eighties he capitalized on his exploits by organizing a Wild West show, replete with cowboys, Indians, trick riders and fancy shooters. He toured the world for 20 years with his show and became the friend of kings and princes in Europe and of many influential people in America. He made a fortune which, in later years, was wiped out by financial reverses.

Buffalo Bill has been the subject of much debunking by historians and biographers in recent years, but this biography, which faithfully records all of his colorful and spectacular life, reveals that many of his exploits have a basis in solid fact.

IN "Hell Among the Yearlings," the author gives a rollicking account of his youthful adventures in the West of the early 1920s—a West that was still in the process of changing from the old era of open range trail herding into the new West of fences and partial mechanization.

Scion of a prominent New York family, young Edmund was sickly, behind in his studies at Princeton and bewildered with life in general. After a youthful escapade which dismayed the school authorities and for which he drew a short suspension, he decided to go West. Landing in Montana, he fell in love with the country and decided to stay.

Mr. Randolph writes of the western country lovingly and with gusto—of the bracing air, the still nights when only the howl of the coyote could be heard; of the Cheyennes and the Crows, whose reservations were nearby; of the women, the prohibition beer, and the free, open life which renewed his health and his interests.

Legendary Figure

COCK OF THE WALK: THE LEGEND OF PANCHO VILLA, by Haldeen Braddy. (University of New Mexico Press, 174 pgs., $4.)

Reviewed by JAMES NELSON GOODSELL

FOR 40 years Pancho Villa has been a legendary figure. The passage of time has tended to perpetuate rather than diminish the legend. Of the many bandit-guerrilla leaders who led phases of Mexico's revolution none is more colorful than he. He has become a symbol of the revolution's lawlessness and savagery.

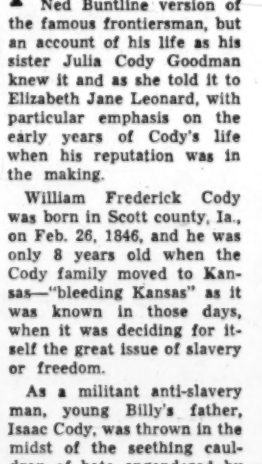

Though he was always a bandit, engaging in a continuous spree of pillage and murder, he created a legend for the Mexicans by his invasion of the United States, at a time when our country was much hated by those living south of the border. This made him a popular idol in Mexico.

The continuing interest in Villa centers in the legend rather than in the man himself. Indeed, his real name, Doroteo Arango, has been lost to history. Probably this is just as well, for legends when accepted as truth became potent factors in history, and to erase the Villa legend would be to leave a large void.

Dr. Braddy, professor of history at Texas Western College in El Paso, has lived with this legend for nearly 20 years. In "Cock of the Walk" he tries to differentiate the legend from fact. Such a task seems doomed to failure from the outset as the two have become so intertwined.

Actually, what he has done is to help perpetuate the legend. While his book contains little new material it gives a fairly adequate treatment to all phases of Villa's career—something heretofore lacking in books on him.

His appraisal of Villa as "more cocky than bloodthirsty" is questionable, as are his efforts to shift the gorier aspects of the legend to the bandit's hirelings. Though the book does much to remove the smoke-screen surrounding Villa and his legend, it is not the definitive study that this reviewer would like to see.

NOVEL

The Third Force of Being

THE GENIUS AND THE GODDESS, by Aldous Huxley. (Harper & Bros., 168 pgs., $2.75.)

Reviewed by ERNEST KIRSCHTEN

A HOSPITAL siege long enough for rereading most of Aldous Huxley's novels brought the recollection of how much of a preacher he has always been. Those who read, for example, "Point Counter-Point" when it first appeared, depending perhaps on their age at the time, may now recall it as a manifestation of post-war (1914-1918) "emancipation," or as a sharp expose of certain literary figures. But those with the better memories—and those who have dipped into the book from time to time since that first reading—will be aware of the barely fictionized dissertations on what may be not too inadequately called the "super-conscious"

That "third force" of being, now regarded as akin to the theologian's grace and embodied in sex, is Mr. Huxley's theme in his new novel, "The Genius and the Goddess." Although more severe in scope than its predecessors, this book gives the story a greater ascendancy over the sermon until, having served the sermon's purpose, the story is stopped in full career by an auto accident. But it is good fiction and it makes fascinating reading until a full development of the situation is cut short.

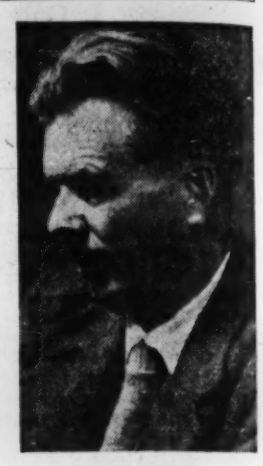

Perhaps Mr. Huxley felt such development unnecessary for the reader, that its course is so inevitable that it could produce nothing but literary anti-climax, that with a hint or two the reader can wind matters up according to the rigidities of his own artistic standards. This approach wastes no words, but is it the true novelist's method thus to supply the ingredients of the story, rather than to tell it in full?

THE genius of this story is an internationally famous scientist, yet what keeps him going is—quite bluntly—sex. This is supplied by the goddess, a calm, benign, naturally direct wife, as long as she lives. After her death and after the pathetic protestations of his dependence on her, the genius—so we are told—finds a younger woman who keeps him going like an old phonograph, a man who never realized that living also is a preparation for the end of living.

Years after the events, the story is told over a quiet Christmas Eve drink by its third chief character. Long ago he had come to the scientist's laboratory and to his home as a young assistant. He was for the first time away from his mother, a preacher's widow, who had brought him up as an almost unbelievable prude. Inevitably he is more impressed by the calm adequacy of the goddess than by the genius who is living more and more on past accomplishments and on his wife's present support.

When she leaves to attend her dying mother, the genius becomes sick, seriously sick. It is his way of forcing her back. She does come home, but distraught for having to leave a death-bed in response to this pressure. And in the night she comes to the young man for the comfort, the replenishing of strength, which he had had no thought of affording. For him, this is an initiation not to be undone, trouble him as it may. Not equipped with his mother-nurtured inhibitions, it is for her natural enough. Her attitude, of course, changes that of the young man.

For your classic dramatist this would be material for tragedy—or should it be comedy?—especially since the goddess has a daughter whose childishly one-sided infatuation with the young man turns into suspicion and hatred of him and her mother. Here Mr. Huxley arranges the accident which takes mother and daughter off the scene and leaves the rest to the reader. The preaching prevails over the story-telling; the young man has learned what he needed to learn. That we gather from his talk many years later over that Christmas Eve drink.

THERE are questions enough to be asked. For example, considering his intellectual accomplishments, is not the character of the genius rather grossly oversimplified? Are not the ministrations of the goddess and the sources of her strength a little too readily available? Is not the young man's conversion too placidly achieved? Indeed, are truly deep emotions brought into play anywhere?

But no doubt a genius and goddess—and those who come under their sway— are more likely to act according to a pattern of convenience than are more ordinary individuals for whom the pattern of life is more confused, and perhaps a little less superficial. Perhaps thoughts like these troubled Huxley, the storyteller, but then this story, or this half-story, was meant to serve Huxley, the preacher. No doubt those inclined to agree with him will not object to the limitations of a parable which, after all, offers an evening of intriguing reading.

Had He Been a Cat

SO TIBERIUS, by Ethel Mannin. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, 120 pgs., $2.50.)

Reviewed by RUTH WALKER

THIS is a book about a cat, the inscrutable, impersonal, independent cat. But it is not a cutie-cutie book, and the cat does not talk, thank heavens. It is also a book about the man the cat lives with, and certain years of pain and loneliness and awakening that he passes through.

The treatment is deft and subtle, and the writing beautiful and somehow compelling, even though the author, a highly sensitive English woman, likes to run over the philosophical passages several times each, in different wording. The cat is an ordinary, natural black cat, one of three females which play so big a part in the man's life. One cannot say that the behavior of the cat explains to the man the elusiveness of the other two females, but somehow, when all three have gone from his life, he finds himself more at peace.

An unusual book. One wishes the publisher had seen fit to say more about the author on the jacket, instead of quoting from the book. The title is from a quatrain by Matthew Arnold, which ends:

"So Tiberius would have sat
Had Tiberius been a cat."

STASSEN IS SAID TO BE SURE OF OK FOR 'OPEN SKY'

Indicates Confidence of Russian Approval of President's Inspection Idea.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 1 (AP)—Presidential arms adviser Harold E. Stassen is reported confident the Russians will accept President Eisenhower's "open sky" inspection exchange plan.

Stassen indicated this after conferring about 30 minutes Friday with Russian disarmament delegate Arkady A. Sobolev.

The United States and Soviet representatives met after a session of the United Nations Disarmament subcommittee. The two have conferred privately about six times since the subcommittee resumed meetings a month ago, but no one will discuss the substance of their talk.

Stassen has been represented as feeling confident the Russians will accept the Eisenhower plan, despite a letter from Premier Bulganin raising numerous questions.

President Eisenhower outlined the plan at the Geneva summit conference, calling for a mutual exchange of aerial inspection and military blueprints between the United States and the Soviet Union.

During the meeting with Sobolev, Stassen referred to a Soviet point that Russia was withdrawing troops from areas outside the Soviet Union and the West should do the same.

Stassen was said to have replied that even with the Soviet withdrawals, the number of Russian troops outside Soviet boundaries exceeds the number of American troops outside United States boundaries. Stassen did not mention figures.

Stassen stressed that the United States is sincere in its willingness to take part in a sound, reliable agreement for reduction of armaments of all types and that no one in any capital should question that sincerity.

AIKEN DENIES FARMERS ARE IN DEPRESSION

'It Is Scarecrow Issue That Simply Is Not True,' Vermont Senator Declares.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP) — Senator George D. Aiken, Vermont, said today that "most Democrats and even a few Republicans are trying to stampede the country into believing there is a serious farm depression."

"It is a scarecrow political issue that simply is not true," said Aiken, the senior Republican on the Senate Agriculture Committee and a strong supporter of the Eisenhower Administration's farm program.

Aiken spoke in an interview following the Agriculture Department's report yesterday that prices of farm products climbed 1 per cent between mid-August and mid-September.

4-Month Drop Halted.

The increase reversed a four-month decline in farm prices, but still left them about 4.5 per cent below those of a year ago and some 21.4 per cent below the February 1951 record high. However prices paid by farmers for goods and services continued a moderate decline, decreasing one-third of 1 per cent during the month to place them three-fourths of 1 per cent below the level of a year ago.

The farm question has been shaping up as a major political issue in the 1956 presidential-congressional election campaign, with Democrats saying Republican farm programs are inadequate and Republicans replying that troubles with prices and surpluses stemmed from past Democratic programs.

Yesterday's report placed the general level of farm prices at 83 per cent of parity as of mid-September. Parity is the price said by law to be fair to the farmer in terms of costs. While a number of products rose in price during the month, only one—grapefruit—was selling at parity or better as of Sept. 15.

Bright Outlook.'

Aiken said he is "not satisfied with farm income and prices as related to other fields and I have been." But, he said, "we have never had a brighter outlook for commercial agriculture."

He said farm credit agencies report "farmers are paying their obligations on time and even ahead of time. The cash position of farmers is holding up and they remain a good market for government bonds."

Also, he said, farmers are investing hundreds of millions of dollars in new equipment, fertilizer and other capital expansion. He declared this is the main reason why net farm income at present is lower than it has been.

REHEARING SOUGHT IN REICHSTAG FIRE CASE CONVICTION

BERLIN, Oct. 1 (AP)—A West Berlin court was asked today to reopen the Reichstag fire case to clear the name of a Dutch youth executed by the Nazis as the perpetrator.

The family of Marinus Van Der Lubbe instituted the case through Dr. Arthur Brandt, German attorney who practiced law in New York and Boston during the Nazi era.

J. M. Van Der Lubbe of Amsterdam appealed to the court to establish: (1) that his brother, Marinus, was innocent and had been selected by the Nazis to cover their own guilt, and (2) that the Reich court in Leipzig which sentenced Van Der Lubbe to death in December 1933 violated all common law by applying a hastily drawn decree retroactively.

The building — which had sheltered the parliaments of imperial Germany and the Weimar republic — was badly damaged by fire in February 1933, after Hitler's rise to power.

The Nazis blamed the arson on Communists, and Hitler used the incident to justify a decree that any act against the Nazi government could be punished by death.

GEN. HEUSINGER UNLIKELY TO GET HIGH BONN POST

BONN, Oct. 1 (AP)—Political sources said today West Germany's powerful personnel committee is expected to veto the appointment of former Lt. Gen. Adolf Heusinger as one of the highest ranking generals in the new German army.

The committee, composed of 38 prominent citizens, has absolute veto over the appointment of all officers of the rank of colonel and above. It was appointed by Parliament as a civilian control over the creation of the new army.

The security committee of the Bundestag announced Heusinger's appointment last July. There had been reports he would become chief of staff.

The sources said the committee believes Heusinger, the chief planner of the new German army, did not have enough experience of command of troops. It also was reported to have said he had been "a little too co-operative with the Nazis."

Heusinger was in the room and was injured when a bomb exploded in Hitler's East Prussian headquarters on July 20, 1944. His official biography says he was later arrested for his connection with the plot.

CIVIL SERVICE STATUS FOR U.S. JOBS ABROAD

Action Expected in Two Weeks — Most Employes in Defense Department.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (UP) —The Eisenhower Administration plans to bring some 200,000 United States civilian employes overseas into the civil service system by executive order, it was learned today.

Congressional sources said the action, expected within the next two weeks, will give civil service job protection to the workers, who are now outside the civil service system. Most are defense department employes.

But these sources said they expect the Administration will require these workers to take some kind of test to qualify for their jobs.

Reason For Trip.

The contemplated action is one of the reasons why a House civil service subcommittee, headed by Representative James H. Morrison (Dem.), Louisiana, is now engaged in an on-the-spot investigation of United States personnel practices in Europe.

The trip was recently criticized by Chairman Omar Burleson (Dem.), Texas, of the House Administration committee.

Noting that the resolution authorizing the investigation confined it to continental United States, he questioned the legal right of the group to spend United States counterpart funds to finance its travels.

Counterpart funds are moneys set aside by European countries for use by the United States Government as part repayment for United States economic aid. These funds must be spent in the foreign country involved, but are available to congressional committees traveling abroad on official business.

Subpena Powers.

Sources close to the subcommittee conceded that the resolution granting the investigators subpena powers was confined to continental United States. But they said the congressional reorganization act directed the committee to "exercise continuous watchfulness" over United States personnel practices everywhere.

They said the trip also will give subcommittee members information about United States employes overseas that they could not obtain here.

It was understood that the chairman of the full committee, Tom Murray (Dem.), Tennessee, already has notified the State Department that the group is on official business and is entitled to use the counterpart funds.

MAN RIGHT IN '52 SAYS PRESIDENT WILL NOT RUN

A decision not to seek re-election was reached by President Eisenhower several months ago, in the opinion of Leonard V. Finder of St. Louis, who correctly forecast Mr. Eisenhower's decision to seek the presidency in 1952.

Finder, vice president and secretary of Universal Match Corp., told the Post-Dispatch he based his prediction on knowledge of Mr. Eisenhower's character and on the President's public record. A personal friend of the Chief Executive, Finder said he had discussed the possibility of a second term with Mr. Eisenhower, but added that the President at no time said flatly he would not run again.

He said he does not believe the President's heart attack will have any bearing on the situation, and he hopes the people will not attribute a decision to stay out of the race to health reasons.

"The President honestly and thankfully believes his objectives have been sufficiently achieved so that he no longer need to continue in office," Finder said.

AUSTRIAN UTILITY SEEKING U.S. OR BRITISH REACTOR

VIENNA, Oct. 1 (AP)—The Austrian Socialist news agency said today the Austrian state electric power company is negotiating with American and British firms for the purchase of atomic reactors for a 10,000-kilowatt electric power station.

The announcement said the atomic station, erected somewhere along the river Danube at a cost of $4,000,000, would provide increased electricity in the winter demand peaks when water shortages cause hydro-electric power supply to drop. The station would also be used as a training center for Austrian atomic scientists, the agency said.

READY-TO-COOK POTATOES NOW IN SEVERAL FORMS

Most of the plants do the peeling by an abrasive method.

CHARLES H. CHRISTIE DIES, MADE FIRST FILM COMEDIES

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Oct. 1 (AP)—Charles H. Christie, one of two brothers who made the famous Christie comedies of the silent movie era, died today at his home here at the age of 75. Christie comedies were Hollywood's first.

Al Christie, who died in 1951, had started making the comedies in 1911, even before Mack Sennett. Charles held down the administrative end of the company. The brothers were a major enterprise in the film industry until 1929 when the advent of sound pictures, double features and the depression hurt the two-reel comedy business.

Charles had worked in the real estate business for the last 20 years.

ARMY ENGINEERS USE BIG CRANE TO RESCUE FIREMEN

WINSTED, Conn., Oct. 1 (AP) —Using a towering crane, Army engineers plucked five firemen from a flame-licked rooftop today then fought a fast-spreading fire to save what was left of the business section of this flood-stricken city.

The engineers, working to rebuild the battered city, rushed into the business district when fire broke out in two abandoned factory buildings this afternoon.

Their first job was to rescue the firemen, surrounded by flames in a rooftop of an adjacent building.

The firemen were working from the building, pouring water into the fire, but the wind whipped the flames onto and around the roof. The Army crane moved in quickly and picked up four of the firefighters in its big scoop. The fifth fireman scrambled down the crane rigging.

Immediately after the rescue the engineers moved in to stop the fire from spreading down the battered street. With bulldozers and cranes they smashed down a flood-damaged wooden building as the flames started spreading.

Meantime, firemen battled the blaze which started in the abandoned Carter & Hakes Co., then leaped 50 feet across the Mad river and spread to the Colt Co. building, also abandoned since the flood Aug. 19.

EISENHOWER REASSURES GREECE ON CYPRUS ISSUE

The President said in the message, which was apparently delayed by his illness: "In the present difficult moments I wish to assure Your Majesty of my profound conviction regarding the supreme importance of the bonds of close friendship uniting Greece and the United States.

"Even if there have been divergences of opinions about the Cyprus issue we will not allow such divergences to disturb our great friendship and sympathy with Greece."

Spotlight Is on Nixon and Adams Now

BRANDT TELLS OF NIXON'S ROLE AS VICE PRESIDENT

not only vindicated himself but I feel he has acted as a man of courage and honor and stands higher than ever before."

From then on, Nixon has been an Eisenhower protege and he in turn has proved a model understudy.

One reason Democratic leaders are so bitter about Nixon is that he recouped his own and Republican fortunes by this single broadcast. Reporters on the Eisenhower train checking the reaction at the whistle stops to the Nixon performance found that a preponderance of the radio and television audiences thought the dramatic broadcast had helped Republican chances.

'Numbers Game.'

A more tangible reason for Democratic hostility is Nixon's activities in the 1954 congressional and state campaigns in 1954 in which he hammered on the Republican claim that the Eisenhower Administration had been responsible for the separation of 6926 Communists and security risks from the Government payroll. This playing of the political "numbers game" so infuriated Representative Sam Rayburn and Senator Lyndon B. Johnson, later to become Speaker and Senate Majority Leader respectively, that they threatened to end the bipartisan co-operation with the White House unless Nixon stopped his distortions.

A third reason for Democratic criticism was the belief that Nixon would be the President's running mate again next year or if Mr. Eisenhower declined to seek re-election, Nixon would be the top Republican contender for the first place nomination. To that end, many Democratic leaders proclaimed they would like to see Nixon run against any Democratic presidential candidate.

Gallup polls substantiated the Democratic claim. Before the Eisenhower illness, the pollsters asked:

"Suppose Eisenhower is definitely not a candidate. In this case which one of the men on the list would you like to see nominated as the Republican candidate in 1956?"

The result was:

Candidate.	Rep. Voters. %	Independent. %
Earl Warren	25	31
Richard M. Nixon	19	11
Thomas E. Dewey	11	9
Harold E. Stassen	6	9
John Foster Dulles	8	7
John W. Bricker	4	3
J. R. McCarthy	4	5
H. C. Lodge Jr.	4	4
Wm. F. Knowland	4	3
Everett M. Dirksen	4	1
None, no opinion	11	17

Chief Justice Earl Warren seemingly has irrevocably taken himself out of the 1956 contest. There will be great pressures on him to change his mind but there is no evidence as of today that he will. This puts Nixon at the top in the Republican book.

Another Gallup poll ran a hypothetical race between Nixon and Democrats Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois and Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee. Nixon lost both these sampling contests.

Nixon's legislative record in the House and Senate puts him in the Eisenhower middle-of-road category. As a member of the House Education and Labor Committee he helped draft the Taft-Hartley Labor Relations act in 1947 and a year later, as a member of the Un-American Activities Committee he co-sponsored the Mundt - Nixon Communist Control Bill, parts of which were incorporated in the McCarran Internal Security Act. In House votes on domestic issues he often opposed Truman's Fair Deal proposals such as compulsory health insurance and the Brannan farm plan but voted for price controls, Federal funds for school construction and anti-trust legislation. In the Senate he voted to give the marginal off-shore oil lands to the states and generally with Knowland on domestic issues.

As Representative and Senator he supported the bipartisan foreign policy and was closer to views of Senator Vandenberg than those of Taft. His foreign affairs record, as compiled by the impartial Congressional Quarterly, was 96 per cent support of the bipartisan policy during his first term in the House, 95 per cent in his second term and 87 per cent during his two years in the Senate.

On Both Sides.

His critics say he has been on both sides of every important question and has made equally fervent speeches in behalf of Joseph T. Meek, of Illinois, in his unsuccessful bid for the Senate, and Clifford Case of New Jersey for his successful try. His supporters retort that he believes in Republican unity and that it's a Vice President's duty to give the President a Republican Congress. He has worked with Senator Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin and has worked against him.

As the young man "most likely to succeed" in Republican politics—in 1960, 1964 or 1968, if not in 1956—Nixon has, with the exception of the brief secret fund episode, won consistent praise from his party elders. He lives in a $40,000 home in Washington, regularly attends church services with his wife and two daughters, dutifully attends the important diplomatic and other official dinners and affairs which the President cannot attend, meets visiting dignitaries at the railroad station or the airport, and speaks at the political and other large gatherings that need a "big name" to attract the customers. This he does with dignity and charm.

Recreation.

For recreation from his busy official life, he plays golf at the Burning Tree Club, of which the President and the Assistant to the President, Sherman Adams, are also members. He took up the game after his election as Vice President and usually goes around the course with William P. Rogers, Deputy Attorney General, who has also been singled out by the President as one of the young men the Republicans should advance. He has kept his locker in the main locker room and did not join the President and a small group of club members in a new, specially built addition.

In his early months as Vice President he found he had time to practice in the mornings, and to improve his game he came to the club at 8 a.m. so he could be at the opening of the Senate at noon.

He says his score is "classified information," but it is no secret that his game has immensely improved under practice and the expert tutelage of some famous professionals and amateurs. He's not as proficient or enthusiastic as the President, but given a couple of strokes a side he could put up a challenging game.

was irrevocably committed and it was too late.

For some months there had been rumors that Adams was taking a keen personal interest in the Dixon-Yates contract, which would have authorized private electric power companies to build facilities to feed private power into the TVA system, but with the exception of the Cooper incident there was nothing on the public record to show what he was doing until last July.

It was then disclosed during a Senate investigation of the contract, which the Administration was forced to cancel, that ope Saturday afternoon in June, Adams telephoned J. Sinclair Armstrong, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, suggesting a delay in an SEC Dixon-Yates hearing.

Hearing Postponed.

Armstrong testified the reason Adams gave was that "certain government attorneys" were away from Washington. The hearing was postponed and subsequently Representative Melvin Price (Dem.), East St. Louis, a member of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, observed in a House speech that the testimony postponed was that of Adolphe Wenzell, New York investment banker who had a controversial role in the preparation of the contract.

Price charged Adams interfered with the SEC proceeding "for obvious political ends." He declared:

"On the very day that the House of Representatives was considering legislation for the Dixon - Yates transmission line, Wenzell was to appear before the SEC. His testimony would have laid bare the record of which I speak today. It would have affected our voting."

Adams was invited to explain this interference before the Senate committee, headed by Senator Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee. He declined, on the ground he would be questioned about matters that would intrude on executive powers.

Newspaper Comment.

Adams's refusal to testify (he was not subpenaed) resulted in a good deal of criticism. The Atlanta Journal advised Mr. Eisenhower "to take Sherman Adams aside and straighten him out." The Chicago Tribune said Adams had "run out." The Washington Post and Times Herald called Adams's intervention "deplorable." In the New York Times' Arthur Krock wrote that it was a "bad blunder."

The extent to which Adams has engaged in such activities during the last three years is not known but Washington's impression of the Adams's operation is that what he did in the Dixon-Yates case is typical and rather routine. His telephone lines are so busy that he has been known to use two instruments at once.

Former Senator Harry P. Cain, Republican of Washington, now a member of the Subversive Activities Control Board, related recently how Adams gave him "unshirted hell" for Cain's attacks on the Administration security program. Adams called Cain by telephone and asked him to come to his office. Cain went to the White House.

"I tried to explain the merits of my criticism of the security program," Cain said, "but he snorted, 'To hell with the merits. You understand this problem better than I do but this is a team and you are expected to play on it.'"

When the Administration found it necessary to fire Clarence E. Manion as chairman of the President's Commission on Intergovernmental Relations it was Adams who handed Manion the bad news. Manion, an arch - conservative, supported the Administration-disapproved Bricker amendment to restrict presidential powers and departed otherwise from Administration policy.

President Stands Aside.

It was reportedly Adams who persuaded Mr. Eisenhower to stand aside from the 1954 congressional campaigns on the ground such grass-roots politicking would lower the prestige of the Presidency. This drew complaints from many Republican politicians that they were being denied White House help they desperately needed. Mr. Eisenhower yielded to the pleas of the politicians only in the closing days of the campaign. His last-minute efforts came too late, however, to do much good. Democrats captured control of both houses.

All major political patronage problems are cleared through Adams's office. Adams is constantly in touch with Leonard Hall, chairman of the Republican National Committee. Job-hungry Republicans were critical of Adams in the early days of the Administration because more patronage was not handed out.

Adams played a leading role in mapping Administration strategy when Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep.), Wisconsin, took on the United States Army. Testimony before Congress disclosed it was Adams who suggested the Army draw up a full record of its dispute with McCarthy. McCarthy, who was censured by the Senate, strongly criticized Adams for what McCarthy alleged was Adams's part in the counter-attacks on McCarthy.

Loyal to President.

There is no question of Adams's loyalty to the President, or to the Republican party, for that matter. It is reported that whenever Adams happens to meet some party "fat cat" he makes a point of asking the individual whether there is anything he can do for him.

Adams is not an old friend of the President. He obtained his powerful post because of services rendered just before Gen. Eisenhower was nominated. It can be argued that without the support of Adams Mr. Eisenhower would not now be President.

In 1951 Adams was serving as an industrious, competent but not great Governor of New Hampshire (population 533,000) and was trying to make up his mind whether to support Gen. Eisenhower or Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio for the Presidency. Mrs. Adams has said the Governor's decision to support Gen. Eisenhower was a hard one and was reached after months of thought. Adams rejected Taft finally because he thought the late Ohio Senator had no chance of winning, Mrs. Adams has said.

Eisenhower and Taft entered in the New Hampshire primaries of March 1952. Gen. Eisenhower won and was started on the road to the nomination at Chicago later in the year. Gen. Eisenhower's victory may well have been due to the all-out support given his candidacy by Adams, who spoke against Taft and who directed the members of the State Legislature to get out the vote for the General. At this time, Adams did not know Mr. Eisenhower personally.

1952 Meeting.

Mr. Eisenhower met the Yankee Governor in the spring of 1952 and was impressed with his ability as a political strategist. Adams became the Eisenhower floor manager at the Chicago convention in July and during the ensuing campaign was the five-star General's top adviser. Having won the election from Adlai E. Stevenson, Gen. Eisenhower announced Nov. 24, 1952, that Adams would be given the $20,000-a-year White House post then occupied by President Truman's appointee, John R. Steelman.

In his capacity as the Assistant to the President Adams directs a sub-Cabinet group of under secretaries and sits in on meetings of the Cabinet and the National Security Council. More important from the viewpoint of his personal power is the fact that he has the President's ear. Until Mr. Eisenhower's illness, Adams saw the President as often each day as he deemed it necessary. Presumably he will see Mr. Eisenhower from now on as frequently as the doctors permit.

Because so many persons seeking favors or having business with the Administration have been told to "see Sherm," or "ask the Governor," only to be turned down flat, Adams has been called the Administration "no" man. A biography written in 1954 started out this way:

"Sherman Adams never says 'no, I'm sorry.' He just says 'no.' In the first place, he might not be sorry. And in the second place, why use three words when one will do?"

Protects President.

One of Adams's jobs is to protect the President from having to cope with a flood of unnecessary details, and he seems to have thrown up a guard to protect himself from wasting time with superfluous words or activities. His telephone conversations sometimes sound like a form of oral shorthand.

Those who know the hard-working Adams slightly, regard him as a man with an icy personality. Those who know him better say he is not cold, although they acknowledge he is blunt and demanding. He is a martinet. There are recorded incidents tending to illustrate Adams has a sense of humor, but they are not conclusive. A characteristic facial expression is a frown. His idea of an affectionate greeting, it has been reported, is to squeeze a friend's cranium in a muscular headlock.

Adams is about 5 feet, 7 inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. He has been described as "wintry" looking. His hair is thick and nearly white and is cut rather short. He is 56 years old and trim enough to wear the same clothes he wore as an undergraduate at Dartmouth College. He still has some of this campus attire and dons it occasionally on Saturdays. His dress during the normal working week is conservative, but his tastes are sporty enough to include a green convertible automobile, in which he drives to work early each morning.

A former lumberjack and lumber dealer, Adams entered politics in 1941. He served in the New Hampshire Legislature and for one term in the United States House of Representatives, where his voting record was conservative. He was elected Governor in 1948 and re-elected in 1950. He took a leave of absence without pay from the governorship to work for Mr. Eisenhower.

Not long before his heart attack, Mr. Eisenhower made it plain he thought no one in public life should be regarded as indispensable, including himself. Of all the men in the Administration, Adams comes closest to being indispensable to the President, particularly now.

AIRMAN RELEASED FROM RED CHINA PRISON MARRIED

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 1 (AP) The girl who waited two years and eight months for release of Sgt. Howard Brown from Red China became his bride today.

Miss Antoinette Palermo and Brown were married in Redeemer Catholic Church with Airman Harry Benjamin Jr., Worthington, Minn., and his wife, and Capt. and Mrs. Elmer F. Llewellyn, Missoula, Mont., among guests.

Brown, Llewellyn and Benjamin were three of 11 Americans released by the Chinese Reds early in August. They were members of a plane crew shot down in January 1953 during the Korean war.

After a wedding reception and dance tonight the newlyweds will leave on a honeymoon trip to France, won by the couple on a television show in New York. Brown will report to Bolling Field, Washington, Oct. 13 for Air Force duty.

LIONEL HAMPTON BAND'S BUS IN CRASH, 5 SERIOUSLY HURT

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES, N. M., Oct. 1 (AP)—A chartered Greyhound bus, carrying 27 members of the Lionel Hampton band and show personnel, swerved out of control and crashed down an embankment 22 miles south of Socorro this afternoon. Hampton was not hurt.

Five persons were seriously injured. These were taken to the Truth or Consequences hospital. Others believed to have suffered minor injuries were treated at the T or C hospital. Reports said that others were taken to hospitals at Socorro and Belen.

A passenger on the bus said the vehicle had a blow-out on the right front tire, swerved out of control, crossed U.S. 85 and crashed down the embankment on the left side of the highway.

8000 Sikhs Ordered Freed.

NEW DELHI, Oct. 1 (AP)— The Punjab state government has ordered the release of 8000 Sikhs arrested between May and July for agitating for a state in which their Hindu religious sect would be a majority. They had been held on charges of disturbing the peace by defying a government bar against shouting their slogans.

WISHES RUNAWAY DIPLOMATS HAD BEEN DISMISSED

LONDON, Oct. 1 (AP)—Herbert Morrison, Foreign Secretary in the former Labor Government, said last night runaway diplomats Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean should have been dismissed by the foreign service long before they fled behind the Iron Curtain.

Morrison was in charge of the foreign office when the two disappeared in May 1951.

"In both cases there were incidents in the course of their diplomatic careers which, apart from any question of security or of being of assistance to foreign governments, were in themselves undesirable," he told a political meeting.

"These happenings warranted them being asked to resign or be dismissed," he declared. "I think it is a pity this was not done."

He suggested that one of the reasons this was not done was that the Foreign Secretary's burden was "excessively heavy."

"It is difficult for the Foreign Secretary to devote an adequate proportion of his time to the administrative problems of the foreign service and to personal matters affecting the staff, as is done by ministers of the Home Department," Morrison said.

PROGRAMS FOR CHILDREN AT JEFFERSON MEMORIAL

The Missouri Historical Society's seventh annual educational series for children 7 to 12 years old will start Saturday at 10:30 a.m. in Jefferson Memorial.

Subject of the first class will be Indian tales and customs of war. Children will play Indian games, examine Indian relics and make cardboard peace pipes. Topics for the remaining Saturdays in October will be Jesse James, old inventions and fighting grizzly bears.

The programs, which are free, are financed by a grant from Famous-Barr Co. The series, scheduled to run through May 12, is held in the Junior League children's room on the ground floor of the Memorial's west wing. Attendance last year was 23,020.

SECOND ATOMIC MISSILE TO SPAN OCEAN RUSHED

Reports of Russian Progress Spur Project -- Weapon May Be Similar to Atlas.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP) —Spurred by intelligence reports of Russian progress, American officials have set in motion at least a second project aimed at developing an intercontinental ballistics missile capable of carrying an atomic charge thousands of miles in minutes.

Little or no detail is available on this project, but there is speculation it follows closely the requirements laid down for the original Atlas missile research program assigned to the Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corp. about two years ago.

Defense planners hope the Atlas SM-65 will attain a range of between 4500 and 5500 miles and speed enough to reach its target within 30 minutes of launching. They expect it to be able to carry atomic or hydrogen warheads.

So far, the name of the contractor working on an alternate transoceanic rocket design has not been made public, but talk has touched on a K-25 IBM, suggesting a possible company designation.

Persons familiar with the IBM project say maximum progress is being made, but they stress the need for even greater efforts because Russian rocketeers are believed to have had a head start in the field.

Although the United States is speeding up its IBM program, it is not on the "crash," or emergency, basis under which the World War II atomic bomb was developed.

INDONESIA PARTY CHIEFS EXPECTED TO RETAIN SEATS

JAKARTA, Oct. 1 (AP)— The top men in Indonesia's major political parties appeared assured tonight of seats in the new parliament regardless of the over-all outcome of the general elections.

Available tabulations in Java, the main island, indicated the party chiefs had no cause for worry.

The leaders include the caretaker government prime minister, Burhanuddin Harhap; Mohammed Nitsir, general chairman, and Sukiman Wirjosandjojo, vice chairman of the Moslem Masjume party; ex-Premier Ali Sastroamidjojo of the Indonesian nationalists; D. N. Aidit, secretary general of the Communist party; and Zainul Arifin, ex-vice premier, of the Moslem orthodox radicals.

Voting is expected to continue for two months before all the 3000 islands forming Indonesia finish balloting and counting.

SOUTH KOREA ASKS U.N. ABOUT P.O.W.S IN INDIA

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Oct. 1 (AP)—South Korea called on United Nations Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold to help it get an inquiry mission into India to determine whether or not Korean war prisoners are being prevented from returning home.

The request was made in a letter from Col. Ben Limb, South Korean observer to the United Nations.

Thirty-three Korean prisoners, among those given refuge by India after the Korean armistice because they declined in 1953 to return home, were involved. Limb insisted they were being prevented from returning to Korea.

U.S. SAILOR DISCOVERS BOY IN SPAIN IS HIS BROTHER

BARCELONA, Oct. 1 (INS)— Lorenzo Hernandez Martinez, 24-year-old New Yorker serving with the United States Sixth Fleet, couldn't get over the resemblance between himself and the boot-black who was shining his shoes in Barcelona.

He asked the boot-black his name. It was Francisco Hernandez Martinez and he was 23.

After talking things over, Lorenzo and Francisco discovered they were brothers. At the age of 3 Lorenzo had been taken to live with relatives in New York.

SHEIKH ON RADIO HAS WOMEN OF ARABY SWOONING

CAIRO, Oct. 1 (AP) — A sheikh who chants the Koran services over Cairo radio is drawing female sighs from all over the Arab countries — so much so that he has become known as "Sheikh Marlon Brando."

His real name is Sheikh Abdel Basset. He gets almost daily phone calls and love letters from women admirers throughout the neighboring Arab states.

A woman from Aleppo, Syria, divorced her husband, abandoned her three children and flew to Cairo with the hope of marrying the sheikh.

The sheikh, a small rather fat man with a wife and five children, sent her home with a religious sermon she is unlikely to forget.

He asked police to put an end to the harassment of a wealthy admirer who chased him around Cairo in an American car, called him on the telephone and offered marriage.

The key to his appeal? Apparently it is his melodious voice.

BUSINESS KEEPS UP FAST PACE IN AREA

Federal Reserve District Reports Show Increase in Output of Goods.

Business activity in the Eighth Federal Reserve District, including St. Louis, maintained a fast pace last month, showing increases in output of goods, a favorable labor market, expanded consumer spending and a higher demand for bank loans, the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis reported yesterday in its Monthly Review.

Steel ingots were produced at 97 per cent of rated plant capacity in the district, up sharply from the 63 per cent level a year ago. Throughout the nation ingot production was at 96 per cent of rated capacity.

In the early part of last month, lumber production of pine and hardwoods was 7 and 10 per cent above that of a year ago, respectively. Crude oil production rose 3 per cent during the month to 20 per cent above last year's figure.

Dollar volume of consumer buying in district department stores for the four weeks ended Sept. 24 was 7 per cent above the comparable weeks in 1954. Principal labor markets reported favorable conditions with several major strikes settled and unemployment insurance claims lower than a year ago.

There was a decline, however, in residential construction contract awards in the St. Louis area. Also in the agricultural sector, price declines continued to reduce district farm income.

A strong demand was reported for bank loans and the amount of credit outstanding expanded during the month. While loans at reporting banks rose less than seasonally during the four weeks ended Sept. 21, the sale of sizable amounts of paper (both business and real estate loans) to other institutions more than accounted for the below average expansion. The growth in loans developed a somewhat closer screening of loan applications and the higher cost to borrowers.

SECOND TYPHOON HEADS FOR JAPAN, WINDS 115 M.P.H.

TOKYO, Sunday, Oct. 2 (AP) —A second typhoon today headed for Japan, still reeling from the most savage storm of the season.

Dying typhoon Louise swept into Siberia's Okhotsk sea north of Japan after laying waste much of southern Japan. Typhoon Marge with 115-mile winds was reported heading straight for the sticken south.

On the southern islands of Kyushu and Shikoku and on western Honshu, press reports listed 31 dead, at least 41 missing, more than 400 injured and nearly 250,000 homeless. Damage was estimated in the tens of millions of dollars.

Back winds of the typhoon also whipped a wall of flames that burned ou the center of Niigata, a city of 250,000 persons 278 miles north of Tokyo. The fire, worst fire in Japan since the fire-bomb raids of World War II destroyed 1200 homes and buildings. City officials said 155 persons were injured. No deaths were reported.

Typhoon Marge was expected to reach a point about 300 miles southeast of Kyushu tonight.

SECOND UNION TURNS DOWN WESTINGHOUSE WAGE OFFER

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 1 (AP) —A second union today turned down an offer by Westinghouse Electric Corp. to increase wages 16 per cent in the next five years.

Officials of the United Electrical Workers said the proposed five-year contract was inadequate for its 12,000 members in Westinghouse plants.

Earlier, the CIO International Union of Electrical Workers, representing 44,000 employes, refused the offer and said it would continue to press for a straight 15-cent hourly pay increase this year and contract terms spelling out conditions under which the company may make studies of day workers' jobs.

Leaders of two other unions offered the same contract — AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Federation of Westinghouse Independent Salaried Unions — had no immediate comment. These two unions represent a total of nearly 13,000 Westinghouse workers.

News From the World of Finance

FEED GRAINS EASE, OTHERS UP IN WEEK

Urgent Short Covering on First Report of President Eisenhower's Illness.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1 (AP)— Feed grains eased on the Board of Trade this week but the rest of the market advanced. Best prices were scored on Monday, when news of President Eisenhower's heart attack prompted urgent short covering. This was a short lived buying movement, however. The demand was based on the political implications of the President's illness, specifically as it referred to the Administration's program of flexible support prices for basic crops.

Wheat closed the week 3/8 to 2¾ higher, corn 2 to 2¼ lower, oats 5/8 to 1¼ lower, rye ¾ to 1¾ higher, soybeans 1¾ to 4¼ higher and lard 2 cents lower to 32 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Some traders reasoned the President's illness gave the Democrats a better chance to win the 1956 election. Prior to the election, it was felt, an effort would be made to overthrow the flexible support program and return to a 90 per cent of parity support price.

It was notable that the big gain in wheat was in the July future, representing the 1956 crop. The advance came despite very ample rains in the southwest, relieving the dry situation and making an excellent seed bed for 1956 hard winter wheat.

Only available reason for the gain in July was the possibility of a higher than expected support price.

Easiness in feed grains was largely based on approach of the new corn crop harvest. This was the first week out of the last four in which feed grains have declined. Grainmen also said 1954 crop cash corn was being offered more freely.

The gain in soybeans was much smaller than the spectacular upturn of the previous week. However, final prices on soybeans were about 10 cents under the peaks scored early in the week.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

BUSINESS AS USUAL

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (AP).

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER'S heart attack stunned Wall Street this week, but Main street took the news in stride. The growing possibility that Eisenhower might not run for re-election produced no outward signs of nervousness among the nation's leading manufacturers and merchandisers. Some felt that the rate of climb that has characterized business for the past year might slow up a little; others said the economy is still expanding and nothing can hold it down. More inflation is in store, they said, no matter which party is in power.

Meanwhile consumers continued to spend at a record clip. Retailers placed their bets on hefty sales for the rest of this fall—and on the biggest Christmas buying splurge ever.

To Continue Spending.

Big business indicated it would keep on spending, too. Henry Ford II announced plans for a $300,000,000 expansion program for Ford Motor Co. in 1956—the biggest one-year expansion ever set by a company of Ford's size. The money will be spent on new factories, new machinery and new equipment to "knock the socks off" the competition, as Ford put it, and to boost production of cars.

Ford called the $500,000,000 outlay "proof of our convictions about the American economy." Said he: "With sound planning, we can hardly be too fast . . . just to keep from losing ground, we've got to move ahead." The Ford program promised an even hotter battle for production and sales with General Motors and Chrysler.

Other corporate spending made headlines:

The largest expansion program ever undertaken by any airline was announced — less than 24 hours after Monday's stock market break—by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, chairman of Eastern Air Lines. In the next five years, he said, Eastern will buy more than 100 new luxury airliners — including turbo prop planes and jets— at a cost of more than $350,000,000.

The Company Plan.

Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. lifted the wraps from a two-year program of expansion that will cost $100,000,000; Rayonier, Inc., said it would break ground at Jesup, Ga., for a $25,000,000 chemical cellulose plant. Plans for a multi-million-dollar window glass plant at Decatur, Ill., were disclosed by Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. United States Rubber Co. announced that it will spend $30,000,000 on expansion next year in anticipation of record demand for auto tires.

Except for the stock market, practically all the important business barometers continued to point higher. The steel industry, winding up an unusually hectic third quarter with production lagging far behind demand, scheduled its output for the week at 96 per cent of capacity. The auto industry rolled out its six millionth car of the year six weeks earlier than in the previous record production year of 1950. Business loans by New York banks were the biggest in two-and-a-half years; department store sales continued to top year-ago levels.

Merchants cocked an ear at Economist Malcolm P. McNair, Lincoln Filene professor of retailing at Harvard Business School and a director of several of the nation's biggest retail enterprises. Despite President Eisenhower's illness and the subsequent stock market plunge, he said, this "will still be the best Christmas in retail history." (One exception, he cautioned, may be New York where store sales and stock market trends often go up or down together).

Inflation Worry.

Inflation will seem to be the number one worry of the nation's top bankers. Bank executives in Chicago for the annual meeting of the American Bankers Assn. (ABA) approved a resolution which included the warning: "Today the main thing we have to fear is over-optimism." The outgoing chief of the A.B.A., said the country is in a period of creeping inflation right now "and we are in it for as far ahead as I can see." Under Secretary of the Treasury W. Randolph Burgess, formerly with the First National City Bank of New York, urged bankers to beware of "excesses which will tip us over into a recession."

Hopes for a balanced federal budget faded as Defense Secretary Wilson turned thumbs down on any further reductions in defense spending during the Government's current fiscal year. Elsewhere in Washington, the economic well-being of the farmer came in for renewed attention—the federal reserve board's latest bulletin commented that despite the post-war decline in farm income, "the general financial position of farmers remains relatively strong."

IS GREAT AMERICAN BULL MARKET IN STOCKS AT END? ASKED IN WAKE OF CRASH

Possibility of Prolonged Period of Uncertainty in Business and Politics Posed in View of President's Illness.

By RADER WINGET

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (AP)—Is the great American bull market in stocks at an end?

That's the top question in Wall Street this week following the extraordinary break in prices Monday on news of President Eisenhower's heart attack.

The answer heard most frequently in brokerage circles is: "No the bull market isn't over—at least, not yet, and there is an excellent chance that this isn't even the beginning of the end although additional sharp declines may occur."

In the next five days, the stock market itself may give the answer to that question in an unmistakable manner.

What Past Indicates.

In the past, sharp breaks usually have been followed by a recovery that retraces one-third to two-thirds of the initial fall. Nearly half the Monday slide was recovered in the next two days. Then comes what is known as a secondary reaction. It may be underway now. If that stops short of the previous lows, brokers look for a rally. If, however, the market continues right on down through those resistance points, further weakness or even an end of the bull market could be expected.

Sometimes there is no secondary reaction at all. The market just keeps right on climbing out of its slump and goes on to new highs. That has happened four times this year. It could happen again.

But the Monday break was an extraordinary thing. A week ago the market stood at a record high after a two-year boom of unprecedented size. Then came news of the President's illness. There was enough time before the stock market opened Monday for members to brace themselves for the selling they expected.

7,720,000-Share Trade.

They got it in vast quantities. Business amounted to 7,720,000 shares, greatest in 22 years. Prices plunged down with tremendous speed. The drop was topped only by the fateful day of Oct. 28, 1929. At the end of the five and one-half hour session Monday, it was estimated that 13-billion dollars had been erased from the 198-billion dollars of quoted value of all securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange. That is a paper loss, of course.

The selling was described as emotional, a sort of conditioned reflex to the shock of the news about the President. And, also, the market at its high level was vulnerable.

Selling came from all quarters, except such institutions as pension funds and trust funds. They did little immediate buying, however.

Who Did Buying.

Who did the heavy buying? That answer is a surprise—seasoned professionals and the so-called little fellow.

G. Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said specialist-members on the floor of the exchange bought $100,000,000 worth of stocks themselves that day. They did so as part of their job of maintaining a market in the stocks in which they specialize.

Funston added: "The orderly manner in which a heavy volume of stock was handled on the exchange Monday was a direct reflection of the professional competence of individual members as well as the personnel of the exchange."

The little fellow, who usually buys odd lots of less than 100 shares, was busy that day, too. Odd lot purchases of 643,000 shares were nearly three times larger than average, and purchases outpaced sales nearly 8 per cent. He kept right on buying. On Tuesday his purchases were more than three times normal and exceeded sales by more than 100 per cent.

Strong Reversal.

The New York Stock Exchange's monthly investment plan (MIP), a pay-as-you-go system for regular small stock purchases, was undisturbed. There was no increase in cancellations.

Some investment trusts reported buying well ahead of selling in their shares. Investment trusts are favorite investment agencies for small stockholders.

The Monday fall was reversed Tuesday with one of the strongest markets of the past 15 years. The recovery continued Wednesday, but mild selling on the final two days cut the market back from its tops.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks closed the week at $173.30, a net loss of $8.20. The average now is back to the levels of six weeks ago.

The five most active issues this week on the American Stock Exchange were Israel-American Oil up 1⅞ at 5⅛ on 419,700 shares, Pan-Israel Oil up ½ at 3, Israel-Mediterranean Petroleum up ⅜ at 2⅞, Webb & Knapp off ⅛ at 2, and Eureka Corp. up 7-16 at 1 15-16.

The five most active issues this week on the New York Stock Exchange were United States Steel off 4⅜ at 57¾ on 423,400 shares, General Motors "when issued" unchanged at 47¾, Chrysler off 1⅝ at 97¾, General Motors off 1⅜ at 142½, and Sperry Rand off ⅞ at 23⅜.

United Press Summary.

The United Press summary of week had this to say:

Sales volume for the five days amounted to 21,700,000 shares, largest since the week ended Jan. 7. That was the week the margins were raised from 50 per cent to 60 per cent. Week of sales were 12,038,263.

Dow-Jones averages closed the week as follows: Industrial, 466.62, off 20.83 points from the previous week and the widest decline since May 18, 1940, when it declined 22.42 points. Railroad, 155.05, off 9.23 points and widest decline since July 22, 1933, when that average lost 10.37 points. Utility, 63.05, off 2.36 points and 65 stocks, 165.56, off 7.95. In the Tuesday-Wednesday rally, the value of all stocks came back $4,500,000,000 (Dow-Jones basis) from their $11,000,000,000 Monday loss. They gave up $1,500,000,000 of the recovery and closed the week off $8,000,000,000.

Six Year Advance.

In the six years and nearly four months this bull market has been growing, it rose from 161.80 in the Dow-Jones industrial average to 487.45 on September 23, a gain of 325.85 points or 202 per cent.

Rails rose 300 per cent in the same period and utilities, 93 per cent. None of the interruptions in the rise was of broad scope. Monday's knocked down industrials by 6½ per cen and the whole market about 6 per cent.

Wall Street termed the period since the election of 1952 as the Eisenhower market. In that period until a new bull market was set on Sept. 23, the industrial average rose 217.22 points or 80 per cent from 270.23 to 487.45, the latter a record high.

OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC

Dear Friends:

We know that you would like a late model used car but possibly you feel that your budget cannot handle it at the present time.

Now, if you think you do not have a sufficient down payment or that you owe too much on your present automobile to make a deal, we have a plan that will suit your needs. Wright Motor Co. has arranged to loan qualified customers up to $350 for a down payment or to help clear most of their present balance on the automobile you now own, making it possible for you to trade. This cash that we can loan to you "Without Interest" is strictly on your signature. It is not a furniture loan or a co-maker loan and will not affect the remaining balance that we can finance through our banking connections.

Our used car stock consists of trade-ins on new automobiles, and our automobiles consequently are above average condition. Any car traded in to us that we feel is not deserving of our written one-year warranty, is immediately disposed of through other channels, because our one desire is to satisfy our Customers.

So, regardless of your financial status, come in and discuss your problems confidently with our finance executive who has had 20 years of experience helping people with similar problems. We feel sure that you will be a satisfied customer with payments that may be arranged to suit your budget. If you desire, you may call for a confidential appointment to discuss your financial problems.

Sincerely,
WRIGHT MOTOR CO.

DODGERS WIN ON HOMERS, 8-5, SQUARE SERIES

UTAH HANDS TIGERS 3RD LOSS, 20-14

EXTRA INNINGS

Dodgers Suddenly Alive In Home Bailiwick.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 1.

THERE has been an amazing transformation in Walter Alston's Brooklyn Dodgers since they moved from the vast Yankee Stadium to the snug cubicle that is Ebbets Field. At the American League park the Dodgers were inept, unhappy and almost lifeless. But in their own bailiwick they suddenly have come alive and they could be the first club ever to win a seven-game World Series after losing the first two games.

At Ebbets Field the Dodgers once more are the team the Cardinals saw there all season, with a slashing, devastating attack, and a defense that is steadily adequate when not spectacular. And the pitching, which was below par in New York, has been sufficient to stop the Yankee sluggers. Even Manager Alston's strategy has taken a different color, as his switches have turned out to be just what the doctor ordered.

As striking as the change in the Dodgers has been the transformation in the Yankees. They no longer look like World Champions or even good pennant winners. Of course, pitching will do that to a team, but it must be that the American League came down to the Yankees, rather than that they still are a good team. And they were good enough this year, although in the fairly recent past they lost three pitching greats in Vic Raschi, Allie Reynolds and Ed Lopat, one of the greatest relief pitchers in Joe Page, a mighty pinch-hitter in Johnny Mize and meantime Father Time has taken much of the speed out of some of the keymen, like Little Phil Rizzuto.

Yes, they now are the Dodgers Eddie Stanky and Harry Walker saw torment and take apart the Cardinals game after game. Jackie Robinson, though aging, still plays a brilliant third base and on the bases he decoys outfielders into making unwise throws. Roy Campanella again sends resounding wallops to all fields.

Duke Slugs Like Snider, Ranges Wide in Field.

OUTSTANDING among the brilliant Dodgers as the Series was squared at two victories each was Duke Snider, who hit a home run with two men on base and whose fielding was extra special. There were times when the Yankees threatened, but Snider was a big factor in squelching rallies. Notably, in the sixth inning, with a big rally under way, two runs in and only one out, the Duke raced far to his left and pulled down Irv Noren's promising line drive. And in the eighth when Clem Labine was being hit hard enough to be in trouble, Snider took him out of it, first with a running catch of Billy Martin's drive to left-center and then, after Rizzuto had walked, catching up with Pinch-Hitter Bill Skowron's well-lashed liner.

In contrast, the Yankees were mediocre when they were not slovenly. Mickey Mantle, to be excused because he is playing despite a pulled thigh muscle, reached Campanella's drive in the fifth, but he wasn't running hard and dropped the ball to make the blow a double.

Yankee pitching was slipshod and there were inexcusable lapses, such as Pitcher Kucks's failure to cover first base on a grounder to the first baseman in the fifth inning, a frame that netted three Brooklyn runs to put the Dodgers permanently ahead.

The Dodgers, even if they take the lead by winning Sunday, will still have to score the clinching victory at Yankee Stadium, but they look very much like the best club in baseball, by a wide margin, and it's difficult to visualize the Yankees, with all the Casey Stengel magic, checking the Dodger momentum.

Sportsfolio.

FRANK DASCOLI, National League umpire, is easily the outstanding television performer of the series thus far. . . . His gestures are magnificent. . . . He's a good umpire, but he does seem to take an unearthly delight in calling the pitches. . . . His special delight is a strike, although he enjoys calling a ball, too, when the batter manifests surprise. . . . A substantial report from Milwaukee is that Charley Grimm will be out of his managerial job there by Nov. 1. . . . Eddie Stanky, with still a year to go on his Cardinal contract, has been offered several jobs. He'd like to coach for the Giants, but has been offered the managerial assignment at Minneapolis in the Association. . . . Birdie Tebbetts of the Redlegs also has offered Stanky a job as third base coach at Cincinnati. . . . Eddie's still thinking them all

Missouri Hurt by Fumbles

Utah	0	14	0	6	20
Missouri	0	7	7	0	14

By Robert Morrison
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 1—Missouri, whose best quarterback was one of several regulars out with injuries, pitched and fumbled away its football game today and Utah carried off a 20-14 upset triumph.

A crowd of 23,000 in sunny Memorial Stadium had little to cheer about when Don Faurot's boys lost the ball on fumbles five times and had four passes intercepted, outdoing the Rocky Mountain visitors in both departments.

It was something to be expected, perhaps, with Faurot's best split T quarterback, Jimmy Hunter, sitting out the game along with Sonny Stringer, regular halfback, and Bill Craig, regular left end.

If the fumbles and interceptions could not all be traced to a weakness at quarterback, a good part of it could, and this was too great a handicap.

A Giveaway Program.

Utah, with two fumbles lost and two interceptions, gave the ball back to Missouri four times but by the same means Missouri gave it away nine times.

It was the third consecutive loss for the winless Tigers, who now are on a bad spot as they face Southern Methodist at Dallas next Friday night and the usual conference struggle later on.

Utah, now boasting a 2-1 record, had two good quarterbacks in veteran Dave Dungan and sophomore Martin Bezyack, and as expected they kept constant passing pressure on the Tigers. But Utah's most impressive performer was the little, five-foot-seven Lou Mele, a punter, pass-catcher and ball carrier of considerable note.

It was Mele who twice made two yards on fourth down to keep in motion a 63-yard Utah drive for what proved to be the winning Redskin touchdown in the fourth quarter.

It was also the little senior left halfback who carried eight times for 41 yards, caught four passes for 38 yards and performed the punting chores with a creditable 36.4 average.

Tainted Touchdowns.

In a way all of the touchdowns were tainted in this game and even the final Utah smash needed help from a pass interference ruling that reversed what could have been a third Missouri interception.

The Utah march started at its 37, but was set back on a clipping penalty. However, Bezyack pitched a 20-yarder that was intended for Mele but was intercepted by Harold Burnine, a standout at end for the Tigers in this game of few bright spots.

It was ruled that Burnine had interfered with Mele, and so Utah renewed its drive at its 41, and with Bezyack passing and Mele making the key gains, the Redskins rolled. A Bezyack to Jack Kammerman pass got 18 yards at the Tiger four and on the second play, Larry Fields went over on a pitchout for the touchdown.

Missouri had given the visitors two quick touchdowns early in the second quarter. A Utah punt to Dick Stuber at the start of the period found Stuber threatened by a tackler at the Missouri six and trying to handoff to Butch Hankins. The ball got away from both and Utah's Herb Nakken recovered on the three. In two

Key Play of Game: Dance, Hop, Step and Late Jump

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

It was a key play in the fifth inning when Yankee Pitcher JOHNNY KUCKS (53), with cap flying, was lat in covering first on a ground ball, giving the Dodgers the opportunity for Duke Snider's three-run homer. This action shows Umpire BILL SUMMERS giving the safe sign as PEE WEE REESE (1) of Dodgers comes to a dancing halt after beating out his infield single. Kucks was too late to put the tag on Reese after taking the throw from JOE COLLINS (left) racing to bag. Had Reese been retired, the Yanks would have passed Snider, who instead hit a three-run homer, the decisive blow of the game.

Bears Beat Wabash on Long Pass Play, 20-14

By Jack Rice

Washington University football players, running for a better opinion of themselves on a reform-movement ticket, found a way for virtue to triumph yesterday at Francis Field. They beat the clock by four seconds and Wabash College by 20-to-14 on a 70-yard pass play, from Mel Siegel to Don Polkinghorne.

Wabash	0	0	0	14	14
Wash. U.	0	14	0	6	20

In the Washington locker room, Coach Carl Snavely made a quick check with his memory and decided that in 30 years he never had seen a game decided on so late and so short notice by a pass play. It was a happier memory-check than he had made the week before. The Bears were upset then in their opener by Missodri School of Mines, 20-13.

They fumbled that one away, and they aided and abetted the opposition in more subtle ways, too. One call for time-out impressed Snavely as a move that gave the Miners rest they needed, and the Bears didn't. Washington players decided among themselves yesterday to call time only in case of injury or earthquake.

Lead at Half, 14-0.

The Bears wore the same uniforms, but otherwise looked not at all the same, in the first half yesterday. They scored twice in the second quarter for a 14-0 halftime lead against the heavy Wabash line.

They went 63 yards for the first touchdown. Bob Ladd received a pass from Siegel for the final seven yards. They later moved 60 yards, and Siegel carried the last three yards to score. Don Sauer kicked the extra point on the first touchdown, and when the attempt to hold for the second extra-point try went awry, did a quick-thought pickup and passed to Siegel for the extra point. Polkinghorne was busy in both drives, gaining yardage.

Wabash and its fast backs, running from a T formation, had been frustrated in the end zone twice by the Bears, after the third quarter. The Bears intercepted a pass in the end zone in the first period, and Siegel and Polkinghorne batted the ball away from a Wabash man all set for a six-point catch in the third quarter.

Quick Kick Blocked.

The saves became vital, indeed, for in the final quarter two quick Wabash touchdowns rolled off Washington punts. Don Sauer, back to quick-kick, was rushed and the punt blocked. The line of scrimmage was the 19, and Dennis Burdock of Wabash chased and captured the ball some nine yards from Washington's goal, picked it up and scored. Jay Huffman kicked the extra point.

The Bears put themselves in hock with a fumble, and the punting game that followed

Maryland Runs Over Baylor, 20-6

MARYLAND	13	0	0	7	—20
BAYLOR	0	6	0	0	— 6

WACO, Tex., Oct. 1 (AP)—Maryland's rugged Terrapins, with stocky Frank Tamburello riddling Baylor with shotgun passing and backed by a tough defense, tonight showed why it has a top rating as it gained a 20-6 victory.

Tamburello passed for two touchdowns. The Terps used the forward pass for all their touchdowns. Baylor also spent most of the time in the air, as it had threatened to do, but never really was in the ball game.

Maryland shocked Baylor with two touchdowns in the first period. The first score was on a 27-yard throw by Tamburello which Russ Dennis snared on the Baylor three and carried across.

The next one was on an 18-yard pass by Dave Nusz. Howard Dare snagged the pass and scored without being touched.

Maryland got its final touchdown in the fourth period on a four-yard pitch by Tamburello to Don Healy.

Connie Mack Suffers Fracture of the Hip

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1 (AP)—Connie Mack, 92-year-old formre owner of the Philadelphia Athletics, suffered a fracture of the right hip today in a fall from a bed while taking a nap in his Philadelphia home.

"The position of the fragments is satisfactory," Mack's surgeon, Dr. Illarion I. Gopadze said, adding:

"Barring any complications, we look forward to his early recovery because of his good physical condition."

Mack was admitted to Presbyterian Hospital, where his injured leg was placed in traction.

CAMPY, HODGES AND SNIDER HIT FOR CIRCUIT; VICTORY TO LABINE; LARSEN LOSER

By Bob Broeg
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 1—The sleeping giants of baseball's Bagdad have aroused themselves from the slumber of contentment into which they dozed dreamily after clinching the National League pennant more than three weeks ago. As the New York Yankees learned yesterday and again today at Ebbets Field, the Brooklyn Dodgers are now awake, W-I-D-E awake.

Cynically, because of past Flatbush failures in the World Series, it's possible their own miniature park sent new vitality surging through Dodger muscles, which had become flabby from self-satisfaction after the league flag was won. But crackerbox park or no — the other club always gets 27 shots at the fences here, too— the Brooks have hit harder the last two days than during any previous try for baseball's richest prize.

They wheeled out the long ball yesterday to crush the Yankees 8 to 3, and this cool, overcast afternoon they had the Big Berthas in action again, pounding out 14 hits, of which two were doubles and three home runs. The Dodgers' 8-5 triumph tied the series, two victories apiece.

And it appeared that Walter Alston, under pressure to become the first Brooklyn manager to bring the baseball borough a world championship, seemed to have a feeling that his athletes are no longer fooling; that they're off and running, hitting, throwing and fielding together in one of their streaks of sheer brilliance, with the kind of team harmony that enabled them to win 22 of their first 24 games and end the National League race almost before it began.

Newcombe Passed Up.

At any rate, though well aware of the disadvantage of permitting the rivals to go back to the Yankee Stadium with a three-to-two edge in games won, Alston had to pass up ailing Don Newcombe, his 20-game leader, and said he would start Rookie Righthander Roger Craig in Sunday's final contest in Brooklyn, Newcombe has a sore arm. The rangy 24-year-old Craig, called up in July when the Dodger pitching staff was crippled with injuries, had a 5-3 record in the National League and a 2.77 earned-run average, but has limited experience as background for this blue-ribbon test.

By contrast, Casey Stengel's decision to use Bob Grim rather than either of the two lefthanders who won for him, Whitey Ford or Tommy Byrne, was not unexpected. Byrne, after all, wouldn't have enough rest, though Ford, like Newcombe, could come back. But Stengel (1) shares National League managers' aversion to pitching southpaws in Ebbets Field and (2) can afford to lose this one if only because the Yankees have won their last five games from the Dodgers at the Stadium, scene of the sixth and if-coming seventh contests. So for the Yankees Sunday it'll be righthander Grim, a 20-game winner as a rookie, but only 7-5 this season during which he relieved and started.

And if the Dodgers keep hitting as they did the last two games, it could be grim indeed for the favored American League champions, who saw Don Larsen, former Brownie, and four other hurlers mauled this afternoon. The 6-foot-4, 220-pound Larsen, making his Series debut, was collared with the defeat when he was shooed to the showers in the fifth inning after developing the finest home-run ball this side of the Cardinals' staff.

Round, yet firmly-packed Roy Campanella, who broke out Friday with three hits, tried on the same formula for size again today and once more delivered a single, double and home run. Gil Hodges, in addition to singling twice, pounded a two-run circuit drive and Duke Snider, quickly overcoming a fielding peccadillo with two demonstrations of his defensive skill, also pounded a fence-clearing smash with two on.

Labine Earns Victory.

The three Brooklyn homers, therefore, drove in a total of six runs, one more than the Yankees could muster off a medley relay of the mound in which anchor man Clem Labine, Brooklyn's best season-long relief pitcher, lived up to his reputation and, moreover, earned a World Series victory after twice being tagged with defeat two Octobers ago.

The Dodger starter, little Carl Erskine, showed enough signs of distress that, keeping in mind his recent arm trouble, Manager Alston acted with dispatch in lifting the spunky competitor in the fourth inning. Similarly, Alston used a quick hook on Don Bessent in the fifth, calling for Labine to pitch out of a tense situation. Clem gave up two tainted runs in the sixth, but didn't allow a hit thereafter.

The Yankees wound up with nine blows, including Gil McDougald's first-inning homer, his fifth in World Series play. If that smash was received glumly by the Dodger diehards among 36,242 spectators who paid a net $232,826.08, the Brooklyn cause looked even more unhappy in the second when a walk to Joe Collins, a sacrifice and Phil Rizzuto's timely two-out single gave the

Hornung and Schaefer Run Over Indiana as Notre Dame Wins, 19-0

Brennan's 10th Win In Row

Score by periods:

NOTRE DAME	6	0	7	6	—19

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 1 (UP)—Notre Dame got crunching running from Paul Hornung and Don Schaefer today to pulverize Indiana, 19-0, for the tenth straight victory by the Fighting Irish under Coach Terry Brennan before 56,494 fans.

Hornung, a standout last week, continued his brilliant play, rambling 33 yards around end on an option play for the first Irish score and passing to Sophomore Dick Prendergast for seven yards for the final counter.

In between, he kept the alert Irish moving steadily and the score might have been greater but for two fumbles recovered by Indiana and a blocked punt which gave the Hoosiers possession on Notre Dame's nine.

Hornung used Schaefer as his constant punch for first downs when yardage was necessary and the senior fullback gained 77 yards on 20 carries. Hornung himself ran for 78 yards in 12 tries. Hornung's only bobble of the day was a fumble which broke up one Irish attack in the final period.

Notre Dame's errors, however, were offset by similar mistakes by the Hoosiers, beaten for the second time in as many starts. A fumble by Quarterback Gene Cichowski was recovered by Sophomore guard, Bob Gaydos on the Indiana seven to set up a touchdown run of that distance by Jim Morse for Notre Dame's second score.

Also the Irish defenders intercepted two of Cichowski's 24 passes with Hornung hauling one down for a 21 yard return which got Notre Dame out of trouble once while Aubrey Lewis pulled in the second for a 15 yard return.

Notre Dame, with its ground gaining game going for 261 yards, stayed out of the air as Hornung attempted only seven passes, completing three for a net gain of 19 yards. Indiana, on the other hand, could make only 81 yards on the ground and picked up a mere 107 yards passing. The Hoosiers made only 14 yards in the air in the second half.

Notre Dame scoring: Touchdowns—Hornung (33-run), Morse (7-run), Prendergast (7-pass from Hornung). Point after touchdown—Schaefer 1.

Indiana scoring: None.

Boner by Rookie Led to Snider's Three-Run Shot

BROOKLYN, Oct. 1 (UP)—"Duke Snider's homer changed the whole game," explained Casey Stengel sadly, "and the thing is, I was hoping we could walk him."

In a New York Yankee dressing room sobered by the sudden realization that now the series is right back where it started—all tied up—Stengel pointed to a fifth-inning boner by Pitcher Johnny Kucks as the key play of the fourth game—because it led to Snider's homer.

The Dodgers were leading, 4-3, with a man on first and none out in the fifth when Kucks, blond young right-hander, relieved Starter Don Larsen. Pee Wee Reese was the first man Kucks faced and Reese rapped a hard grounder that First Baseman Joe Collins fielded.

But Kucks failed to cover first quickly enough and Reese was safe. Snider, the next batter, put the game out of the Yankees' reach with a three-run homer.

'If Only . . .' Casey Moans.

"If only Kucks hadda covered first and Reese was out, we'd have walked Snider and played for a double play," Stengel disclosed. "Instead he gets his shot and hits the bejabbers out of it."

Kucks shook his head and didn't try to alibi his boner.

"At first, I thought the ball was hit into the hole for a hit and that Collins couldn't get to it," he said. "But I should have been breaking for first anyway.

"Even when I saw Collins had nabbed the ball, I still stood on the mound for a second or so before I started running. Then it was too late."

Kucks shook sis head and whispered, "I don't know what was holding me on the mound. I don't know what I was thinking of."

Kucks recalled ruefully that Snider tagged a fast ball, belt high, for his booming drive that broke the game open.

"I was trying to throw a sinker," Kucks said. "I fooled Duke with a couple of sinkers when I faced him Friday—and I was trying to do it again. It was supposed to be a sinker low and on the corner. Instead it was down the middle and it didn't sink at all."

Illinois Romps to 40-to-0 Victory Over Iowa State

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 1 (AP)—Paced by sophomore fullback Ray Nitschke, Illinois slammed across three touchdowns within five minutes today and coasted to a 40-0 victory over Iowa State.

The triumph was Illinois' second in as many games and doubled its total of one 1954 victory. A crowd of 43,457 watched the Illini start slowly, race to a 26-0 halftime lead, and then let up by pouring in the reserves.

Held to a one-touchdown advantage in a ragged first quarter, Illinois opened its powerful attack and hammered across three touchdowns in 4 minutes and 50 seconds in the second quarter.

Nitschke, an 18-year-old bruiser, topped an 80-yard march with a two-yard plunge to give Illinois a 6-0 first period lead.

Early in the second quarter, Nitschke opened the barrage with a 12-yard smash off tackle.

Iowa State took the ensuing kickoff and moved the ball to the Illini 47 before punting out on Illinois' 19. Halfback Abe Woodson broke loose with a 69-yard run to the Iowa State 12 and fullback Dan Wile scored from the 9 two plays later.

Bob Mitchell capped the swirling period by intercepting one of Al Rickert's passes and returning it 52 yards for a touchdown and a 26-0 Illinois halftime lead.

Coach Ray Eliot let his first stringers in the game long enough in the second half to score another touchdown and pull into a 33-0 lead.

Ed Lindbeck, Illinois' crafty quarterback, intercepted a pass early in the third quarter and then hit halfback Mickey Bates with a 16-yard pass to move the ball to the 23. Two plays later Nitschke barreled 15 yards for the score.

Illinois' final touchdown came late in the game when reserve end John Everett intercepted a pass and ran 32 yards for a touchdown.

The Cyclones showed little in the way of offense until the final quarter, when the Illini had cleared their bench, and still failed to score.

Illinois netted 296 yards on the ground and 122 in the air while Iowa State picked up 120 yards rushing and 62 on four completed passes.

Nitschke led both teams in rushing with 88 yards in 12 attempts for a 7.3 average. Woodson was second with 76 yards in three attempts for a 25.3 average.

Halfback Chuck Gates was tops for the visitors with 47 yards in 10 carries.

Georgia Tech's Vann Flattens Mustangs, 20-7

S.M.U.	0	0	0	7	— 7
GA. TECH	7	7	6	0	—20

ATLANTA, Oct. 1 (AP) — Toppy Vann, a second string quarterback playing like an All-America, and Halfback George Volkert, an old nemesis of Southern Methodist University, led Georgia Tech to a 20-7 victory over slow-starting S.M.U. today in an intersectional football thriller.

Vann passed and ran with devastating effectiveness and scored all three of Tech's touchdowns. He got his chance to star this week because regular Wade Mitchell was not in top physical shape.

Volkert, whose 49-yard touchdown run in the dying minutes beat the Mustangs in Dallas last year, caught passes and picked up important yardage in all of Tech's scoring drives. He also ran back a punt 78 yards, only to have the apparent touchdown nullified by a clipping penalty.

Not until the final quarter did the Mustangs show their highly-touted running game to advantage. Then they drove 83 yards in nine plays with Quarterback John Roach plunging over from the one.

Tech, rated third among the nation's grid giants, turned in its best offensive showing of the season in winning its third straight. Star Halfback Paul Rotenberry was out with a bad knee, but Halfbacks Volkert, Stan Flowers, and Johnny Menger and Fullbacks Ken Owen and Dick Gookin handled the running chores admirably.

Roach and Halfbacks Dom McIlhenny and John Marshall were the big guns for the Mustangs.

Bears Beat Wabash On Long Pass Play

came to Wabash's advantage. Wabash partially blocked a Bears' kick, recovered on the Washington 35, and returned it to the 30. Three plays later, Tom Hankinson, near the goal line, received a pass from Vic Lodovisi and scored. Hufman kicked the extra point and with not quite four minutes to play, it was 14-all.

Trying to recover by air what they had lot by land only led the Bears into a pass interception, at mid-field. Wabash moved close enough to try and settle the thing with a field goal, feeling time was on its side, too. The try, with the ball held at the 25, was far short.

The Bears took possession, moved the ball to the 30, tried and missed with a pass. The clock showed 15 seconds to play as Siegel looked for his final hope, and found it in Polkinghorne, far downfield near the Wabash 35. Polkinghorne caught it, and was gone for the score. Some of the estimated 4500 were gone, too, and so was all but four seconds of the game, a shortage of time that suddenly was just fine with the Bears.

Winners' Share to Be $7800 Apiece; Each Loser to Get $5230

BROOKLYN, Oct. 1 (AP).

EACH winning player should get approximately $7850 and each full losing share should be about $5230 if the New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers each cut their World Series pool into 35 shares.

The club's voting on their split of the swag won't be announced for some time by Commissioner Ford Frick.

The player pool contains a total of $654,853.59. Seventy per cent of that goes to the two series teams (60 per cent to the winner, 40 per cent to the loser) with the other 30 per cent distributed among the second, third and fourth-place teams in each league. The 70 per cent for the series teams is $458,397.

The winners' pool should be $275,038 and the losers' $183,359.

Until Frick's office announces the exact shares, no official figures will be available.

Dodgers Now 13-10 to Win

BROOKLYN, Oct. 1 (UP) — Broadway bookmakers tonight made a quick about-face and installed the Dodgers as 13-10 favorites to win the World Series.

The National League champions are 7-5 favorites to win Sunday's fifth game.

After winning the first two games, the Yankees' odds climbed from 13-10 to 19-5. They were reduced to 8½-5 in favor of New York before today's game, but now Brooklyn is the popular choice to win the championship.

Aroused Dodgers Win With Homers, Square World Series

American League standard-bearers a 2-0 lead.

Larsen, large and impressive, breezed along until the third, when he issued an inning-opening walk to Sandy Amoros. Two outs later, with Amoros breaking, Junior Gilliam sliced a hit-and-run double just over third base and into the left field corner, Amoros scoring.

Erskine Removed.

But the ball game continued to seem a Yankee domain, especially when Erskine gave up an inning-opening single to Yogi Berra and a walk to Collins in the fourth. That's when Alston beckoned to the bullpen for Bessent, who turned Elston Howard's bunt into a force play at third before permitting Collins to take such a long lead Campanella had no chance to flag down the stealing runner. Billy Martin's pop fly single to right promptly scored Collins and sent Howard to third.

Here, Jackie Robinson, who shed pounds getting ready and also has appeared to throw off the years in this Series, came up with a pivotal play. Already leading by a 3-1 score, the Yankees would have tallied one or more runs if Robinson hadn't darted to his left, gloved Rizzuto's bid for a basehit and started an inning-ending double play.

Opening the home fourth, Campanella lined a high fast ball into the lower left-field stands for a home run, his second in this Series and his fourth in post-season play. Carl Furillo, swinging hard, chopped a hopper over Larsen's outstretched glove for an infield hit. And Hodges, a pull-hitter who only infrequently hits to right, lifted a high fly that was aided by a brisk wind and blew over the scoreboard for his third homer as a World Series participant, giving the Dodgers a 4-3 lead and their partisans a tremendous charge.

Stengel, satisfied Larsen still had something, permitted the big fellow, a good hitter, to lead off the fifth and Don's high foul into the box immediately adjacent to the visitors' dugout skulled Del Webb, co-owner of the Yankees, forcing him to leave temporarily for first aid. Webb went to the visitors' club house and Larsen soon joined him.

Meanwhile, however, the Yankees chased Bessent, a result of Irv Noren's bloop hit, a single by limping Mickey Mantle and a walk to Yogi Berra. With the bases loaded, two out, Labine took over and retired Collins on an infield grounder.

The Duke Tees Off.

Larsen immediately ran into more trouble in the home fifth, walking Gilliam, who stole second on the pitcher's carelessness, and then missed with two pitches to Pee Wee Reese. Stengel's SOS was for Johnny Kucks, freshman righthander who committed a grievous mental error, failing to cover first on Reese's grounder fielded by Collins to the first baseman's right. Following that scratch hit, Snider who has hit more World Series homers than any other National Leaguer past or present, teed off.

Maybe The Duke indulged in dangerous self-admiration in the sixth or thought how he'd hit Walter O'Malley for a big raise this winter. Anyway, after Howard singled, Martin lifted a fly on which Snider only casually ambled back, then couldn't catch up as the wind drifted the ball farther than he had anticipated. The misjudged drive fell for a run-scoring double and Eddie Robinson's pinch single with one out scored Martin, making the score 7-5, an uncomfortable margin for Brooklyn.

Alston, twice visiting the mound, seemed about to lift Labine, but he didn't and it proved to be one of the best decisions he ever made, for, as mentioned, the Yankees never hit safely again, partly because an aroused Snider went far and wide to deprive the Yankees of two hits and a scoring situation in the eighth.

By then the Dodgers had worked over Rip Coleman, rookie Yankee lefthander, combing him for a run on successive singles by Campanella, Furillo and Hodges in the seventh. The sleeping giants of baseball's Bagdad, so completely awake, finally had enough exercise for one day.

Alston Surprise: He Picks Craig To Oppose Grim

BROOKLYN, Oct. 1 (UP)—Manager Walt Alston sprang a surprise today when he named Rookie righthander Roger Craig to start Sunday's fifth game of the World Series for the Brooklyn Dodgers while Casey Stengel chose Bob Grim to hurl for the New York Yankees.

Craig, a towering righthander who joined the Dodgers in mid-July when sore arms depleted Alston's staff, had a 5-3 record. Grim, the American League's Rookie of the Year in 1954 when he made a 20-8 record, had a disappointing 7-5 campaign this year but pitched seven innings of no-hit relief ball in an important late-season game against the Boston Red Sox.

Alston had refused to name his fifth-game starter earlier today but it had been believed he would name Karl Spooner, southpaw fireballer, for the important assignment.

Stengel was more or less expected to name Grim, who pitched the ninth inning of the Yankees' 6-5 first-game victory, as Sunday's starter.

Chance of Rain Late Today in Brooklyn

BROOKLYN, Oct. 1 (AP).

A CHANCE of rain late in the day was forecast for Sunday's important fifth game of the World Series at Ebbets Field.

The Saturday night forecast said "some cloudiness and cool Sunday with a chance of rain late in the day. High 60 to 65."

Kirkwood Wins Over McKinley

U. CITY	—	0	0	13	0—13

University City opened the Suburban League football season yesterday by downing Ritenour 13-0 on the Indians' field.

Coach Stub Muhl's team caught fire in the third quarter after being held to a scoreless tie the first half. Bill Comfort scored first on a four-yard run over right guard. Later in the quarter Rich Aberson faded to pass but then kept the ball and ran 16 yards around right end for the final TD. Bob Kovac converted after Comfort's score.

Ritenour's Huskies unleashed a sustained passing attack in the final period but were unable to score before time ran out.

In nonleague engagements, Kirkwood romped to its third one-sided victory when it thumped McKinley, 39-12, and Wellston walloped Hazelwood, 25-0.

Missouri's Wynn in Loss Column

—United Press Telephoto.

Halfback JOE WYNN of Missouri is thrown for one-yard loss on his 25-yard line by Utah guard BOB LEE in first quarter of yesterday's game at Columbia, won by Utah, 20 to 14. Other Utah players are End GEORGE BASS (84) and Tackle DONNIE BARR (77). Missouri Fullback GENE ROLL is on ground at far left.

Utah Hands Missouri Third Defeat, 20 to 14

plays Utah scored, Nakken going over for the last yard.

George Boss, kickoff and placement expert, kicked the extra point for Utah, then kicked off over the goal.

Disaster Again.

A minute and one second later, Utah had scored again. Gerry Smith, a sophomore, was quarterbacking the Tigers, and he got a faulty snap from center. Utah's center Roger Butler smashed through to recover the ball on the Missouri 21. Bezyack pitched to Stuart Vaughan for 17 yards and Vaughan took a pitchout to score.

Down 14-0, the Tigers made their first tally with five seconds left in the half. Dave Doane, quarterbacking in a desperate pass drive as time threatened to run out, connected with Burnine for 36 yards at the Utah 21 to give impetus to an 80-yard touchdown march.

But when they got within scoring range, the Tigers almost lost their opportunity. One of Doane's many passes was intercepter by Nakken. But Nakken fumbled and Burnine recovered on the Utah six. With five seconds left, Doane finally connected on his fourth pass attempt, a bullet throw into the stomach of Burnine, who was in the end zone.

Missouri got an even better break in the third period. Mele was backed up at his goal in punt formation when Butler's high center pass went over his head. Mele recovered the ball in the end zone and ran it out to the Utah two, but it was fourth down, the Tigers took over and Joe Wynn scored on the first play on a pitchout from Doane. Chuck Mehrer converted to tie up the game, but shortly afterward Utah started its winning drive.

Burnine altogether caught six passes for 90 yards. Gene Roll, the only regular in the backfield, was the most efficient runner, with 68 yards on 15 carries. But except for Doane's passing, the Tigers were not much of an offensive threat.

Cahokia Fans Get Hot Tip For Next Year

Jockey Dale Hart was a man for the long-shot bettors to file away in their memories until next year, when Cahokia Downs closed the local horseracing season last night.

Hart rode Hydro Scott to victory in the fifth race. It was Hart's fourth victory of the meeting, and all were scored on animals that hadn't been rated much chance. Hart's previous victories had been on Hay Silver, $93.80; and twice on Pronto Red for win-ticket returns of $43.40 and $50.80.

Some 9500 persons attended the get-away night program.

Brown Takes 20-6 Lead, Then Yale Wins Game

YALE	0	6	0	21—27
BROWN	13	7	0	0—20

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 1 (AP)—Catching fire late in the third period, favored Yale tallied three touchdowns in the final quarter to conquer air-minded Brown, 27-20, in an Ivy League battle in the bowl today before 22,000 fans.

Three decisive scores were registered by Al Ward, 180-pound halfback and son of a former Yale basketball star.

Brown, by completing 9 of 10 passes, moved into a surprising 20-6 lead in the first half, and with Yale looking sluggish and suffering from aerial dizziness, it looked like an upset was in the making.

But with the third quarter drawing to a close, Ward and his teammates finally began to click as the Elis moved 59 yards to score in 1:33 of the fourth period. Ward's second touchdown of the quarter came in 6:13, a 4-yard, wide sweep to the right and the winning score in 11:11, a 20-yard pass from Dean Loucks to Ward in the end zone corner.

Yankees Don't Look So Tough Any More, Say Jubilant Dodgers

BROOKLYN, Oct. 1 (UP)—"We went half way twice before but we're gonna go all the way this time."

Beaming Roy Campanella echoed the sentiments of everyone in the jubilant Brooklyn Dodgers' dressing room today when he insisted the Yankees were on the run.

But Campanella and all the rest of the Dodgers weren't forgetting the 1947 and 1953 World Series, when the Dodgers dropped the first two games to the Yankees, then bounced back to square the classic as they did today.

"It's a lot different this time," put in perspiring Duke Snider, whose three-run homer in the fifth actually settled the Yankees' hash.

More Confidence.

"We're hot now," he declared. "We have much more confidence and we really feel we can beat 'em."

"You said it," Campanella agreed, as his six-year-old son kept tugging at his uniform and beseeching, "Daddy, Daddy, what did you do with the baseball?"

"We're keeping those Yankee pitchers running in and out of the bullpen," said the portly Dodger catcher, who contributed a home run, double and single to the Brooklyn cause.

Dodger pitcher Russ Meyer, undressing nearby, said, "suddenly those Yankees don't look so tough any more."

Even the usually conservative Walt Alston couldn't conceal his buoyancy as he relaxed in his private manager's room just off the clubhouse.

Alston smiled expansively and observed that the Dodger hitters "sure had themselves a day."

Not Bothered About Football.

When someone asked Alston, a resident of Oxford, O., whether he had heard the half-time football score of two Ohio colleges—Xavier and Miami—he grinned again and asked:

"Were they playing today? I'll have to wait until this thing is over before I begin following football again."

Snider, who made a series of brilliant catches to help reliever Clem Labine lock up the victory, pointed out that the one he made on Pinch-Hitter Bill Skowron in the eighth was the toughest.

"The ball was hit on his fists and I had a long way to go," he said. "I didn't think I was gonna get it."

Dodger President Walter O'Malley, long frustrated in World Series competition against the Yankees, had a hopeful glint in his eye, also, after the 8-5 triumph.

"It was a long time waiting but I hope this is the year," he said. "Wasn't Duke magnificent out there today? . . . As a matter of fact, all our hitters were."

Kansas State Beaten, 16-0, By Nebraska

NEBRASKA	0	0	7	9	—16

MANHATTAN, Kan., Oct. 1 (AP)—Nebraska, showing a good running drive supplemented by an efficient passing attack, defeated a ragged Kansas State team, 16-0, before a crowd of 15,000 here today.

It was clearly Nebraska all the way, although neither team managed to score in the first half. K-State never penetrated the Cornhuskers' territory beyond the 20-yard stripe.

Taking advantage of two Wildcat fumbles and an intercepted pass, the Huskers scored a touchdown in the third quarter and a field goal and another touchdown in the last quarter.

Currinder to Start for Kutis in Title Contest With Carondelet

Play-Off Game at 2 O'Clock

It's the North against the South again with Kutis North defending its Muny baseball title against Carondelet Sunday Morning Club this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Fairground Park No. 1 diamond.

Chuck Currinder, big curveballer from Beaumont High and St. Louis University, will start for Al Mick's Kutis team. Manager Monte Gummels of Carondelet, who called little Erv Liberton's great performance against Kutis last week "the brainiest pitched game I ever saw," will open again with the righthander who went right out of St. Louis U. into a pro career at the age of 17.

Mick, bidding for his third Muny title (he piloted the Zollers home before leading Kutis in last year), plans one other lineup change. John Vitale will start in right field in place of Boots Llewellyn.

Lloyd Merritt, star righthander who lost the tough 3-1 duel in 11 innings to Liberton last Sunday — thus forcing an extra game to decide the champion — probably won't get in from his Army post today. However, Mick said Currinder, a 6-0 pitcher for the regular season, would start nonetheless.

Although Gummels doesn't plan any lineup changes, he probably will shake up the batting order because his club left 27 men on base in last Sunday's doubleheader. Eddie Kestler, who rejoined the team in midseason, will be in left field again. His sore right arm is just about back to normal.

Kurt Krieger, who beat Hoffmeisters to put Carondelet in the finals of the two-losses-and-out playoffs, along with reinstated Ken Bennett and Ted Beck, give Carondelet a formidable bullpen as the team shoots for its first Muny title. Kutis can call on fastballer Dick Fellhauer and Gene Rehwinkel, Concordia righthander drafted from the Polish Falcons.

Erv Knueppe, public address announcer, will give a resume of today's world series game between innings.

Admission is 50 cents for adults, children under 12 free if accompanied by their parents.

Tony Kreft, who played a snappy second base for many teams in Muny ball, points out that it was just 10 years ago that the Kellers retired the three-time Maurice Thomas trophy that had been in competition since 1917. Then the Foukes took just a few years to retire the three-time Keller trophy. Kutis North can get a second leg on the Fouke trophy today.

Carondelet has a 3-1 record in the playoffs, Kutis 2-1. Kutis had defeated Carondelet, 10-5, before bowing to Liberton.

Today's umpires: Charley Zawadzki, plate; Tom Fleming, first base; Ed Venator, third.

In 13⅔ innings against Liberton in the playoffs, Kutis has scored only one run—that unearned.

Virginia Tech Wins On One Perfect Play

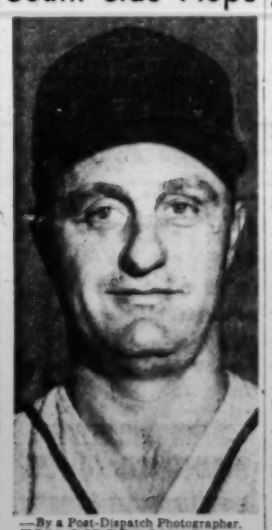

WILLIAM-MARY	0	7	0	0— 7
VIRGINIA TECH.	0	0	7	7—14

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Oct. 1 (UP)—One perfect play, a 71-yard pass and run featuring Quarterback Billy Cranwell and Halfback Dave Ebert, capped a come-from-behind 14-7 victory for Virginia Tech over William and Mary today.

A crowd of 15,000 saw Tech take its first victory from the arch rival Indians since 1938.

Cranwell, who has been hobbled with an ankle injury, fired from the Tech 15 to Ebert who raced into the clear behind William and Mary defenders at the Tribe's 25-yard line. Ebert outran the defense to the goal.

Yankee Owner in Line of Fire

DEL WEBB, co-owner of the Yankees, wearing gray hat, dark band, was hit on the head by a foul ball in the fifth inning of yesterday's game at Ebbets Field. Dodger catcher ROY CAMPANELLA (39) chased the ball as Commissioner FORD FRICK, hatless, in front row, and others in the box ducked to avoid being hit.

Northwestern Is Defeated, 21-0, By Alert Tulane

TULANE — —	7	7	7	0—21

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 1 (AP)—Sophomore Quarterback Gene Newton kept a big Northwestern team off balance with clever ball handling and guided Tulane to a 21-0 intersectional football victory here today.

Tulane scored in each of the first three quarters, with Fullback Ronnie Quillian breaking over on two five-yard touchdown plunges and End Will Billon crossing on a 12-yard pass interception.

Northwestern mustered only one serious threat, which came early in the second quarter and was set up by a 37-yard pass from Quarterback Dale Plenta to Fullback John Foster on the Tulane five.

Tulane Center Jim Carmody averted a fourth-down score when he knocked Quarterback Jack Ellis off his feet on the one after a four-yard gain.

Newton set the stage for two Tulane touchdowns by drawing Northwestern defenders out of position with his faking. He also accounted for 46 yards rushing and completed three of five passes for 39 yards.

Tulane's first score capped a 76-yard drive following the opening kickoff, with Newton and Quillian accounting for most of the distance before Quillian's score buck.

The second score came when Billon intercepted a pass by Northwestern Halfback Jim Troglio on the 12 and sprinted across.

The third quarter score came on a 64-yard drive with Newton, Quillian and Halfback Al Cottrell the big gainers. Quillian went the final five yards. Tackle Emmett Zelenka got the first two conversions and Cottrell the third.

Vantine Sparks Colgate to Win Over Cornell

COLGATE	—	0	7	7	7—21
CORNELL	—	0	0	0	6— 6

ITHACA, N.Y., Oct. 1 (AP)—Unsung Ed Vantine, a reserve halfback from Colgate University's home town of Hamilton, sparked Colgate to a 21-6 football victory over Cornell University today. He scored one touchdown on a spectacular run and set up another with a pass interception.

Colgate's hard-charging line kept Cornell's touted speedy backfield in check throughout and the Big Red of Ithaca was unable to score until Colgate Coach Hal Lahar gave some of his reserves their day on the grid in the closing minutes.

Colgate's alert Guy Martin failed to call on his superb passing arm as much as expected. Instead, he used his running workhorses of Frank Speno, a halfback from Ithaca, Jack Call, Frank Nardulli, all halfbacks, and Fullback Ed Whitehair.

The Red Raiders' first score came in the second quarter, when Vantine grabbed a Cornell punt on his 25 and went all the way. Speno scored the second in the third period on a five-yard line buck. Reserve fullback, Bob Deming went five yards off tackle for the third in the final period. Martin made the three conversions.

Cornell's tally was on a seven-yard pass from Quarterback Billy De Graaf to sophomore end, Gerry Knapp. De Graaf missed the conversion attempt.

About 18,000 fans saw the game in bright sunshine in Schoellkopf Field.

Colgate scoring — Touchdowns: Vantine (75, runback of punt); Speno (5, buck); Deming (5, off tackle). Conversions, Martin 3.

Cornell scoring — Touchdowns: Knapp (7, pass from De Graaf).

Nielsen Fails in Try To Break Mile Mark

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 1 (AP)—Denmark's Gunnar Nielsen failed in his bid to break the four-minute mile barrier today when he was clocked in 4:03.

Some 10,000 fans—far more than usual for a track and field event here—turned out with the expectations that Nielsen over one of his rivals would either break or come close to John Landy's 3:58 mile record.

Brian Hewson was second in 4:03.6 and Norway's Auden Boysen third in 4:07.8.

Harvard Romps To Victory Over Massachusetts

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 1 (UP)—A pair of junior whizbacks, Matt Botsford and John Simourian, passed and ran with reckless abandon today to lead a vengeful Harvard team to a 60-6 shellacking of the University of Massachusetts before some 12,500 fans at Soldiers Field.

The Crimson, rolling to a 33-0 halftime lead, amassed a total of 419 yards on the ground and 91 aerial yards to successfully open its eighty-second season against the Massachusetts Redmen, who ruined last year's debut with a 13-7 upset win. So effortless was Harvard's victory that it was not forced to punt until the fourth period when a revenge-seeking Lloyd Jordan finally inserted his third team while leading 53-6.

Clemson Scores First Victory Over Georgia Since 1914 Season

CLEMSON	—	6	6	7	7—26
GEORGIA	—	0	0	0	7— 7

CLEMSON, S. C., Oct. 1 (AP) Clemson's unbeaten football team, sparked by Quarterback Don King's splendid passing and generalship and the power plunging of Fullback Billy O'Dell, smothered Georgia 26-7 today for the Tigers' first victory over the Georgians since 1914.

The rugged action, in which Clemson scored in every quarter, exploded into two short-lived player fights in the waning moments. Sideline spectators among the crowd of 20,000 joined in the second outbreak, but the Clemson band quickly struck up the Star Spangled Banner and a dozen policemen hurriedly restored order.

Clemson's hard-charging line limited Georgia to 24 yards rushing after holding the biteless Bulldogs to minus one on the ground in the first half. Meanwhile, Clemson's backs, operating behind that fine line, rolled for 174 yards on the ground and 180 more were added on passes.

Clemson scored a touchdown a period while holding Georgia scoreless until the last quarter. A King to Joe Paglieli 31-yard pass-run play brought the first score and O'Dell hammered over for the next two, going three yards and one. End Walt Laraway ran six yards with an intercepted pass for the final T.D.

Colorado's Late Scores Defeat Kansas, 12 to 0

COLORADO	—	0	0	0	12—12

BOULDER, Colo., Oct. 1 (AP)—Scoreless until the last eight minutes, favored Colorado marched 65 yards for one touchdown and sent Wingback Dick Harkins on a 34-yard scoring jaunt to conquer Kansas, 12-0, in a Big Seven Conference game today.

Colorado gambled on fourth down with two yards to go in mid-field to keep alive the 65-yard march. Tailback Homer Jenkins accounted for 29 yards of the drive before he was injured on the Kansas 27 and left the game with a leg muscle cramped. Jack Becker drove over for the touchdown from the 3.

A Kansas gamble backfired on the Jayhawks' 34 where Halfback Ralph Moody failed to make five yards on fourth down. Colorado took over and on its first play Harkins reversed and danced away from the Kansas secondary for the second touchdown.

Creve Coeur, Ballwin In County Play-Off

Florissant, the other division champion, will meet Creve Coeur or Ballwin for the overall title.

Uebel and Holleder Show Way As Army Drubs Penn State

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 1 (AP)—Pat Uebel and Don Holleder, a pair of extremely versatile Army athletes, plus a lightning-fast defense crushed Penn State, 35-6, today and put Army on top of the eastern football heap.

Uebel, playing halfback most of the time instead of his 1955 fullback post, and Holleder, the end converted into a quarterback, were the big men in the Army offense that scored three touchdowns in the first half and two more in the final quarter. But it was the Army line on defense that did the biggest damage to a well-regarded Penn State team.

Charging with amazing speed, the Cadets completely ruined Penn State's passing efforts and stopped all the State runners except the brilliant Lenny Moore.

Holleder passed to End Don Satterfield for the first Army touchdown and made the last himself. Uebel got only one, but he was Army's most consistent ground gainer. Sub Fullback Vince Barta scored twice on short plunges.

Penn State didn't score until the third quarter and then needed two chances to make it. Moore came through with a flashy 13-yard touchdown run.

Interception Wins For George Washington

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Oct. 1 (INS)—An alert George Washington team turned an intercepted pass and a mid-air fumble recovery into a 13-0 victory over Virginia today at Charlottesville.

George Washington Fullback Claude Austin intercepted Virginia Quarterback Nelson Yarborough's pass and raced 43 yards for the first score midway in the second period.

In the final quarter George Washington Guard Ray Murray caught Herb Hartwell's fumble in the air on his own 40 and romped to the Virginia 10 before being hauled down from behind.

Pass interference in the end zone put the ball on the one, and three plays later Quarterback Bob Sturm went over from the six-inch line for the final George Washington score. Fullback Dick Claypool converted.

Virdon and Score Named Majors' Rookies of Year

Ken Boyer National's No. 3 Man

Bill Virdon of the Cardinals and Herb Score, Cleveland Indian southpaw, were named as rookies of the year in the annual poll of baseball writers, conducted by the Sporting News.

Virdon was No. 1 man on 57 of 92 ballots, while Score was the first choice of 71 of 103 writers for American League honors.

The selection of the bespectacled outfielder, Virdon, gave the Cardinals the standout rookie of the National League for the second straight year. Wally Moon, outfielder-first baseman, was named in 1954, along with Pitcher Bob Grim of the Yankees.

Ken Boyer, the Cardinals' young third baseman, was the No. 3 man in the N.L. He was the choice of nine writers. Jack Meyer, Philadelphia Phillies' pitcher, was second with 12 votes.

Virdon, in gaining the honors, finished the season with a batting average of .281. He had 18 doubles, six triples and 17 home runs and batted in 69 runs.

Score, 22 years old, blazed his way to a new strikeout record for a big league freshman, fanning 244 to break the former mark of 227 set by Grover Cleveland Alexander with the Phillies in 1911. The Cleveland youngster posted a 16-10 won-and-lost record and an earned-run average of 2.93.

Two ballots named Karl Spooner of the Dodgers and one vote went to Don Bessent, also of Brooklyn.

In the American League, Elston Howard of St. Louis, outfielder-catcher of the Yankees, was second to Score, but drew only four votes. Hector Lopez, Athletics' infielder, received three; Norm Zauchin, first baseman of the Red Sox, two, and Carlos Paula, outfielder of the Senators, one.

A number of other players in both leagues were mentioned, although not eligible for rookie designation since they had been in the major leagues for 45 or more days prior to the 1955 season. The ineligibles included Billy Klaus of the Red Sox, Al Kaline of the Tigers, Dick Donovan of the White Sox, Ernie Banks and Sam Jones of the Cubs, Don Zimmer of the Dodgers and George Crowe of the Braves.

Rain Just Brings Out Slickers in Navy, 26-0

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 1 (AP)—Quarterback George Welsh, despite a rain heavy enough to qualify the midshipmen for sea duty pay, passed his fast Navy team to a substantial 26-0 football victory against impotent South Carolina here today.

Welsh set up touchdowns in the first and second periods. An 11-yard pass to end Ron Beagle, in Navy's opening drive of 70 yards scored the touchdown. In the second period, after Guard James Hower intercepted a pass at the South Carolina 30, Fullback Vince Monto plunged for the score from one foot out.

Navy's third touchdown march, one of 65 yards, ended with Fullback Dick Guest's five-yard touchdown plunge. Navy's third stringers scored the final touchdown as Quarterback Pat Flood went eight yards on a wide left keep.

No. 1 First Year Star

BILL VIRDON, Cardinal outfielder, voted the outstanding National League recruit of 1955 by baseball writers.

T.C.U. Trounces Arkansas, 26-0, For 3rd Straight

T.C.U.	7	6	6	7	26

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Oct. 1 (UP)—Swivel-hipped Jim Swink lit the fuse and Texas Christian University exploded for four touchdowns and a 26-0 victory over Arkansas today.

The magnitude of the Horned Frogs' performance before 22,000 fans established them as strong contenders for the Southwest Conference crown captured last year by Arkansas.

It was the season's third straight for the Christians who also number Kansas and Texas Tech as victims under similar lop-sided scores.

It was the first TCU victory at Razorback Stadium in the past 14 years.

Majeski to Be Released From Trenton Hospital

TRENTON, N.J., Oct. 1 (UP)—Henry (Hank) Majeski, 38-year-old third baseman for the Baltimore Orioles, will be released from Trenton General Hospital early next week.

Dr. Joseph F. McCarthy said the major leaguer was admitted to the hospital 13 days ago after he complained of severe headaches.

A spokesman at the hospital said that his condition could be called "fine."

The infielder left the lineup on July 5, suffering from heat prostration, McCarthy said. Majeski stayed off the diamond the remainder of the season, working as an Oriole scout.

PULLMAN, Wash., Oct. 1 (UP)—UCLA's powerful Bruins, with Fullback Bob Davenport and Halfback Sam Brown leading a merciless attack, rolled to a 55-0 victory over hapless Washington State today in a Pacific Coast Conference game before a disappointed Dads' Day crowd of 20,000.

Davenport and Brown each scored twice to give UCLA a 28-0 halftime lead. As UCLA's devastating attack rolled up yardage almost at will, four more touchdowns in the second half completed the slaughter.

New Webster Team in State Golf Tourney

Webster Groves High will defend its state golf championship tomorrow with a different combination from the one which won at Kansas City. The Statesmen will depend upon Jim Lundergan and Richard Bates to retain their team title in the 36-hole tournament to be held at Lakeside Golf Club, starting at 7:30 in the morning.

Last year Bill Johnson (143) and Jay Aldinger (162) had a sparkling 305 total which was credited with being a new individual record for Johnson and a team low for the twosome.

Favored in the field of 19 shooters, however, will be the St. Louis U. High combination of Joe Duffy and Bob Cochran Jr., prep district champions the past two years.

Sidelights

BROOKLYN, Oct. 1 (UP)—Clem Labine was credited with Brooklyn's victory over the Yankees today although rookie Don Bessent was the "pitcher of record" when the Dodgers took a lead they never lost because of an option allowed the official scorers.

When a starting pitcher departs without having pitched five innings, the most effective of the relief pitchers who follow may be credited with the win.

Bessent took over in the fourth from Carl Erskine and got all three outs in the frame. The Dodgers rallied from a 3-1 deficit in the last of the fourth to go ahead, 4-3, but Bessent did not survive the fifth—Labine taking over with two out.

The scorers reasoned that Labine protected the lead for 4⅓ innings, thus earning the verdict over Bessent, who protected his one-run lead for only two-thirds of an inning.

Don Newcombe of the Dodgers will miss his pitching turn in the fifth game Sunday because of a "sore arm."

"I told (Manager Walt) Alston I would pitch if he wanted me to," said Newcombe. "But I have had a sore arm for a month."

Alston, who named rookie Righthander Roger Craig to pitch instead of Newcombe, said, "I don't know whether I will be able to use Don again during the series. We will have to wait and see."

Newcombe, the Dodgers' burly 20-game winner, started the opening game of the series but was the losing pitcher as the Yankees won, 6-5.

Brooklyn First Baseman Gil Hodges almost became the victim of his own bat in the second when he hit a foul that bounced up and hit him in the face. He wound up with a bruised cheek.

Informed that he had set one of those nebulous series records of being the first first baseman to start two double plays, Hodges said:

"Well, that's better than my other series record."

He went 0 for 21 at bat in '53.

Everything-Can-Happen-in-Brooklyn Dept.: A group of policemen standing in a photographers' box in center field were chased—over the public-address system, no less. Maybe their brass buttons were bothering the batters.

Michigan Capitalizes on Breaks to Nip State, 14-7, Before 97,239

Punt Is Blocked By Kramer

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 1 (UP)—Tony Branoff, a pudgy halfback who needed two operations to keep from fading out of football, scored one touchdown and set up the other today to lead Michigan to a hard-fought 14-7 victory over arch-rival Michigan State before a sell-out crowd of 97,239 at Michigan Stadium.

Both Michigan touchdowns, one after seven minutes of play and the other late in the third period, came on breaks which the Wolverines made for themselves by intercepting a pass and blocking a punt.

Branoff, a 190-pounder who stands only 5-feet-10 was singularly responsible for Michigan's first touchdown. The senior from Flint, Mich., who underwent knee operations during both his sophomore and junior years, intercepted a pass by Quarterback Earl Morrall and raced 38 yards to the Michigan State 20. He plunged the final yard six plays later and Ron Kramer converted to give Michigan a 7-0 lead.

The Spartans, primed for an upset over second-ranked Michigan, drove deep into enemy territory twice during the first half, but the Wolverines stiffened when the chips were down and stopped each march on the three.

Michigan State's third threat paid off early in the third period when Kramer, the brilliant end who scored 23 points a week ago in Michigan's opening 42-7 victory over Missouri, got off a poor punt which sliced out of bounds at his own 39.

The Spartans needed 11 plays to reach the end zone, with fullback Jerry Planis plunging the final six inches and also kicking the extra point to tie the score.

But Michigan converged on Morrall when he went back to punt minutes later, and Kramer atoned for his short kick by blocking the punt at the Michigan State 21. Dave Hill, a second-string fullback, picked up five yards in two carries before Branoff took over and slanted over left tackle to the three. Quarterback Jim Maddock plunged to the one and then carried over on the next play. Kramer kicked his seventh straight extra point of the young season to end the scoring.

Michigan State had twice as many first downs as Michigan, 14 to 7, but their failure to punch across touchdowns when they were deep in Michigan territory in the first half resulted in their first loss after an opening 20-13 triumph over Indiana.

Score by periods:

Michigan	—	—	7	0	7—14
Michigan State	0	0	7	0	—7

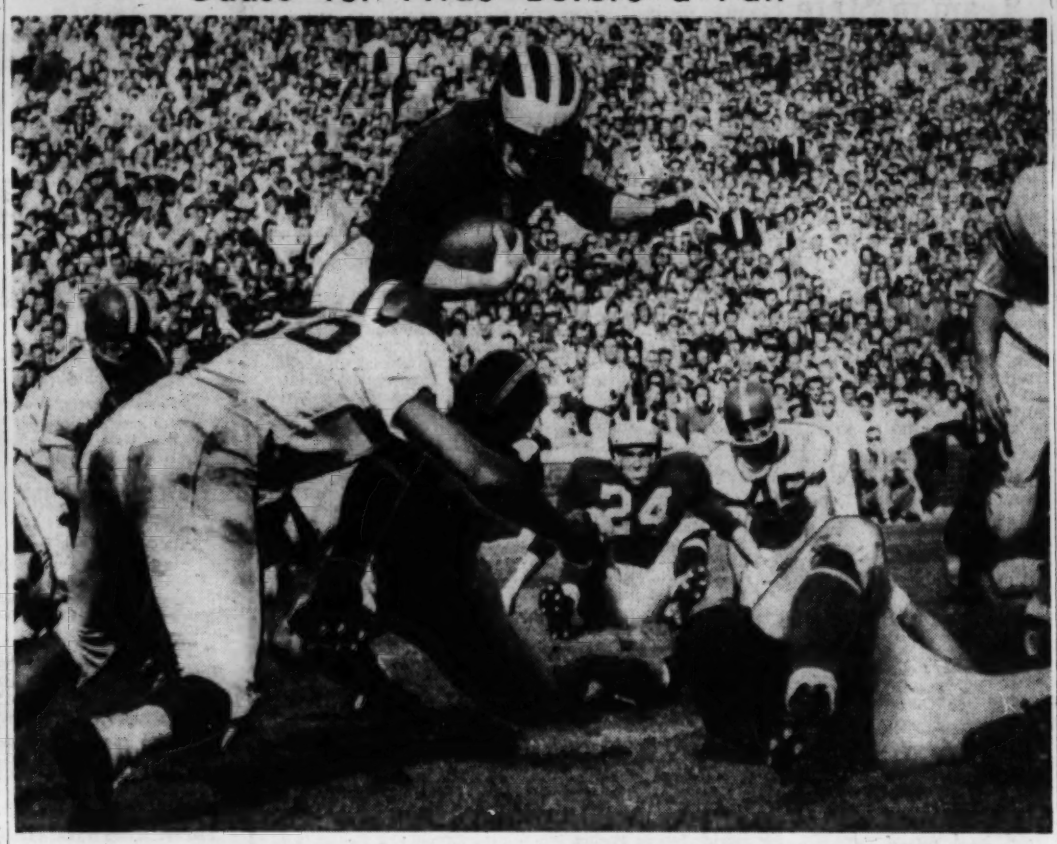

Michigan scoring: Touchdowns—Branoff (1-yard plunge, Maddock). Conversions — Kramer 2.

Michigan State scoring: Touchdown—Planutis (6-inch plunge). Conversion—Planutis.

Arcaro Wins $60,000 Race, Then Takes $50,000 Run

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (AP)—Eddie Arcaro was the riding star at Belmont Park today when he piloted Traffic Judge to victory in the $50,000-added Woodward stakes, after taking the $60,580 Matron stakes earlier aboard Doubledogdare.

Traffic Judge, owned by Clifford Mooers, outfought Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs's Paper Tiger in the stretch to gain a close victory in the Woodward, a mile-and-one-eighth event timed in 1:48 4-5. Jan Burke's Dedicate was third in the field of seven three-year-olds and up.

The winner, a three-year-old, returned $4.50, $3.20 and $2.80, carrying 118 pounds to 107 for Paper Tiger.

Eighteen two-year-old fillies started in the Matron, a six furlongs dash down the Widener straight course. Doubledogdare, owned by the Claiborne Farm, defeated Ogden Phipps's Glamour by a length, with Ada L. Rice's Beautillion third.

Doubledogdare stepped the distance in 1:09 4-5, and paid $4.60, $3.40 and $2.60.

Pinch Runs Beat Columbia

PRINCETON	0	6	7	7	—20
COLUMBIA	0	7	0	0	—7

PRINCETON, N.J., Oct. 1 (UP)—Stubby Sid Pinch, five-foot-nine-inch stand-in for injured Tailback Royce Flippin, scampered on touchdown runs of eight and 80 yards today and sparked Princeton to a 20-7 victory over Columbia in an Ivy League football game before 15,500 fans.

Columbia's Claude Benham shot the Lions out in front midway through the second period with a 21-yard touchdown pass to Alex Giampietro but Pinch matched it with an eight-yard dash near the end of the half and raced 80 yards in the third period as Princeton rolled in front to stay.

The victors added an insurance touchdown in the fourth period when Johnny Sapoch ripped the final 17 yards of the 49-yard drive but fading Columbia bristled long enough to check one march on the three-yard line and another just one foot from it's goal.

California Pins Another on Penn

BERKELEY, Calif., Oct. 1 (AP)—California turned Pennsylvania miscues into a football rout today, pounding the Quakers, 27-7, before 21,000.

Three of the four California touchdown were directly attributable to Penn fumbles. The Quaker attack, impotent against the big California line, was further handicapped by a total ther handicapped by a total were marched off when Penn was in its own territory.

California spotted Pennsylvania a 7-0 first-period lead, tied it up in the second quarter, and then ran away from the Quakers in the final quarter.

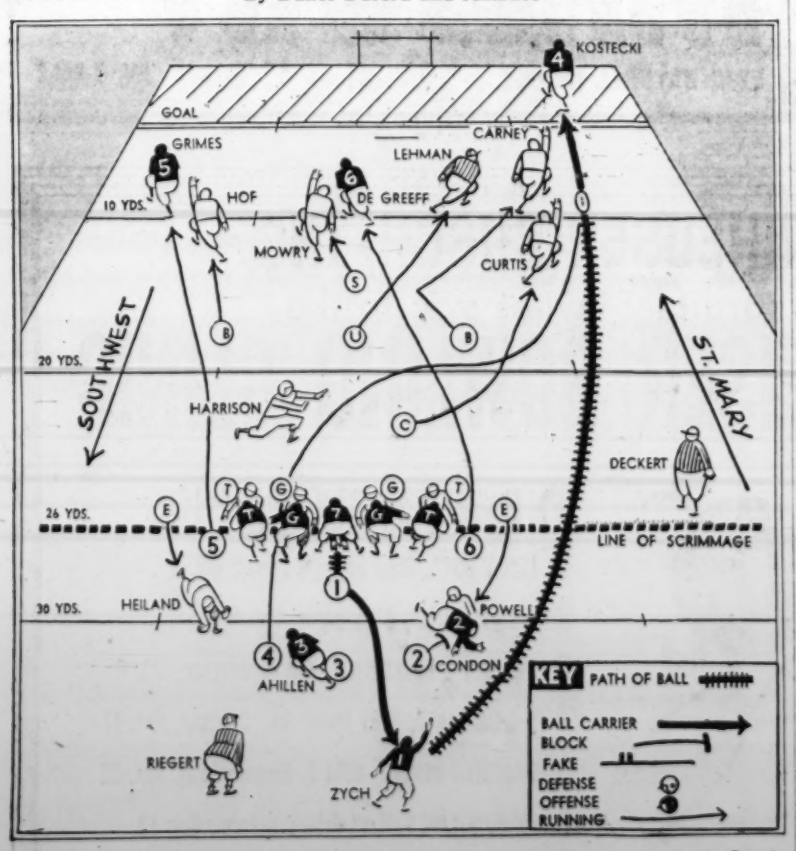

It was California's seventh straight victory over the Quakers, who have not won a game in their last 15.

Pennsylvania scoring: Touchdown — Ross (1-yard plunge); conversion—Riepl (pace kick).

California scoring: Touchdowns—Granger 2 (1, plunge; 28, run), Wilson (5, plunge), Smith (4, plunge); conversions —Poppin 3.

Fiery Dragons Fire a Pass

By Dukes Duford and Amadee

St. Mary's passed its way to a 20-7 victory over Southwest, the first for the South Grand school over the Public High entry since 1949. Here's the play that scored the first touchdown in the game at the Public Schools Stadium. It was fourth down, with St. Mary's in possession of the ball at the Longhorn 26-yard line. St. Mary's lined up in a regular T formation while Southwest went into a 6-2-2-1 defense. Quarterback TOMMY ZYCH (1) substituted for STAN KOSTECKI (4) who moved to the left halfback spot. Zych took the ball from Center DON BRUSH (7), faded straight back, getting good protection from Right Halfback BILL CONDON (2) and Fullback RAY AHILLEN (3). In the meantime Kostecki slipped through the line, then cut right past the defensive left halfback and caught a pass at the nine-yard line. He out-raced the defense to the end zone. The rest of the play took place as indicated.

Stanford Stops Cassady, Beats Ohio State, 6-0

OHIO STATE	0	0	0	0	—0
STANFORD	—	6	0	0	—6

PALO ALTO, Calif., Oct. 1 (AP)—Stanford's upstart Indians living up to their chief's midweek prediction, clamped the shackles on All-America Hopalong Cassady today and made a first period touchdown stand up for a 6-0 upset victory over eighth-ranked Ohio State in an intersectional football game.

It was nationally televised.

A slim crowd of 28,000 saw the Indians score the first time they had the ball. A sneaker pass from Jerry Gustafson to Paul Camera climaxed a 72-yard drive.

Stanford completely outplayed the bewildered Buckeyes throughout the first half.

Chunky Chuck Taylor, the optimistic Stanford coach and himself a former All-America guard for the Indians, said early in the week he felt Cassady "could be had" and that he had devised a "gambling" defense which he figured would turn the trick. It did.

Cassady was held to only 11 yards in the first half and 26 in the second.

The Buckeyes came to life in the second half with four drives, but lacked the punch to cross the fighting Indians' goal line.

Jerry Harkrader and Don Vicic were unable to take up the Cassady slack, although Ohio State controlled the ball most of the second half. The Indians were tough in the clutch.

The Stanford touchdown came from the opening kickoff on a 12-play 72-yard march. Gustafson, sharp as a razor with his passes, was masterful in his team direction. He used the bull-like rushes of Fullback Bill Tarr to complement his aerial game with outstanding success.

The payoff was a deceptive pass to Camera, all alone in the corner of the end zone, for the final yard. Tarr ripped through the middle of the line without the football, completely fooling the Bucks. Mike Raftery's conversion try was blocked.

Ohio State outgained the Indians, 187 yards to 152, rushing but picked up only 41 yards passing to Stanford's 66. All of Stanford's passing yardage was on Gustafson's six completions on nine tries.

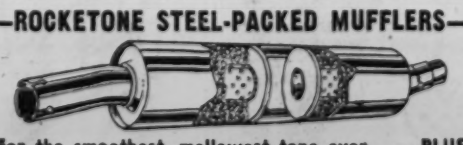

The Bucks pushed to the Stanford 46 and 35 in two second half drives, but were forced to punt both times. The third time they got to the Indian 41, but Vicic fumbled and Al Harrington recovered for Stanford.

In the final period, the Buckeyes ripped to the Indian 22. There Camera intercepted Frank Theis's pass.

Auburn Trips Florida, For Ninth in a Row

AUBURN	—	—	0	7	6 0—13

AUBURN, Ala., Oct. 1 (UP)—Auburn, a powerful squad with a quarterback problem, found the answer on the bench today when Sophomore Jimmy Cook came in to direct a 13-0 victory over Florida and stretch the Plainsmen's win streak to nine straight.

Big Joe Childress, Auburn's all-southeastern fullback, made most of the yardage as Cook fed him the ball on a 68-yard scoring march in the second period. Auburn got an insurance score in the third period after recovering a fumbled punt on the Florida 25.

Florida made only one first down in the first half and completed only one of 16 passes all during the game, so closely did sidebacks Alton Shell and Cook hawk the receivers.

Platt Victor In Final of Senior Golf

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 1 (UP)—Veteran golfer J. Wood Platt, Bethlehem, Pa., defeated darkhorse George Studinger, San Francisco 5 and 4 today for the championship of the first annual U.S.G.A. national senior amateur golf tournament.

The tournament was for golfers 55 and over.

Platt was two under par for the 14 holes at the Belle Meade Country Club course. However, he clinched the match when he got a birdie four on the 474-yard fourteenth hole.

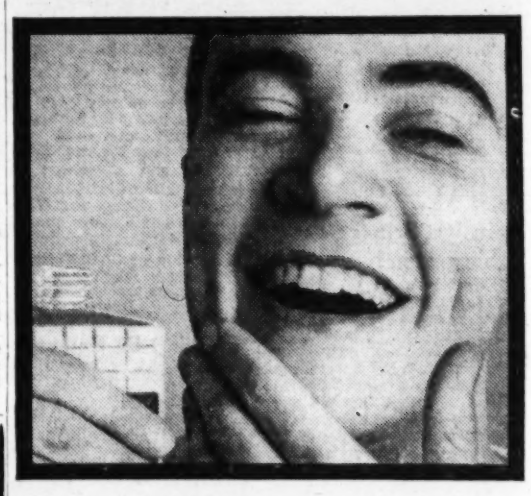

Studinger won only one hole, getting the sixth with par three on one of the two holes where Platt slipped over par. Platt's drive missed the green on this 190-yard hole.

Eugene Belleville, Kansas City, defeated Col. C. D. McAllister, Orlando, Fla., three and two in finals of the consolation flight.

Purdue, Given Scare by Minnesota, Passes First Big Ten Test, 7-6

Gophers Break Up Aerials

MINNESOTA	0	0	0	6	6
PURDUE	0	0	7	0	7

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 1 (UP)—Purdue bogged down in the clutches today and barely escaped with a 7-6 victory over inexperienced Minnesota when two touchdown drives ended in intercepted passes and the clock stopped another on the two-yard line.

Passing star Len Dawson hit his target nine out of 12 times, but Minnesota's Shorty Cochran intercepted one of the misses on the goal line and another in the end zone to stall the Boilermakers. Both times Cochran carried the ball safely out of danger.

Purdue was running a fourth down from the Minnesota two-yard line when the clock ran out on the game.

Purdue's touchdown came in the third period after the Boilermakers marched from Minnesota's 35 in nine plays. Key gains were Dawson's 23-yard pass to Jim Whitmer and Fullback Bill Murakowski's 13-yard run to the three. Murakowski then plunged to the one and dived across the goal line on the second down.

Dawson converted to put the Boilermakers ahead, 7-0. Minnesota uncovered a passing offense of its own after the Boilermaker touchdown with Quarterback Don Swanson getting off several throws.

The Minnesota aerials started flying as the third period ended with Swanson getting off a 13-yarder to Tom Juhl on the Minnesota 34. Swanson kept pegging as the final period opened, hitting Juhl again on the Purdue 40, 25 and 7 to set up the Gophers' first touchdown of the season.

Fullback Dick Borstad carried to the three, Cochran went to the one, and Borstad plunged across. Halfback Dick McNamara fumbled the pass on the conversion and was tackled as he picked up the ball and tried to run the extra point.

The Minnesota touchdown drive was the only time the Gophers penetrated Purdue's 30-yard line during the game.

Purdue outgained the Gophers, 291 yards to 147.

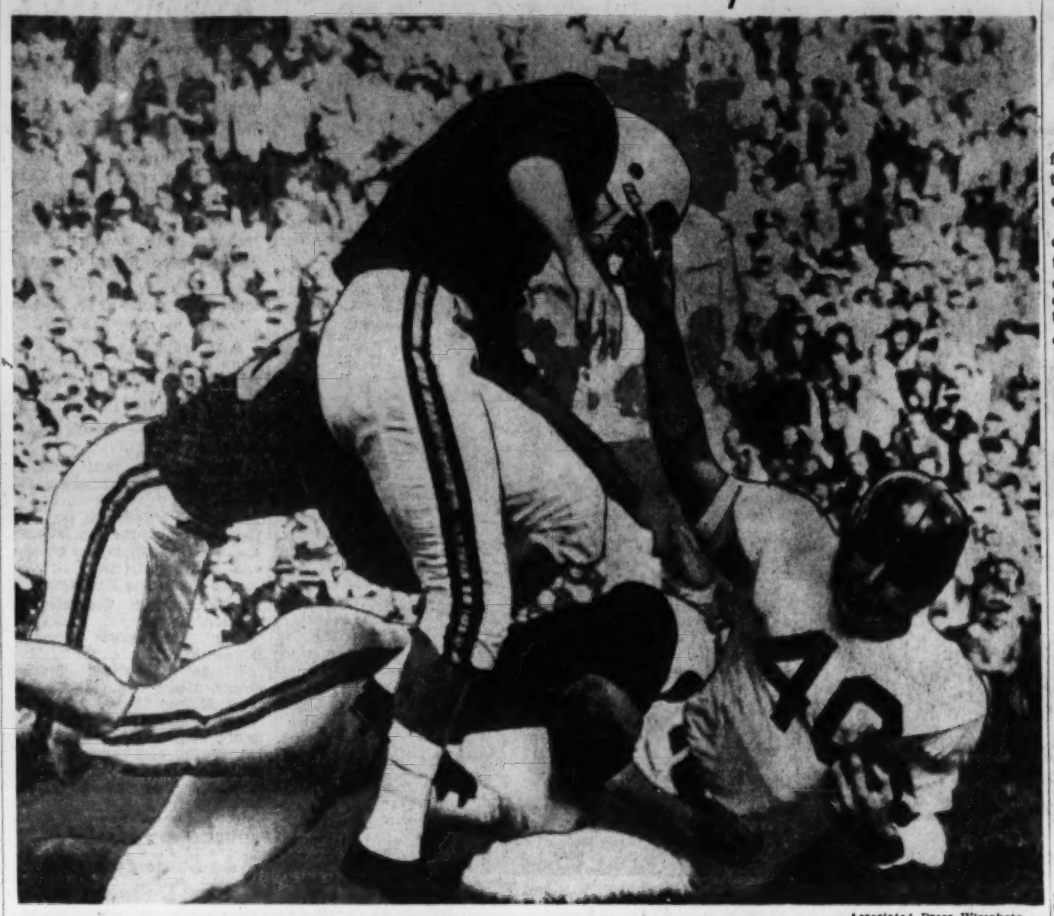

Minnesota scoring: Touchdown, Borstad (one-yard plunge).

Purdue scoring: Touchdown, Murakowski (one-yard plunge). Conversion Dawson.

Boilermaker Finds a Friendly Bar

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

BILL MURAKOWSKI, Purdue fullback, found himself taking a fall as he carried the ball against Minnesota yesterday. So the Boilermaker back did the natural thing. He reached out for support. What came to his searching hand was the bar in a face guard worn by an unidentified Minnesota player, and Murakowski settled to earth, more gently than he otherwise might have. Purdue won, 7 to 6.

Sooners Make Pitt Their 21st Victim in Row

PITTSBURGH	0	0	7	7	14
OKLAHOMA	7	12	0	7	26

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 1 (AP)—Speed and deception triumped over raw power today as Oklahoma defeated Pittsburg 26-14 in an intersectional thriller that extended college football's longest current winning streak to 21 games.

While a near capacity crowd of 58,000 looked on in approval, the lighter but trickier Sooners' stumped the Easterners with three first-half touchdowns, then added the clincher in the dying moments after Pittsburgh had cut the margin to a mere five points in the second half.

Tommy McDonald, a junior halfback from Albuquerque, N.M., was the brightest star in the Sooner offense that Coach Bud Wilkinson hurled at the Panthers in waves, with two elevens alternating in each period. McDonald scored two touchdowns on runs of 43 and nine yards and set up a third with a 23-yard jaunt.

Clendon Thomas, McDonald's alternate at left half, scampered 31 yards for an Oklahoma touchdown and Bob Burris tallied the fourth on a one-yard plunge.

Dartmouth's 21-Point Rally Not Enough

Dartmouth	0	0	0	21	21

HANOVER, N.H., Oct. 1 (AP)—Holy Cross beat Dartmouth at its own aerial game in a 29-21 football victory today but was kept in a turmoil to the finish as the Indians scored all three touchdowns in the final period.

Quarterbacks Jack Stephans and Billy Smithers passed for two touchdowns each for the speedier, alert Crusaders, who took a 23-0 lead in the second period.

However, Coach Bob Blackman's game Indians finally unleashed the full fury of their passing attack late in the contest paced by Bill Beagle and Mike Brown.

Rare Gun to Be Shown Here

Included in the firearms displays to be exhibited at the International Firearms and Hunting Exposition which opens a six-day run at the Arena Tuesday will be a gun which formerly was among the collection of Field Marshall Herman Goering.

This gun now is the property of Col. Dick A. King who captured it when he led an attack on the mountain villa of Adolf Hitler, Herman Goering and Heinrich Himmler near Berchtesgaden, Germany, during the closing days of World War II.

This unusual gun, inlaid with gold and bearing the coat of arms of Goering, has been appraised at more than $4000.

St. Louis Bear Hunters Bring 'em Back.

A HUNTING PARTY that included six St. Louisans recently went into the mountains of Wyoming really "loaded for bear." When they returned, they were loaded with bear—three grizzlies and two blacks.

In addition, the visitors shot eight antelope and seven elk, causing Wayne Meeks, Jackson Hole outfitter, to observe it was the "best kill" by a group of hunters in many years.

On the trip were William McCracken, Woody Roberts and Gil Weidlich of Kirkwood; Jay Davis and his son, Stuart Davis, both of Webster Groves; Charles Hentschell of Huntleigh Village; Al Beaty and Robert McDowell of Keokuk, Ia.

The taking of the biggest grizzly, a 650-pound female with a temper, was a thriller. It made two charges before Beaty finally stopped it with a bullet from his .308 rifle.

"Beaty, McCracken and I were fairly close together, moving up the side of a draw watching for elk, when Beaty, who was higher, spotted the bear," Hentschell related.

"The animal had just moved into a clearing from the timber. It was in a bad mood, apparently having just been stung by hornets. The grizzly saw Beaty and his guide, and launched a charge.

Six Shots Fired Before Kill.

"Two shots halted the bear, but, after pawing at its shoulder, where the bullets struck, it charged again. Four more shots were required before the grizzly was finished. It fell uncomfortably close to Beaty and the guide."

Jack Boedecar, head guide, said the bear was the biggest grizzly shot in that area in recent years. There is only a small number of the species in Wyoming.

Beaty told his companions he would not soon forget the loud, angry growl of the bear as it charged.

The taking of the other two grizzlies and the two blacks presented no particular difficulties. Jay Davis, looking for elk, saw a black bear within 100 yards. His first shot brought it down. Weidlich bagged another black the following day.

Hentschell killed an elk, a five-point bull, at about 150 yards with a clean shot in the chest. He said this shot, made while the animal was moving, provides an answer to friends who have not let him forget a published report about his efforts to shoot an antelope two years ago.

On this trip, no one had trouble bagging an antelope. This was the first order of business and was completed in one day. McDowell then departed, leaving the others to hunt bear and elk.

Many Moose Are Seen.

The visitors used horses to get into the hunting territory in the Grand Teton mountain area, south of Yellowstone National Park. They carried tents and sleeping bags. At night, the temperature would fall to about 20 degrees above zero, but the days were warm.

Although the hunters had no permits to shoot moose, they saw many of the big, ungainly animals. Stuart Davis and his guide were on a mountain trail one day when they encountered a bull moose going in the opposite direction.

Since the bulls are likely to be quite unfriendly at this time of the year, the two men stepped off into the brush, giving right-of-way to the moose.

McCracken and Hentschell saw a cow moose that approached within 20 feet of them, curiosity getting the better of its inherent fear of men. The hunters, slightly uneasy over the nearness of the animal, which had two calves along, kept their trigger fingers ready, but there was no need to shoot.

Two of the elk shot on the trip are being given to Mary Queen of Peace Catholic Church in Webster Groves to provide for a venison ragout to be served at the annual sportsmen's dinner of the Men's Club Dec. 5.

$27,402,919 Total Bet at Fairmount and Cahokia Race Meetings

Wagering Less Than Last Year

Followers of horse racing in the St. Louis district passed a total of $27,402,919 through the mutuel windows at Fairmount Park and Cahokia Downs during the 120-day-and-night thoroughbred racing campaign which ended at the East St. Louis track last night.

There was little difference in the betting totals at the two tracks—both down from the 1954 figures. A total of $13,511,230 was wagered at Fairmount, while at Cahokia (figuring a $375,000 handle for the final night) it was approximately $13,891,689. The 1954 Fairmount handle was $15,638,258 and Cahokia's $16,015,356.

The season's handle brought the total since night racing was introduced to $114,813,906.

The new Illinois law which went into effect on July 1, reducing the state's share of the mutuel handle when the wagering total is under $300,000 to 4 per cent, instead of 6 per cent, cut $269,141.34 from the state's "take." Under this new law, Cahokia benefited more than Fairmount, since the Collinsville track had only 16 nights of racing under this system.

$1,374,033 to State.

The savings to Fairmount was $55,602.60, whereas it was $213,538.60 for Cahokia.

The state's share for 1955 was $1,374,033 of which $755,071 came from the Fairmount handle and $618,962 at Cahokia.

Since night racing was introduced by Daniel C. Parish, Edwin C. Moon and their associates, the state has received approximately $6,932,837 from the mutuel handle. In addition, 50 per cent of the breakage goes into the Illinois treasury.

Cahokia's daily average for the campaign was $231,528, whereas the total at Fairmount, which was plagued by bad weather at the start of the campaign, was $225,187.

The largest single total was the $470,655 at Cahokia the night Prince Eric won the $12,000 added St. Louis Derby. This established a Cahokia record, but it was not a new mark for the St. Louis district since thoroughbreds replaced the harness horses at Fairmount. On Labor Day, 1953, the handle at Fairmount was $525,138, while on Labor day, 1952, a total of $516,189 passed through the mutuel windows. Fairmount's top handle during the past season was $429,914 on Memorial day.

Standout Performers.

Standouts for the campaign were Clarence Meaux, jockey; C. Howard Springs and C. C. Lemons, trainers; Mr. and Mrs. Pete Maxwell and Mikel Farm, owners, and Mister Plucky among the horses.

Meaux, out for the final week of the Cahokia campaign, was the riding champion at both tracks. He had 46 firsts at Fairmount and 68 at Cahokia, giving him a total of 114 for the season. The Abbeville, La., rider, who piloted his first winner at Fairmount in June of 1954, has now been in the winner's circle 197 times in two years at the St.-Louis-district tracks.

Spring topped the Collinsville trainers with 27 wins, while Lemons had the same number at Cahokia. Springs saddled 14 at Cahokia, giving him an overall total of 41 for the year.

Maxwell horses earned $18,700 at Fairmount and $17,375 at Cahokia for a season's total of $36,075. Mikel Farm horses were first in 27 starts and earned more than $22,000 at Cahokia.

Mister Plucky, owned by James W. Norwine of Collinsville, was in the winner's circle six times for earnings of $10,075. And Emil Denemark Jr.'s Prince Epic earned $10,225 for his owner in just one race—the St. Louis Derby.

Season's High Marks.

High marks for the campaign were as follows:

Largest daily double—$1025.60 on March Mix and Colony Hope at Cahokia. There were 11 lucky ticket holders.

Smallest daily double—$8.60 on Psycary and Miss Crossbow at Cahokia.

Largest single payoff—Mary's Beacon $126.80 for $2 at Cahokia.

Smallest single payoff—Paul H $2.60 for $2 at Cahokia.

There were 11 dead heats at the two tracks during the campaign—three to win; two to place and six to show.

During the season, there were nine disqualifications. On seven occasions, the horse that finished first was disqualified and set back.

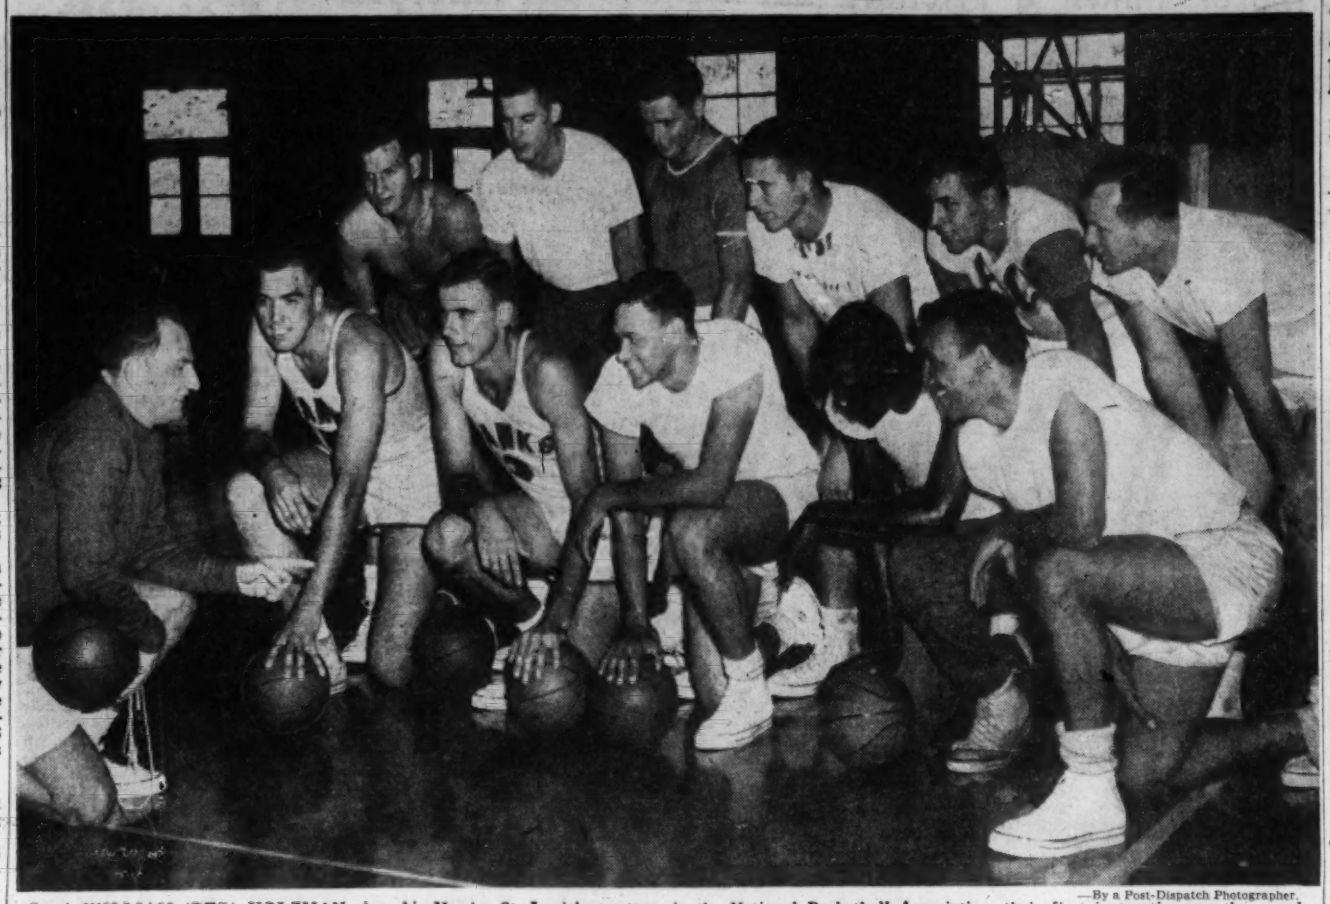

The campaign saw one alleged "doping" case. That came on Aug. 3 after Bouncing Bern had won at Cahokia. Owner-trainer R. Baicchi was suspended by the stewards and his case referred to the Illinois Racing Board. The horse paid $16.40 to win, but the first place purse was taken away and the money redistributed. The horse has since run under another owner-trainer, but has failed to win.

The July 23 program at Fairmount was cut to three races, when, following a power failure, the jockeys refused to ride.

Florence Harkins Rolls 654 for City High

Florence Harkins bowled a 654 total, including high single of 243, to set a new city individual high three-game record in the Women's Major Scratch League at Du-Bowl Lanes. The previous high was a 641 series made by Mrs. LaVerne Carter. Marge Willson was one pin shy with a 653 score. Mrs. Carter, former W.I.B.C. champion, a league substitute, registered 606.

Open Division Planned For Muny Basketball

An open division, similar to that inaugurated in Muny softball this year, will be set up in Muny basketball, the executive committee decided at a reorganization meeting.

The purpose of an open division is to bunch the strongest teams and thus provide more interest in pennant races. There have been objections to one-sided competition in some leagues in recent seasons.

Managers wishing to enter teams in either the open or closed divisions should write Earl Grasser, secretary, at the Muny office, 2319 Hampton avenue, room 104, or call him in the evening at MI 7-4374. Managers of open teams will meet at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 12 in the Muny office.

C.B.C. Wins, 26-29.

The C.B.C. cross-country team came through with a 26-29 triumph over University City High at the Forest Park course. Richard Geekie of C.B.C. was first.

Hickey to Move Jim McLaughlin To Forward Post

Although St. Louis University basketball practice will not start for another month, Coach Eddie Hickey already has plans to improve the Billikens.

He announced yesterday that Capt. Jim McLaughlin, who has been a center for the past two years, would be moved to forward and Al (6-8) Serkin, Joe (6-6) Uelk or Sam (6-5) Stipanovich would take over the pivot post.

Hickey also said he was considering moving Guard Joe Todd to a forward position and using Grady Smith and Harold Alcorn on the backline, giving the Bills a letterman starting five. Jack Mimlitz, high scorer on the freshman team, will be the No. 1 forward replacement.

Sale of season tickets will start tomorrow. The first home game will be against Louisiana Tech of Rush Ruston, La., Dec. 3.

Radio Station KMOX will carry a broadcast of the 24 Billiken games.

OKLA. A.&M.	0	0	6	0	— 6

STILLWATER, Okla., Oct. 1 (AP) — Texas Tech converted two errors in the first quarter into easy touchdowns and went on to subdue the Oklahoma Aggies here today, 24-6.

The Red Raiders, far different from the club which took a 32-0 trouncing from Texas Christian last week, allowed the Aggies a lone score in the third quarter as they held the upper hand most of the contest with a bruising line proving the difference.

Tech's first two touchdowns came three minutes apart. With 10 minutes gone, Jack Kirkpatrick picked up a free ball that hit an Aggie after A.&M.'s Pontius punted on the fourth down. Kirkpatrick picked up the free ball on the Aggie 36 and ran it back to the 13.

Three plays later he pitched 11 yards to Lefthalf M. C. Northam, who went over standing up.

Tech recovered Aggie Fullback Earl Lunsford's fumble on the A.&M. 25 and six plays later Ronnie Herr skirted left end six yards to score.

Duke Pins Record 6th Straight Loss on Vols

DUKE	0	7	7	7	—21

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 1 (INS)—Duke's experienced Blue Devils outplayed Tennessee's sophomore-studded Volunteers to win their annual clash before 25,500 fans at Knoxville, 21-to-0 today. It was Tennessee's sixth straight defeat, longest losing streak in it's school history.

The Blue Devils scored once in each of the last three quarters.

With 28 seconds left in the first half, Bob Pascal rolled over from the one-yard line. In the third quarter, Duke's Bernie Blaney electrified the shirt-sleeved crowd with an 80-yard scoring run on the second play from scrimmage after Tennessee had punted. In the final period, Pascal again went over, this time from one yard out, climaxing a drive of 74 yards.

Franklin-Marshall Wins.

LANCASTER, Pa., Oct. 1 (UP) — Franklin and Marshall rallied for two touchdowns in the last period today to defeat Johns Hopkins University, 14-7.

Hawks Begin Training, 11 Men Report

The St. Louis Hawks basketball club opened pre-season training yesterday with 11 players reporting to Coach Red Holzman for the morning workouts. The balance of the squad was expected in late yesterday.

Two of expected rookies, Chuck Grigsby and Chris Harris, were delayed enroute from Dayton, O., when their train was involved in an accident. Neither was injured.

Holzman was pleased with the physical condition of the players turning out for the morning drills.

He said he had instructed all of the players to report in playing shape and "everyone looked ready to go a full game."

"They realize this year we have a good chance to take all the honors and everyone is looking forward to a big year," he added.

Light scrimmages are planned for today and Monday with stiff drills set for the balance of the week.

The Hawks drill twice daily at Concordia Seminary.

Neuner Scores Twice In Mercy's 13-0 Win

Mercy High scored in the first and third quarters to defeat Western Military Academy, 13-0, yesterday, with George Neuner getting both touchdowns on 10 and 15-yard runs.

Neuner went the rest of the way. In the third period Neuner's 15-yard dash culminated a 50-yard Mercy drive. Jim Beckman this time took Nolan's pass for the extra point.

RALEIGH, N.C., Oct. 1 (AP) — Sophomore Quarterback David Reed scored two touchdowns, one on an 83-yard punt return, as once beaten North Carolina turned back N.C. State 25-18, before a crowd of 17,000 today.

It was State's third straight loss of the season. Most of the second half was played in the rain.

After trailing by 19-6 at the half, State rallied to cut the margin to 19-18, before the Tar Heels applied the clincher with a fourth period touchdown.

Reed, a 160-pounder of Shamokin, Pa., broke loose for 83 yards in the second period. The Tar Heels scored in the opening period when Tackle Jack Maultsby broke through and blocked Quarterback Eddie West's punt. End Will Frye recovered in the end zone for a touchdown.

North Carolina scored just before the end of the first half when Halfback Ken Keller went over from the six to climax a 69-yard drive. Keller converted one of his four placement attempts.

Cubs Sell Six; Perkowski and Merriman Go

CHICAGO, Oct. 1 (AP)—The Chicago Cubs today sold six players, including veteran Pitcher Harry Perkowski and Outfielder Lloyd Merriman, to their Los Angeles farm club in the Pacific Coast League.

Two other pitchers, right-handers Dave Hillman and Hy Cohen, Infielder Vern Morgan and Outfielder Jim Bolger also went to the Angels.

Although the contracts of all six were said to have been "sold," no consideration was mentioned.

Perkowski spent five seasons with the Cincinnati Redlegs before joining the Cubs last season when he had a 3-4 record. Merriman also was a former Redleg property and joined the Cubs after a brief stay with the Chicago White Sox early this year. He batted .214 in 72 Cub games.

Bolger, 23, hit .211 in 62 games but performed well defensively. Cohen, 24, appeared in seven early season Cub games without a decision and was optioned to Los Angeles, where he won 5 and lost 10.

Hillman, 28, had no decisions in 25 appearances. Morgan, 27, spent most of the season on option to Des Moines, where he batted .300.

West Virginia Wallops Wake Forest, 46-0

WEST VA.	—	12	14	13	7—46

MORGANTOWN, W.Va., Oct. 1 (AP) — West Virginia's Mountaineers humiliated Wake Forest, 46-0, today as Coach Art Lewis squeezed everything possible out of his two-platoon system.

The score was the greatest run up against a Deacon team since its 54-0 walloping by Army 10 years ago.

Quarterback Freddy Wyant's passing neared perfection; Halfbacks Joe Marconi and Bob Moss swept through the Deacon secondary with ease, and the bruising Mountaineer line rushed hard to break up Wake Forest's touted passing attack.

The Mountaineers grabbed two touchdowns in a first-period span of 58 seconds, and went on with amazing power for the rest of the game. Wake Forest's deepest penetration was to the W.V.U. 1, with five minutes left to play. The drive fizzled when West Virginia's third string held for downs against the Deacon regulars.

West Virginia scoring: Touchdowns—Moss 2 (49, run; 1, plunge); Huff (recovered Console's fumble in end zone); Hosek (27, pass); Wyant (2, plunge); Shepherd (7, run); Szuch (5, plunge). Conversions: Holmes 2, Huff, Pickett.

Wisconsin Routs Iowa With Ease By 37-14 Score

IOWA	7	7	0	0	—14
WISCONSIN	7	16	14	0	—37

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 1 (AP) —Wisconsin routed Iowa 37-14 with surprising ease and served notice that it is a power to be reckoned with in the Big Ten football race today as rangy Dave Howard speared three touchdown passes of 43, 16, and 33 yards to show the way.

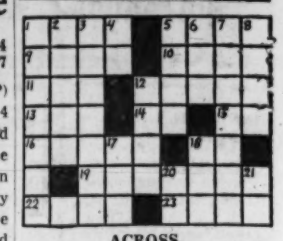

A record Camp Randall Stadium crowd of 53,509 saw the relentless Badger machine overcome a 13-14 deficit in the second quarter and turn what had been a close contest into a one-sided breeze.

The game — first Western Conference start for both teams —had been rated a tossup, with Iowa given an edge, if any, but the Badgers' three touchdowns and a field goal in the second and third quarters took the starch out of the Hawkeyes.

Iowa scoring: Touchdowns, Vincent (3, plunge), Ploen (5, plunge). Conversions, Freeman 2 (placekicks).

Wisconsin scoring: Touchdowns, Howard 3 (43-pass-run from Miller; 16-pass-run from Haluska; 33-pass-run from Haluska); Thomas (5, plunge); Miller (49-run, punt return). Field goal, Shwaiko (16 yards). Conversions, Shawaiko 4 (placekicks).

Women, Bless Them

Lucky in All Things, Including Poker

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (AP).

IT has been an open secret for some time that men find women puzzling.

But the one thing about women that most men feel surest about is—they can't play poker well.

This hardy superstition is perpetuated in a new book called "Dealer's Choice," a collection of poker stories by Jerry D. Lewis, a former New York newspaper man.

Lewis, who cautiously dedicated his book "to Louise, without whom there could never be a full house," quotes a psychiatrist as follows:

"The average woman is too curious to play poker well. In an evening's play, she'll have a dozen hands where 'calling the bet' displays a suicide complex. Yet, she can no more resist throwing in the chips under these circumstances than she can help looking at the label in a friend's new coat."

Personally, I think this remark only shows the psychiatrist needs to have his head examined.

● ACCORDING TO THIS THEORY, psychiatrists themselves should be lousy poker players, because they are more curious than the average woman. They are always asking if you have an overwhelming urge to stick thumb tacks into your mother or salt your daddy's beer with arsenic, and if not, why not.

And if curiosity alone were the hallmark of idiocy, then it naturally would follow that the worst poker player of all would be a woman psychiatrist.

The sorrowful truth is that the old saying "Lucky in cards, unlucky in love" doesn't apply to women. They are lucky in everything.

● "POKER ALICE," the famed cigar-smoking pal of Wild Bill Hickok, was renowned for her skill with the pasteboards during the palmy past of Deadwood, S.D. But I'll wager there isn't a community in America today that doesn't have some beldame or matron able to beat "Poker Alice" if the chips were really down.

The curiosity to see what's in the other fellow's hand may be a sign of weakness in women at poker. But it is more than balanced by their uncanny ability to see what's in the other fellow's mind. And that is much more important.

Poker isn't a game. It's a matter of practical psychology. And who can figure out what a man will do even before he makes up his own mind? A woman—every time.

● MEN SAY they don't like to play poker with women because they talk too much, stall too often, and insist on playing insane games in which deuces, aces, the joker and one-eyed jacks are wild.

"One woman in a poker game is consternation—two are chaos," they claim.

But they say these things only to bolster their own male egos. I used to play poker with women. I don't any more. I found I couldn't afford to.

If wives really want to know why husbands don't like to let them into their poker games, here are the honest reasons:

1. They win too often.

2. You can't bluff them. They can see through a man's feeble pretense that he holds three aces when he actually only has a feeble pair of tens.

3. They cheat. If their instinct doesn't tell them what you have in your hands, they're always trying to peek and see.

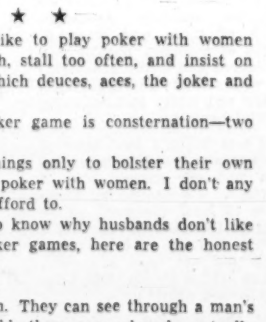

4. After they win all the money, they expect the losers to walk home. They rarely offer to lend a man taxi fare.

The male prejudice against women poker players stems from one thing only—the manly need of self-defense. Let all men call me traitor for admitting it. But it's true.

Unaccustomed as I Am---

By Bennett Cerf

A CRUSTY old millionaire fancied himself as an orator and was continually nagging his ghost writers to provide him with speeches that would earn him front-page headlines. Just before addressing his most important audience at the Waldorf, he was more impossible than ever. He rejected so many drafts, that he didn't even have time to read the last version his long-suffering chief ghost had prepared for him. He moved to the podium when he was introduced and started reading his script in stentorian tones.

The first four pages were in the ghost's finest style, and the audience responded warmly. Conscious that he was making a good impression, the millionaire turned over to page five in the middle of an involved sentence. To his horror, the only words on the new page were:

"I quit, you crabbed old so and so. From here in, Toots, you're on your own!"

A PATIENT told his analyst, "One thing I want you to cure me of is an irrepressible desire to make frequent long-distance phone calls to myself."

"I should think," mused the analyst, "that would prove to be a very expensive indulgence."

"Not the way I do it," insisted the patient. "I always reverse the charges."

JOE KLING boarded his home-bound bus in the best of all possible humor. "I feel fine tonight," he boasted to his neighbor, Goodkind. "I got a cute little cocker puppy for my wife this morning." "Gosh," sighed Goodkind enviously, "I wish I could make a trade like that!"

Parenthood Without Hokum

Let-the-Child-Do- as - He - Pleases Theory Is Going Out the Window, Says Writer—Parents Encouraged To Assert Themselves in the Home

(This is the first article in a series on the rediscovery of the lost art of parenthood. The author's findings sweep away an accumulation of stuff and nonsense which has littered this vital subject for more than two decades. Parents are given confidence to be parents again, with the backing of new and down-to-earth trends in sociology and psychology.)

By Howard Whitman

THERE is mounting evidence in the nation's family agencies and courts that the "let the child do as he pleases" theory of parenhood has backfired not only against society but against the very children who were reared that way.

It has produced neither well-adjusted nor creative children —as hoped for—but rather youngsters who are untrained for life and end up paying the price themselves.

Typical of the writer's findings throughout the country is the report from the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene by psychiatric social worker Thelma DuVinage, in charge of intake:

"Some youngsters come to us who are just 'lumps'," she stated. "They have just been fed and coddled. Their parents' idea of raising them has simply been to do things for them—never to expect anything from them.

"If such a child complains about food, he is given other food—every complaint is met. If he feels like messing up the house or even breaking things, he is allowed to. The well-intentioned parents have been trying to make him 'happy'. They have had the idea that a child must be continuously happy but they have overlooked the fact that it helps the child to experience disappointment once in a while."

Such children, the case studies indicate, grow up with no sense of live and let live and no motion of society's basic equation: rights equal obligations. Moreover they are psychologically weak, with distorted egos. As Miss DuVinage put it, "These children have no sense of identity."

THE story of a girl named Paula, culled from thousands of cases in the files of Family Service Association agencies, illustrates how the child eventually pays.

Paula is 14, eldest child in a family which could afford to send her to an outstanding private school. The case history notes, "Though Paula had a fixed allowance she was able to get extra money anytime she wanted it by 'begging' or 'nagging'."

About a year ago Paula stopped resorting even to these measures. She simply went into her father's desk drawer, where household funds were kept, and helped herself. Her father made feeble attempts to discipline her, but gave these up because he felt, as he put it, "that discipline was old-fashioned." Paula was permitted to go out as many as five nights a week and no effective attempts were made to govern the hour when she came home. The case history notes "an almost total absence of controls."

Paula carried with her to the private school the pattern of behavior she had learned at home. Her case history ends with the terse line, "Last March, in the middle of the semester, Paula was expelled from school."

The most pathetic thing about Paula's father, a case worker remarked, was that he actually believed that he had given-in to the girl because he "loved" her. It took a long time to show this father the difference between love and neglect.

In Baton Rouge, Louisiana, Judge Joe W. Sanders, of the newly established Family Court, reported another typical case. It concerns a boy of 15, whom we'll call Pete. Pete first got in trouble with the law for "borrowing" an unlocked auto and going for a joy ride. He was reprimanded and sent home. Before long he was back in court, this time on a serious charge of auto theft.

"I HAD to send him to training school," Judge Sanders related. "This boy had no idea of life in society. His mother had pampered him—she always took his side when his father tried to discipline him. Yet it was the mother who sat there and cried all during the court hearing. The father came up and shook my hand and said, 'You did what had to be done.'

"This mother had hurt, not helped, the boy. Perhaps she didn't realize that if she had more discipline at home he would need less in court. She pampered him right into bad boys' school."

Where did the "let children do as they please" idea come from?

It was part of a Great Experiment in human behavior over the past quarter-century.

It was an experiment to find out what would happen to the human being if you just let him grow. You weren't to train him. You weren't to be old-fashioned enough to give him moral precepts.

You weren't to interfere with the free development of his personality for fear of stunting or impairing it. The new human being was to grow untouched by restraint and discipline—and was in no event to be frustrated.

A prominent New York psychiatrist told me of an emotionally disturbed family in which the mother was under psychiatric treatment while her son also, age 9, was under care of a psychological therapist. The therapist was an ardent follower of the Great Experiment. She encouraged every form of free expression on the part of the youngster. On one occasion the psychiatrist went on an errand with the mother and son in a taxi. As they left the taxi, the nine-year-old turned to the driver and said of his mother, "She's a b——!"

The taxi driver was flabbergasted. All he could say was, "I'd never have lived to say that when I was a kid."

This was an intuitive man-on-the-street reaction. But the knowledgeable psychiatrist reacted quite the same way. He had the child discontinue treatment with the do-as-you-please therapist and placed under reasonable limits and controls.

"As a result," the psychiatrist commented, "both the mother and the child were better off."

The coddling mania probably reached its high point when a Canadian psychologist performed a series of experiments with rats and his findings were reported under the headline "Finds Coddling Makes Rats Healthier, Wiser." This was promptly seized upon by some of the enthusiasts of the Great Experiment, who leaped to the conclusion that what is good for rats is also good for children.

The idea of jettisoning discipline and the time-honored training of children was nowhere more warmly received than in Communist Russia. As Russia had appropriated even the natural sciences to serve the needs of Communist society, it was logical that it also should appropriate the social sciences. Letting children do as they please was seen as a helpful revolutionary tool in overthrowing the authority of parents and the home so that it might no longer compete with the authority of the state.

As recently as last March a Russian child welfare official warned on the Moscow radio that parents should not spank their children for this would "make children sly, untruthful, and fretful" and would render them "incapable of building the new Soviet life."

But many Americans are likely to believe it would be a better life for everybody if the Molotovs, Berias, and Vishinskys all had been given a few competent spankings along the way.

FROM rats to Russia there has been little in the Great Experiment to indicate that it has been other than a blind alley. Those in the forefront of American sociology and psychology are today willing to admit that the experiment has been a failure and are pointing now to avenues of child rearing which promise greater progress.

Instead of "free expression" and "don't frustrate them," many leaders in the child care field now are speaking of "limit setting," the need for "controls," and "management of impulses." But stripped of technical verbiage, the new trend and its implications were well expressed by a young mother whom I overheard speaking to her eight-year-old boy when he had done something wrong.

"I don't blame you as a child for trying to get away with everything you can," she said—"but as a grown-up I would not be doing you any good if I let you get away with it."

Another young mother, being helped with her problems by the Family and Child Services of Washington, D.C., remarked to a case worker, "I shouldn't say this, but sometimes I get so angry at my child that I can hardly stand it."

Her attitude was typical of thousands of mothers — and fathers too—who are worried, guilt-ridden, or just plain mixed up about getting angry. Sometimes they put it in other words:

"I know it's not right to get angry with my children. There must be something wrong with me but I just can't help flying off the handle once in a while."

"I try to hold it in as long as I can, but then I just have to let loose."

"I'm actually afraid of what I might do when I get angry."

THE feeling is so widespread that psychologists have given it a name—"parental neurosis." In St. Petersburg, Fla., Psychologist Martin Griffin described the malady as "a disease in which nice, ordinary parents who love their children and want to do 'the right thing' are beating themselves over the head with guilt feelings when they reach out and swat some particularly outrageous behavior on the part of their offspring."

The cure for "parental neurosis" is an understanding of what anger is, how it works, and what constructive part it can play in child-rearing. To condemn it out of hand is an implied criticism of the Creator for putting it there; a more productive approach is to find out why He put it there.

Psychological studies have established that emotions are a source of energy. They give us a shot of additional brain power and muscle power so that we may cope with an emergency situation. It is the emotion of fear which enables a man to run faster when a lion is chasing him than he could under less demanding circumstances. Likewise the emotion of anger shoots through our system emergency energies designed to help us cope with a threatening situation.

With parents, it is not anger itself but rather repressed anger which causes blow-ups. Fathers and mothers who try hardest to "control themselves" often are the ones who blow their tops.

IN the case of flagrant misbehavior by a child, the emotion of anger might send to the parent's brain and muscles a torrent of energy which at first might suggest anything from locking the child in his room to a savage beating, but when it is not under pressure the brain can evaluate the effectiveness of various courses of action. It is not likely to select one which will only make matters worse and leave the parent himself feeling wretched.

Perhaps the brain may counsel the forfeiture of one of the child's privileges, or an extra chore to do, a reasonably-administered spanking, or a half-hour lecture—all depending on the individual parent and child. Whatever is chosen, it will represent a constructive use of the emotional energy rather than a blowing up of the boiler.

What about the child's anger? Children are equipped with this emotion, too, and their expression of it often baffles parents or even frightens them.

Yet it is no more healthy for a child to repress anger than it is for a parent. Part of a child's education is learning that anger is a natural condition and how to employ it constructively. This means that a child must be trained in an effective and acceptable manner. He must learn that it will do him no good to rage and stomp when he is angry and that it will only get him into further trouble if he bashes little brother or sister on the head.

If anger is to be employed constructively it must serve one's own best interests, whether adult or child. An adult who is angry because a policeman has stopped him on the highway soon learns that calling the policeman names won't help.

SINCE parents have had more experience with good and bad uses of anger, they are in position to help the child choose good ones. When a father seizes the arm of a child who is about to throw a rock at the boy next door, he is indicating to him that this manner of expressing anger is likely to bring bad results. The same is true of a mother who spanks the little girl who has just angrily broken a vase. The idea is not to suppress the emotion but to indicate to the child the difference between using and misusing the emotional energies.

It helps children to come to terms with their own emotions if they can observe that their parents have similar feelings. "Grown-ups do get angry, and children should know it," one psychologist commented.

Many counselors in recent years warned parents not to have disagreements or arguments in their children's presence. This, it was supposed, would severely rock the family boat and might swamp it. But few counselors give such advice today. It is recognized now that rough weather at home, just as rough weather at sea, provides a necessary condition for learning how to navigate.

So to the young mother who came to the Washington family agency so upset about her own anger, the patient counsel was —"No human being is even-tempered all the time. We all react to irritations, and children can be mighty irritating at times. A parental outburst once in a while can clear the air. It certainly is better than storing up resentment."

Movie Studio Gossip

By Sheilah Graham

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 1.

HUMPHREY BOGART and Walter Wanger are in the middle of a deal to buy the Saturday Evening Post serial, "A Killer Came to Town." Wanger to produce and Bogey to star, with wife Lauren Bacall and Frank Sinatra.

Gilbert Miller is having the popular British play, "Sailor Beware," rewritten for Thelma Ritter — for Broadway, of course. . . . Jeff Donnell is near a breakdown. She lost George Gobel as a TV husband and Aldo Ray in real life, all in less than two weeks.

Bing Crosby, after watching Judy Garland rehearsing walked away murmuring, "What talent, what talent." . . . Gloria de Haven is picking the church for her next wedding, which will be very soon.

James Mason's movie, "Odd Man Out," was good on TV, and revealed Dan O'Herlihy in a bit part. . . . Orson Welles will cast his wife in "Othello" in New York. . . . Tony Martin has talked Rocky Marciano into joining his night club act. . . . Greer Garson, up to her chin in cattle breeding, is crossing a Scottish whiteface with a Texas bull, for a new type of breed, she hopes.

Errol Flynn's TV series, now hatching in New York, should go a long way to pay off those bills. Incidentally, when Errol's movie with Anna Neagle nose-dived in England, Anna was quoted: "We were very disappointed. Errol couldn't have been as big a star as we thought he was." Stuff and nonsense—the bigness or smallness of a star has nothing to do with whether a movie is good or bad. Look at "Marty."

* * *

THE LONDON PALLADIUM is paging Mae West, but her last experience in London soured her on the British capital. Seems she was invited to a swank party as which another very, very popular American performer was present. The guests asked Mae to sing. "I'd love to," she said, "but I don't have anyone to play for me." The very, very popular American was asked to play. He refused curtly—to everyone's embarrassment. Especially Mae's.

Edmund Purdom and Linda Christian attended a private showing of J. Arthur Rank's "Doctor at Sea" in London and giggled and talked all the way through the movie, and, brother, were they told off by head Rank man, John Davis . . . Incidently, Linda is returning to Hollywood, and Tyrone Power has to get out of their house.

TALKING OF RANK reminds me of Alec Korda, who had to pay Laurence Harvey $28,000 when he called off the filming of "Arms and the Man." Larry's co-star, Alec Guinness, didn't have as insistent a manager, and Guinness got nothing.

Cameron Mitchell confirms my conjecture that he's parting from his wife. "We did have a big fight just before I left Hollywood," Cam relays, "and when I return I will not go home. This has been coming to a head for some time. No other woman is involved." The Mitchells, married 15 years, have four children.

Shirley Jones writes: "I haven't been seen on a movie screen yet, but I made two pictures valued at over $10,000,000, and when I get married I will toss this whole career out the window."

June Allyson talking: "The mind is a wonderful thing. It starts working when you are born, and never stops until you stand up in public to make a speech."

JUNE ALLYSON . . . THE MIND, IT'S WONDERFUL.

Columbia has signed Clifford Odets to rewrite "Joseph and His Brethren" with orders to tailor it specifically to Rita Hayworth's talents. I have a hunch the studio will call off its suit against Rita, and she will do the movie later this fall.

Elizabeth Taylor returns to St. John's hospital after "Giant" is completed, to put her pretty back in traction . . . When co-star Rock Hudson was visited by Phyllis Gates on location, he asked, "no publicity, please" . . . Terry Moore tested for "Bus Stop" but the studio says they will stick with Marilyn Monroe.

At Possum Trot Farm

Conclusions From Study of Wildlife

By Leonard Hall

ONE morning this week, as we stood in the yard a few feet from the porch discussing the day's work, we heard a squeaking sound. Looking around, I saw Mike and Tiger each holding a tiny cottontail rabbit in his mouth.

At command, each dog laid down its baby rabbit entirely unharmed; whereupon we sent the setters indoors while we looked around and discovered the nest almost underneath our feet. There was still one young bunny tucked snugly away in the ball of grass and fur. And after we'd returned the two unharmed youngsters, Matt and I fashioned a guard of chicken wire above the nest to keep the dogs away, but with a small opening where the mother rabbit could go in and out.

We didn't have an opportunity to watch during the day, but in late evening we looked and all three young rabbits were gone. Since we were sure the dogs hadn't bothered them, it seemed most likely that the mother rabbit had moved her youngsters to a more secure location. The odd thing was the building of the nest no more than a dozen feet from the door, right out on the open lawn in a tuft of fairly long grass. Ordinarily I doubt she'd have built there, but the dogs had been away at the kennel for two weeks and there was nothing else to bother her.

This set me to thinking about the ability of the cottontail, as well as of some other seemingly helpless species, to survive under the severest kind of pressure from the so-called predators. And here in our yard, almost at the doorstep, was a wonderful example of how this small mammal, which furnishes food for so many others, has adapted itself to keep the race of rabbits going. Here at Possum Trot, cottontails get one big break, in that they aren't preyed upon by men—except for trespassers who climb over the fence with a gun. Yet there are plenty of other predators: foxes, owls, hawks, an occasional blacksnake big enough to swallow the small rabbits, old Veronica the farm cat, our own dogs and those from neighboring farms. But the rabbit has been living with all of these for hundreds, if not thousands, of years and managing to survive. And I am convinced that the limiting factor on the rabbit population isn't that we don't hunt them, but is the use we make of our land.

It seems to me that in the whole field of wildlife few subjects are less understood—or perhaps it would be better to say, more misunderstood—than predation. The main reason for this is our propensity for judging all living creatures as good or bad according to some use we wish to make of them—or according to purely human standards which actually cannot apply to animals and which we don't even follow ourselves. We forget that for eons longer than men have inhabited the earth, life has followed patterns which we call predation and without which life could not exist.

● AS THE GREAT ECOLOGIST PAUL ERRINGTON of Iowa has put it: "Apart from the refinements evolved by man, life is mainly a process of unimaginative exploitation of the exploitable, with the participants living as best they can." Thus it might be said that the only true predator or harmful predator is the one which preys upon his fellow creatures for sport or profit. And the horned owl which pounces upon the rabbit is no more a predator than is the gourmet who pounces on his rare filet mignon. Both are interested in eating to sustain life, though the gourmet undoubtedly wastes more food than the owl.

A great deal of research has been done in this field of predation by wildlife biologists and from this research it is possible to draw some interesting conclusions. One is that the animal which is pursued or preyed upon actually does adapt itself through the centuries for survival. And another is that availability is the factor which determines what animals shall be preyed upon by others. Thus as long as field mice are present in an area in great abundance, they are used as food by most of the small carnivorous birds and animals. The same is true of certain insects and fishes, of rabbits and even of large mammals in the great game fields of Africa and the Arctic wastes.

● ANOTHER INTERESTING CONCLUSION which must be drawn from the research is that predation—other than

by such man-made means as the gun, plow, ax and fire—is seldom a factor in limiting the population of any species. Almost always it is the environment—the amount of food and cover and range, as well as the pressure from other species that use these same resources, which determines how many quail or rabbits or deer or racoons can be supported on a given area of land.

Predation research also brings us definite new knowledge of the actual food habits of many creatures which we presecute as predators. Thus the broad-winged hawk has a diet consisting of 83 per cent insects, rats and mice, frogs and snakes, no poultry or game birds and about one-half of 1 per cent rabbits. The same is true of the red-shouldered hawk, although it may take about 3 per cent of its diet in poultry, game birds and rabbits. Even the red-tail, with 17 per cent of game and poultry in its diet, takes rats and mice for 53 per cent of its meals. Sparrow hawks take no game whatever, living almost entirely on insects, rats and mice and small snakes and frogs. The big marsh hawk takes a fair share of small song birds which are usually excess population, but is also a great mouser. The little sharp-shin dines mainly on small birds and only the Cooper's hawk takes an appreciable amount of poultry and game, which makes up 22 per cent of its diet. Thus the whole family of hawks might be called "flying mouse traps" which are worthy of complete protection against predation by men, except in occasional instance.

Mexican 'Alice' in Wonderland

EUDOXIA GONZALEZ IN VARIED MEXICAN COSTUMES.

St. Louis Tourists Heard Girl Sing in Train Seat Behind Them And as Result Have Brought Her Here for Advanced Voice Study

By George McCue

WHEN Walt Disney's "Alice in Wonderland" film was fitted with a new sound track in Spanish for its Latin-American bookings, the voice chosen for Alice was that of an advanced student of opera, then still in her teens, at the University of Neuva Leon, in Mexico. Now the voice, together with the rest of the young singer, has materialized in St. Louis.

It has done so in the form—and a nice form it is—of a sprightly, dark-eyed, creamy-complexioned lyric soprano named Eudoxia Gonzalez, who is about as big as a minute and five seconds. The circumstances that brought her here have a certain wonderland flavor of their own. Eudoxia is beginning a year's study of voice and opera at the St. Louis Institute of Music on a scholarship, and she is making her home with a South St. Louis couple who are footing the bills for all her other expenses—a couple who came into her life by the merest chance. And Eudoxia is cramming English and coping with the intricacies of St. Louis transportation with much the same flabbergasted air as Alice had in the presence of the caterpillar.

Between lessons, Eudoxia Gonzalez is spending a good deal of time right now explaining how to pronounce her first name, so let's give it a quick run-through. The initial "E" has the long "a" sound, the "u" is pronounced like "oo," the "o" is long and receives the accent, and the "x" is the same as in English. "Ay-oo-DOX-ia."

EUDOXIA'S St. Louis sponsors are Mr. and Mrs. Otto C. Miller, of 3942A Fillmore street. Miller is traffic manager at the Beacon Paper Co., and his wife, Sophia, is a bookkeeper at the Peter Hauptman Tobacco Co. They live in the second floor portion of a comfortable two-family house that they share with Miller's brother, Edward.

The Millers are not wealthy, but, with no children of their own, they have given themselves over completely to the cause of seeing Eudoxia through her final training period. This makes for some interesting times in their household, where the expressive gesture is helping to fill the gap between the Mexican girl's faltering English and the Millers's guidebook Spanish. Because they believe that Eudoxia has a future and because they have grown as fond of her as if she were their own, the Millers have drastically revised their whole life around the policy "Eudoxia first."

The events that led to the Millers' becoming proteges of a budding opera singer were set in motion two years ago, when their first meeting came about on a train that was pulling out of Mexico City.

"We were on our way back to the states after our first vacation in Mexico," says Mrs. Miller. "In the seat behind us, we heard someone humming and singing a little Mexican song in a wonderful, clear soprano. I couldn't help turning around to see who had such a fine voice, and there was this lovely girl sitting beside a very handsome young man.

"I knew very little Spanish, so I said to her in English, 'What a beautiful voice you have.' She said 'Gracias.' So there we were, wanting to chat and not able to do a thing about it. When the stewardess came along a little later, we asked her to tell the girl we'd like to hear her sing some more. She did better than that. She took all four of us to the dining car, which was vacant then, and helped with introductions. Then Eudoxia sang for us—bits of opera and folk songs — until lunch time."

The young man with Eudoxia was her older brother, Roberto. By the time they got off the train, they had agreed with the Millers that they must meet again.

EUDOXIA, it turned out, was convalescing from a breakdown brought on by an impulsive venture into feminine suffrage. The year before, 1952, was the year when Adolfo Ruiz Cortines was running for President of Mexico. As she tells it, the way Ruiz Cortines affected her sounds about like this:

"I do not know heem before, but when I read about Ruiz Cortines and hear heem speak, I know I want heem to be President. Weemen do not have the vote in Mexico then, so what can I do? I offer to seeng for heem—no pay."

Friends here have been quite carried away by Eudoxia's effervescent attacks on English. Instead of affording her exemplary contact with authentic English sounds, they find her accent so delectable that they often find themselves sliding off into unconscious imitations of it.

Well, anyway, the presidential candidate, who may have heard that music has been an asset to some campaigns made in the United States, gladly accepted her offer. For two months, Eudoxia was a member of the campaign party. She had just been graduated from the National Institute of Fine Arts, which is quartered in the Palacio de Bellas Artes, the imposing landmark in Mexico City familiar to most tourists. The campaign schedule called for visits to all the 28 Mexican states, with at least one concert, and usually two, a day.

Eudoxia worked out several programs of 13 songs each, 12 of them operatic arias and the last a composition of her own dedicated to Ruiz Cortines. She went through one program or another in its entirety at each stop, sometimes as early as 7 a.m. Then she would sing two or three encores.

It would be interesting to see how voters in the United States would respond to a candidate for office who included in his appeal a program of opera music at every stop. However, it is a matter of history that the Mexican farmers, factory workers and city folk handed Ruiz Cortines a thumping victory, and that the victor, standing before a large crowd of them with camera flash bulbs popping, gave Eudoxia a large share of the credit. For what it may be worth, it is also a matter of history that women now have the right to vote in Mexico.

But the campaign took a lot out of Eudoxia, and soon after it was over she suffered a collapse from complete exhaustion. The President insisted on paying for her medical care for the next two years.

The Millers's interest in Latin-America amounted mostly to ordinary curiosity at the time that they met Eudoxia on the train. Mrs. Miller had led American Legion Auxiliary Pan-American programs, and both had attended meetings of the St. Louis Good Neighbors Committee, built around Mexican themes. These had influenced the decision to take their 1953 vacation in that country.

"We found that the friendliness of the people of Mexico lived up to all reports," Miller told a friend after their return, "but Eudoxia was our first real personal contact. She completely won our hearts."

THE Millers kept in touch with Eudoxia and on a return visit last year spent two days with her and Roberto and their widowed mother in the Gonzalez home in Mexico City. Eudoxia was beginning to sing again, on the radio, on television programs, in an opera and at numerous benefit concerts. However, she needed additional training to give her voice professional polish. Otto and Sophia Miller came home determined to see that she got that training, but just how to bring it about they had not the remotest idea.

After some inquiring around, Mrs. Miller called up John P. Blake, president of the St. Louis Institute of Music, to ask if the school had scholarships available to foreign students. It did, Blake said, provided they had outstanding ability. Could Mrs. Miller obtain a recording of Miss Gonzalez's voice? Mrs. Miller did have a privately made recording of Eudoxia's singing of an aria from Puccini's "Gianni Schichi" and of "Indian Love Call." She took it to Blake's office for an audition. Blake and two or three members of his staff listened to the one record, conferred briefly and announced that if Mrs. Miller would present Eudoxia at the Institute on its opening day, Sept. 20, she would be admitted on a scholarship covering a year's tuition. She would have to work out her own housing arrangements.

IN August, the Millers made their third trip to Mexico City to bring Eudoxia, by now in bouncing good health again, back in triumph: As the time for departure approached, Miller, having it in mind that he and his wife had done quite a bit of shopping and had 11 traveling bags to look out for, thought it might be a good idea to sort of take inventory of the luggage that Eudoxia would be adding to the collection. It proved to be a very good idea, for Eudoxia produced no fewer than 22 suitcases, some almost as big as a steamer trunk. They contained her music, her clothing and personal effects, as well as a collection of 10 or more Mexican national costumes. Each of these was made of yards of material, heavily embroidered and richly ornamented with sequins and spangles—heavy and bulky and requiring special handling.

It was Miller's first taste of the operatic tradition in equipage, and he gamely saw it through. He summoned three taxis to haul the total of 33 bags to the station. It took a couple of trips. At least Eudoxia did not have a poodle, and as yet has shown no inclination toward exotic pets.

At the moment of parting, Mrs. Gonzalez solemnly told a little story. Some 15 years before, she said, she and Eudoxia had visited the Santo Nino church at Nuevo Laredo where the priest bestowed a special blessing on her daughter with these words: "There is a powerful voice in that little body. Only God could have given it to you. Some day, some strangers will come who will be good to you."

Dropping to her knees, Mrs. Gonzalez tearfully said, "You have made it come true."

EUDOXIA was enrolled last week in the Institute's opera department for a full schedule of voice study under Laszlo Vaida. She also attends evening sessions of the opera class. This group produces complete works, under Nicolai Gogotsky and Madame Ilona-Kelmay, who is Mrs. Vaida. Eudoxia already has been cast as Elvira, the feminine lead in Mozart's "Don Giovanni," to be produced by the Institute early next year.

Eudoxia's first public appearance in St. Louis was at the recent Mexican Independence Day Fiesta at St. Louis House auditorium, where she sang several numbers and performed a Vera Cruz dance in one of her costumes, to resounding applause. Then she sang the Mexican national anthem, and Carlos Grimm, the Mexican Consul in St. Louis, immediately wrote to friends back home, "I have heard our anthem sung in all parts of the world, but never have I heard it sung so magnificently as I did in St. Louis that night."

So Eudoxia, off to an auspicious start, hopes that after expiration of her six-month student's visa she can receive an artist's visa and begin work on her own. Meantime, the Millers are cancelling any engagements that keep them from doing whatever needs to be done for their protege, or from picking her up after night rehearsals in Clayton, and they're completely happy about it.

"Never a dull moment in our casa now," says Miller.

In New York

New Activity With Change of Seasons

By Mary Margaret McBride

WHEN I was 20, New York City was my love, my joy, my oyster to examine rapturously and open delightedly. The feeling persisted for years, but as I got older, I became conscious of the noise, the dirt, the crowding and even began to notice the big-city indifference that outlanders stress so often.

But when October comes to New York I return to my old allegiance and rejoice all over again in the champagne-like air, the hurry and bustle, the sense of everything beginning anew.

AT 20, NEW YORK WAS HER OYSTER.

WHETHER VACATIONS were quite what they expected or not, everybody is back at work a little more energetic and alert than before, for in summer the pace of city life shows down perceptibly and workers feel it. Fewer books get published; except for some usually short-lived musicals, no shows open on Broadway; hostesses don't even try to gather friends around because most of them are in Europe or the Adirondacks. The restaurant at which you plan to dine turns out to be closed. Press agents keep their motion picture stars away from town until the magic end-of-summer date is reached. The stores have to use wily advertising of bargains to lure customers. Strangers, with whom the town is filled, can be spotted by their invariable cameras, craning necks, open-necked shirts on the men.

Then, as if by secret signal, the great city suddenly stirs to busy life. It may be the crest of a heat wave or it can be cool with a brisk hint in the air of frost to come. This makes no difference—straw hats, on male and female, disappear as if banned by law.

At dawn and twilight, the park once again is thronged with owners and dogs, the latter impatiently tugging at leashes, not yet resigned to city life after a fine holiday free from halters. Suburban ladies fill the tearooms on matinee days, chattering eagerly to catch up on news and gossip.

FURS BREAK OUT like an epidemic — sables, minks, marten, fox and imitations of all—not because it's really chilly but simply to warm the hearts of the owners. Shows start moving into theaters, stars begin arriving — by train, plane the dogteam, if there is a need for that kind of publicity and of course, only if the press is alerted well in advance. Business men, brows furrowed, leather briefcases clutched close, wait on corners for buses and taxis. Bus drivers are their usual cranky selves and there are more taxis, but not many empty ones.

Store windows, pretending it is the dead of winter, are rich with warm lustrous velvets, woolens, sequins. Hostesses' mouths are wreathed again in company smiles. Decorators steer their clients to the "amusing" pieces they picked up in remote summer spots.

Summer is over. For me, too. This morning I woke to the realization that I haven't a THING to wear!

Marriage

Set Wife A Good Example

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

HUSBANDS are eternally asking me how to manage a wife. Frankly, I don't know. If I did, I might become rich just sharing the secret. But I do know some ways in which a husband can turn a wife into a better partner (without "managing" her) and make her like it. This knowledge, the result of many years of research and study, I'll share gladly.

In the first place, set her a good example. That's where many husbands fail. Then, remember that every wife has something of everything in her. Look for any quality that you want, and behave in such a way as to develop that particular quality. You can bring it out if you try. Don't spend much time pointing out her errors or scolding her. Ignore her failure, but praise her for her successes.

Of course, if you want her to perform well, you must see that she is in good condition, well-nourished. You would not expect a half-starved horse to win a race. Many a man keeps his wife on a starvation diet — emotionally. There's almost no limit to the amount of love that a wife can absorb. You are not likely to surfeit her! And remember the old saying, "Wives, like children, need to be loved most when they deserve it least."

MAKE ALLOWANCE for her moods—she is much more subject to them than you are. Recognize that some of her mistakes are merely the result of trying too hard to please you. Other things, to which you object, are not mistakes at all, but merely the normal expressions of the female personality, which is different from that of a male in almost every respect. Don't criticize her for being a female. After all, you wouldn't have married her if she weren't.

Don't wast time "laying down the law" to her. When differences of opinion arise, practice the technique of searching together for a solution. As you become proficient in that technique, you will find that solutions come more and more easily.

IF YOU WANT MORE HELP, send me a dime and a stamped, self-addressed envelope for my booklet, "Success in Marriage." It might be the best investment of 10 cents that you ever made. And if you, the reader, are a wife, get the booklet and slip it into your husband's coat pocket! Write to me in care of the Post-Dispatch.

Answers to Questions.

Q. Do married men really live longer or is it, as the old gag has it, that "it only seems longer?"

A. A married man around 40 probably has twice as many years ahead of him as a single or divorced man of 40; and he is likely to have a lot more fun per year, too.

Q. Is it true that the husband—who doesn't bear the babies—usually wants more children than the wife who does bear them?

A. Studies show little difference. Most people of either sex say they would like to have had one more child than they actually have. They usually explain that they had all they could afford.

Q. Do you think it is really natural for children to have curiosity about sex?

A. Certainly—just as they have curiosity about everything else. They attach no special importance to sex until they find their parents doing so. Write me (with stamped, self-addressed envelope) for free reading list on sex education. Almost every parent needs help in this.

Q. I have three daughters, 9, 11 and 12. At what age should I allow them to have their first date?

A. Girls usually begin to date somewhere between ages 13 and 15.

Q. Which has the easiest time in North America today—men or women?

A. Studies show that each sex tends to think the other has the easiest time. What's your opinion?

Q. What's the best way to ensure lifelong happiness?

A. Grow up emotionally.

Distant Relations

By Christopher Billopp

DISTANT relations are those with whom a person is somehow connected though how is not quite clear. No doubt there is an elderly aunt or a cousin who is the custodian of the family genealogy and could explain. But there is never a convenient time to ask her.

The matter, however, is not important. For there is no responsibility for distant relations as there is for close relations. Their children do not have to be given presents at Christmas and birthday. Nor is there any need to try to develop a friendship between their children and one's own children.

Parties can be given and weddings can take place and there is no need to bother about the distant relations. They do not have to be invited in place of friends one would prefer to have.

Distant relations do not have to be called on regularly once or twice a year. They do not have to be told family news in advance of others for fear that if they hear the news outside their feelings will be hurt.

NO EFFORT need be made to find jobs for the sons of distant relations. If they get into trouble there is no obligation to help to get them out. That sort of thing can be left to their close relations. Nor are distant relations likely to make an appeal for financial help.

In fact, it is possible to live in the same town with distant relations for years, be aware of the relationship and still not bother about them the way one has to bother about close relations.

OCCASIONALLY distant relations distinguish themselves, or make money or inherit fortunes. They get their names in the newspapers and become a popular topic of conversation.

Then, suddenly, one becomes keenly aware of the distant relationship. One is distressed at having neglected them so long and decides that no time must be lost in looking them up and reminding them that they are relations.

THE Zion Methodist Church, which sits on a hillside surrounded by farming country near New Athens, Ill., about 45 miles southeast of St. Louis, was built just three years after the end of the Civil War. It is a well-proportioned building, of simple, classic design, but its old bricks are beginning to crumble.

CHURCH LAMP.

The church stands by a country road, and the lawn, which is shaded by four huge locust trees as venerable as the building itself, slopes down to the burial ground where old-fashioned gravestones mark the resting places of people who once sat in the pews.

When the church was built, 87 years ago, it was filled each Sunday with German and Swiss families who had settled in the area, known in those days as "Dutch Hill." Today the church has a congregation of three, all members of one family, who are determined to keep the doors of the church open as long as they live.

The interior of the church looks almost as it did when it was built. The pews are straight-backed and a little forbidding. An old-fashioned wide pulpit stands at the back of the rostrum and before it is an altar rail of heavy black walnut which looks as though it might have been made by hand. At the left of the altar is a foot-pedal organ dripping with wooden ornamentation. At the right is a severe upright piano.

The floors are of old-fashioned wide boards, well worn by generations of feet. A strip of threadbare crimson carpet covers the center aisle. At each of the six windows are wall brackets, holding old-fashioned kerosene lamps with glass chimneys. Back of each lamp is a once-shiny reflector.

There are 12 pews on one side, but on the other side only eight to make room for the iron, pot-belly stove which heats the little church in wintertime.

BUT now it's autumn. Through the open windows you can see the locust trees, cornfields and distant woodlands. A slight breeze stirs the grass around the gravestones, and the whole place seems to have been suspended in time for more than three-quarters of a century.

The first to arrive this particular Sunday morning was the Rev. Mr. John W. Cummins, a young Methodist minister who had driven over from Marissa, some five miles from the church, to conduct the service. The Rev. Mr. Cummins is a short, sincere young man who is occupying his first pulpit at Marissa. He drives to Zion church every other Sunday to conduct service for the congregation of three. He is the latest in a long string of ministers who have done the same.

He parked his car under one of the locust trees, and in a few minutes another automobile arrived. It was a black sedan with three passengers; an elderly woman and a younger man and woman, but both past middle age. The man parked his car under another tree, then picked up the aged woman and carried her in his arms into the church. The other woman greeted the minister and then handed him two five-dollar bills.

"These," she said with a grave smile," are for you."

He thanked her, pocketed the money, and then introduced me. She was Miss Pearl Wildy. The man was her brother, Alex Wildy, and the elderly woman their mother, Mrs. Catherine Wildy. We walked into the church together. Wildy had preceded us and and settled his mother in a pew. She is 88 years old and partially paralyzed. Miss Wildy arranged a shawl around her shoulders and then looked up at the minister with a smile which seemed to indicate they were ready to begin.

THE minister took his place in the pulpit. Picking up a hymn book — "Christian Service Songs,"—he announced the hymn, "Number 68. We will sing the first, second and third verses."

Miss Wildy went to the piano, leafed through her copy to find the number, and placed it on the piano between two other books to keep the pages from turning.

Then she played the introductory bars, following which The Rev. Mr. Cummins in strong tenor, Alex Wildy in a soft deep voice and Miss Wildy herself in thin soprano, sang—

Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty,

Early in the morning, Our song shall rise to thee. . .

They sang as unselfconsciously as if they were in the midst of a large congregation with choir and deep, rolling pipe-organ accompaniment. When the hymn ended, Miss Wildy took her place beside her mother and brother and the Rev. Mr. Cummins prayed. Then, just as though the church were filled, he preached earnestly on The Fullness of Life.

Meanwhile, listening to the sermon, my eyes strayed to the altar, and I thought of the fullness of life it had witnessed up through the years:

The marriages—". . . For better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health. . . ."

The funerals—". . . For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we will take nothing out. . . ."

The Easter services—"Up from the grave He arose. . . ."

The Christmas programs—Childish voices reciting "'Twas the night before Christmas, and all through the house. . . ." followed by the Christmas treat, each child receiving a red mosquito-netting bag filled with an orange and several choice pieces of hard-rock candy.

The country revivals—"Would you be free from your burden of sin? . . ."

The Lord's Supper—"Ye that do truly and earnestly repent . . . and are in love and charity with your neighbors. . . . Draw near . . . Eat . . . Drink ye all of this. . . ."

The minister closed with a prayer and benediction, after which he shook hands with his congregation of three and headed back to Marissa to conduct his regular service at the Methodist church there.

AFTER he had gone, I sat with the Wildys in the little church and talked. There was a time, I learned, when the church was filled with solid German, Swiss and English farmers and their families. But it's been years now since anyone attended the church except the three Wildys, behind which lies a story.

"We meet every Sunday, the three of us," Miss Wildly told me, "even on the alternate Sundays when the preacher doesn't come. We sing a song and have Bible school."

She handed me a copy of the Wesley Quarterly. The lesson for the day was marked.

"We follow the lesson and have a prayer," she said.

She is a small woman who wears neat shirtwaists and sensible looking black shoes, and has a wealth of gray hair which looks as though it would be too heavy for such a small woman. Her eyes are bright and blue and through them shone the light of pure devotion as she continued the story.

The first Wildys (the name was spelled Wildi then) came over from Switzerland in 1818. For some years the German and Swiss Methodist families held meetings in their homes. The church was organized in 1860, and built in 1868.

"My grandmother, Mrs. Jacobim Wildy, was one of charter members," Miss Pearl said. "She is buried out there. So are the twins and Dad. The twins were my brothers. One of them died when he was two, and the other one, Grant, died when he was 40. My father was one of the leaders of the church and when he married my mother on June 16, 1835, she became a member. She has been coming here now for 67 years."

In 1903 the family went West for Mrs. Wildy's health. When they left there was a congregation of 50. When they came back three years later they found the church closed. The Wildys had given the church leadership. Then too, roads were better, new churches were being built in New Athens, only a couple of miles away, and at Marissa, and the congregation had just drifted away.

"We were disappointed," Miss Wildy said, looking down at the song book clasped in her hands. "It was our spiritual home. We are country people and we wanted a country church. We feel God is nearer to us here."

They reopened the church and kept it open with a few of the faithful until 1909, when Mrs. Wildy had to go West again for her health.

"I was in no mood to carry on," Miss Wildy explained. "It stayed closed until 1913."

Miss Wildy took a deep breath, as though preparing herself to explain what she felt had to be explained.

"My father came to me and said, 'Pearl, why don't you reopen the church?' 'Never,' I said. "It took courage and faith and devotion that I didn't seem to have. I was superintendent of the church at New Athens and—". Her voice trailed off. "When you don't face a job," she explained, "you run away. But in my heart I knew."

MISS WILDY faces the fact now that she was deliberately avoiding what her heart told her had to be done.

"We used to go bob-sledding on winter nights," she said, "and when we passed the little church I couldn't laugh and sing with the others. I would always grow silent and I couldn't get the church out of my mind.

"Then one day in the fall of 1912, I went out to round up the cows. That was one of my jobs on the farm. As I was going down to the pasture, I heard my name called. Three times. I looked around, but there was nobody there. It was a voice beyond my power to describe, but I heard it clearly. Then it said, 'Will you open the church?' I knew what I had to do.

"I didn't tell my father what I had heard. But I did tell him that if someone would turn the key, I would go."

Why did someone have to turn the key?

"Because," she explained, "I didn't have the authority. That was in the hands of the trustees. My father was a trustee.

"One Sunday morning a few weeks later while I was helping him tie his necktie—he never could seem to tie a four-in-hand properly—he said, 'Pearl, will you lead the Sunday School if I open it?' I said, 'You turn the key, and I'll go.' That winter we cleaned the church and on January 5, 1913, we opened it again. He turned the key every Sunday for years and years. Then finally one day I said, 'Dad, I'm strong enough now to turn the key.'"

The day they re-opened the church, 12 people came. Within a few weeks the number had grown to 29, and within a year or two they had a congregation of almost 60, and a flourishing Sunday School. The farmers came in buggies and wagons.

Then they came in automobiles. "We had the first car," Miss Pearl recalled. "It was a Ford sedan, and it was the first closed car they had seen around here. They called it 'the glass car' and everyone thought we'd get hurt in it."

THE years passed. The only time the church closed again was for a few Sundays during the influenza epidemic of 1917.

"No one caught the flu, out here in the country," Miss Pearl said, "but the government made us do it. We promised everyone they could get their Cross and Crown for perfect attendance anyway."

But it seemed that as the young people grew up they started going away to newer and bigger churches. And the old folks died and were buried on the hillside. Finally there were no worshippers left except the Wildys.

The morning was passing.

"We'd love to have you eat dinner with us," said Miss Pearl, "if you don't mind a country Sunday dinner."

The Wildy farm is only a mile and a half from the church, by back-country roads. It's a red brick house with a white porch and white dormer windows, nestling in a grove of cedar trees, and surrounded by a neat white picket fence. Beyond the picket fence are huge elms, locust and walnut trees, and beyond that stretches the farm land.

While Miss Pearl cooked dinner, her brother Alex and I sat on a broad, screened back porch which looks out at vegetable and flower gardens and a long grape arbor. Alex is 62 years old, a quiet man with a gentle smile. And a good farmer. He and his mother and sister live on a tract of 160 acres, and he has other land totaling 275 acres. He raises corn, soy beans and wheat, and he showed me his sheds, filled with good modern farm machinery. Alex went away and lived in Montana for a few years when he was young. But when his brother died he came back. Since their father died, in 1944, he and his sister have run the farm and cared for their mother.

WE SAT in the old-fashioned dining room and ate country sausage which Alex had made himself, and lima beans and peas from the garden, and two kinds of home-made bread, white and whole wheat. Every year Alex grinds some wheat himself to make the bread.

After dinner we went into the parlor, where four well-polished mahogany rockers faced one another. In one corner was an upright piano. Miss Pearl's mother taught her to play when she was five years old. In another corner, on a Victorian table, was a basket of flowers made of wax, under a glass dome. They were made by Miss Pearl's aunt when she was a young girl.

Miss Pearl brought out the old records of the church, well preserved books which contained Swiss and German names running back to the middle of the last century. They also contained in her neat script the names of the ministers and their tenure. There have been 49 of them.

For years now, the Wildys can't recall just how long, they have been the congregation.

"Just our family," Miss Pearl said. "We're going to hold on. Our faith is calling us. There is a reason—it was meant for us to keep the church open."

FOR a long time they took entire care of the church and grounds, but now they have a man who mows the grass of the lawn and the burial ground. But once every week Miss Pearl and Alex go to the church and sweep and dust, and once or twice a year they give it a good going over, mopping the floors and washing the windows. In the winter their mother waits in the car until they have a good fire going in the iron stove and the church is warm.

"I used to wonder why I felt the way I did about the church when it was closed, but now I know," Miss Pearl said. "If I had it to do over, I'd have opened it much sooner. God is very near and real to me. In the spring when I go in my garden and look at the flowers and walk through the grape arbor, there's not a time when I don't feel His presence."

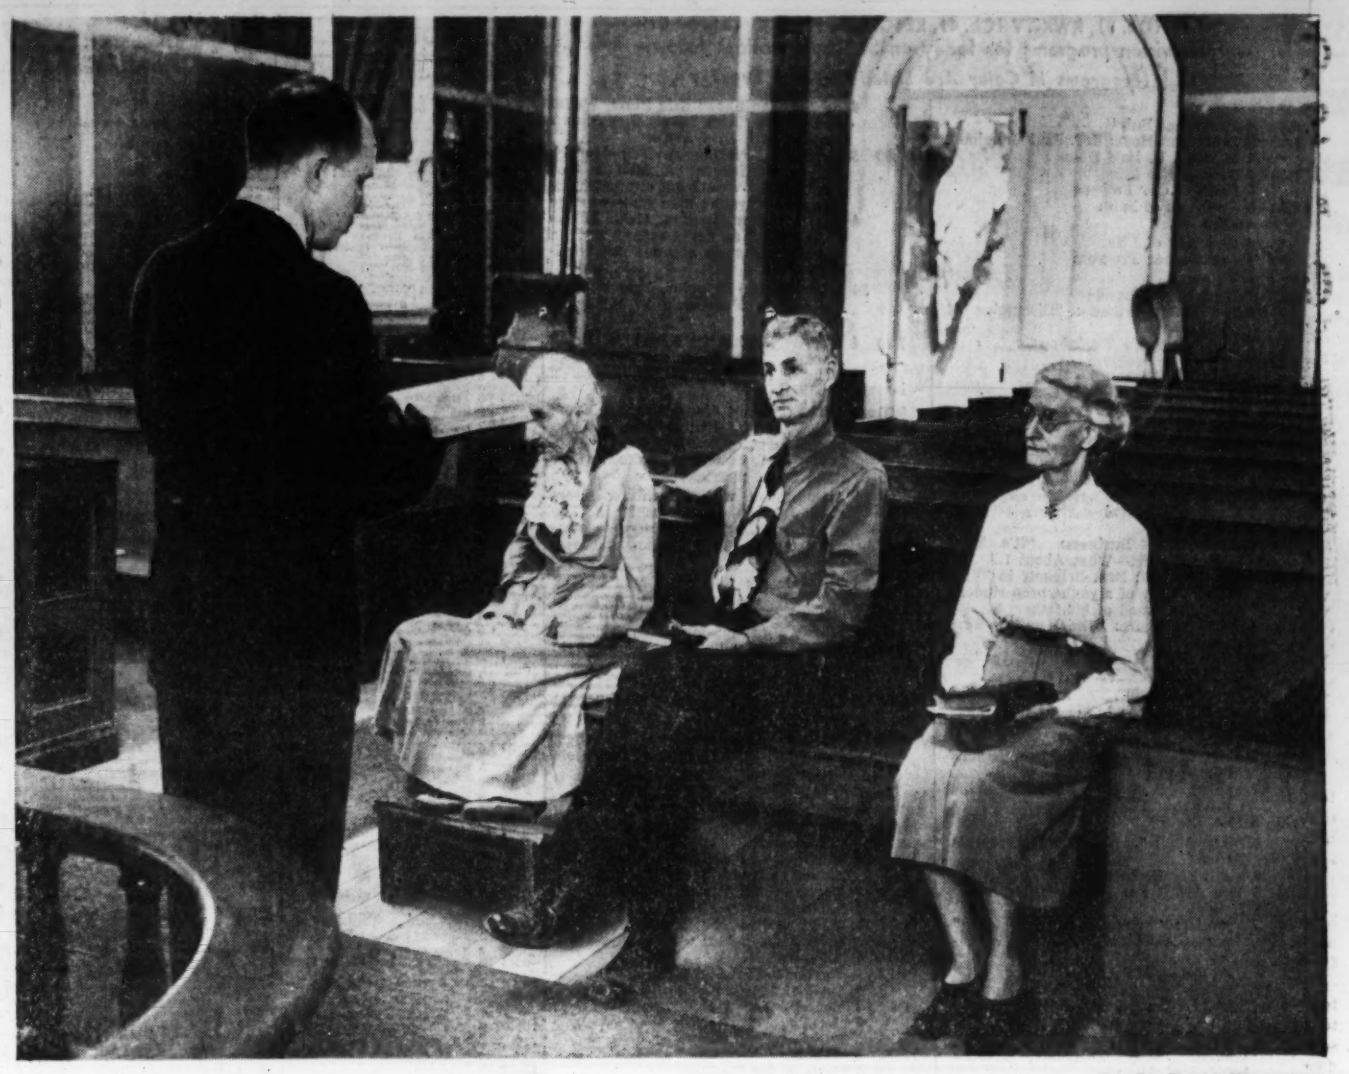

All morning I had been wondering how it happened that the Wildys, such a retiring family, had allowed a reporter and photographer to invade something so precious to them. Then I found out.

"Shortly before my father died," Miss Pearl said, "he predicted that someone would come over from St. Louis and write about our church, and that it would be a good thing, and that it would bring people back to it."

As Miss Pearl sat rocking gently, clasping the church record in her lap, and looking through the clean lace curtains at the cedar trees outside, I knew that she knew, and had always known, that it would happen. She had just bided her time. And it did happen.

Roles Fulfill Childhood Ambition

Betsy Palmer Often Cast as Nurse She Wanted to Be as Little Girl

By Joan Hanauer

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (INS) BETSY PALMER wanted to be a nurse when she was a little girl, became an actress and now plays nurse roles with uncommon frequency.

In "The Strange War of Sergeant Krenzer," an ABC-TV Circle Theater presentation Tuesday night, she donned the nurse's uniform again.

"I think every little girl wants to be a nurse—the call of the uniform," said the big girl from East Chicago, Ind. "I was quite active in the Red Cross during school, and used to roll bandages several times a week.

"I once played 'Florence Nightingale' in one of those grammar school auditorium plays, and I was a nurse's assistant in high school. That's about the limit of my real-life nursing experience—except, of course, I'm married to a doctor."

The pale blond, brown-eyed Betsy went to her mother's business college, worked for a railroad, and then decided to take an aptitude test before entering college.

"I had no great and burning desire to be an actress," she said. "It was just my aptitude."

* * *

AFTER college, where she got a bachelor's degree in dramatic arts, she did summer and winter stock in Chicago for seven seasons, then decided to come to New York four years ago.

BETSY PALMER . . . "ACTING JUST MY APTITUDE."

"My first television show in New York was on the old Billy Rose program" she said, grinning. "I had about five lines—not much of a part at all—and I played a nurse.

"I played a 'jinx' nurse on another show—I was the 'Kiss of Death.' The men would talk to me, take off and come crash ing down in flames.

"I played the nurse in the road company of 'Harvey,' too."

"It seems, somehow," she added, "that if I'm not playing a nurse, I'm in some other kind of uniform—or else I play a service nurse and combine the two. I've played a lot of servicewomen since my first big New York television role. In that, I played a WAC—and I'm wacky enough."

BETSY also plays a nurse in her current movie—in "Mr. Roberts," a part played in the stage version by Marlon Brando's sister Jocelyn.

"I don't know why I'm picked for those roles," she said, wrinkling her nose and looking puzzled. "Maybe I typify what a service girl or nurse should look like."

The tall, slim girl wants to do another Broadway show—her only Broadway experience was as a featured actress in "Grand Prize."

"I'd always want to live in the East," she claims. "You couldn't pay me to live in Hollywood. I like the winter, I'd miss the seasons, and so much about the place is slow and lazy. They were very nice to me, but a lot of life out there is as phony as their phony palm trees.

"I'm under contract to do two movies a year, but I'd be perfectly happy if they cut it to one. You must make movies to become a Broadway box office draw, but the theater's my first love.

"I'd like to do a musical comedy, too, after I have some more singing lessons and feel secure with my voice.

"I'm in no mad rush about these things."

Television Letter Box

I CANNOT help expressing my disappointment over the new schedule arrangement on KSD-TV. You have programs for small fry, such as Lone Ranger, Superman, and Capt. Gallant scheduled too late in the evening, when the children are in bed. They are bitterly disappointed (mine wept). Adults in general don't want to watch these shows — but there they are—right when we have a chance to relax with TV (with the kids in bed).

Wednesday night's "Diamond as Big as the Ritz" on KSD-TV was one of the best dramatic shows you have had on for a long time. Going back to F. Scott Fitzgerald was a splendid idea because the show was as good as any we get from present-day writers.

As Crosby Sees It

TV Westerns Make Good Fairy Stories

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.

I SUPPOSE if you like fairy stories that Westerns are as good as any. Originally all fairy stories started somewhere with a basis in fact. And then, as the years rolled by, they grew and grew and grew. I imagine Cinderella started somewhere with a real anecdote about a girl with a wicked stepmother.

Our Westerns are getting to be like that. The legend is there and it is solidifying. The actual American West of the legend didn't last very long. Its resemblance to the myth is getting more and more remote. Still it persists. The American Western drama is accepted and welcomed in the funniest places. All over the world you see playbills advertising a Western movie. I keep wondering what's in it for these people. Our own connection with Westerns is pretty remote but we have some kinship with them.

Still, the foreigners take to them as we take to Grimm's fairy tales and I think for the same reasons. And there is getting to be a new myth—that there are good Westerns. "Shane" was supposed to be one. Well, it had some fine photography and some good acting but it was the same old malarky—the good guys against the bad guys. And guess who won?

AND NOW THERE is "The Life and Legend of Wyatt Earp" (on KSD-TV at 9 p.m. Sundays). This ABC production is billed as an adult Western which means that you can share it with your son without feeling guilty about it.

ABC has done very well with another legend, that of Davy Crockett, and it has now almost gone into the legend business. Like Davy, this one opens with a song about its hero—"Wyatt Earp, Wyatt Earp. Brave and bold. Long may he live and long may his story be told."

Well, Earp was quite a distinguished marshal all right. But I greatly doubt that this series in any way resembled his life. In the first place—those clothes. When I was a kid, a cowpoke and sheriff alike wore chaps and a beat up ten-gallon hat and a bandana around his neck. I know because I—and all right-thinking kids—dressed the same way.

NOWADAYS your Hopalong Cassidys and Wyatt Earps wear skin tight pants and shirts that look as if they were turned out in Bond Street. The boys may be riding the range every day, but, by George, you will never find a speck of dust on any of these lads. By my own youthful standards, these are sissy duds. William S. Hart never dressed up in those form-fitting pants. In fact, until the present crop of Western dramas, nobody did except chorus boys. What's going on anyhow?

As adult Westerns go, this one has fairly literate dialogue. Earp, played very well by Hugh O'Brien, stands up for law as opposed to aimless violence even to the extent of saying that ordinary citizens shouldn't carry guns, a heretical notion. An even more heretical notion is the idea that a local killer might just be insane and therefore beyond the reaches of law enforcement.

O'Brien looks a little like a young Lincoln and dispenses wisdom like a young Moses. And the picture quality is excellent. But when all is said and done, it's still a Western—gun duels and fists and "Thank you, Mam" dialogue. And the good guys still have the upper hand, fortunately.

Classical Records

Rehearsal and Performance

By Thomas B. Sherman

MOZART WAS born in 1756 so the 200th anniversary year doesn't begin until next January. Nevertheless the anniversary is already being celebrated by the record industry and nobody will object, I am sure so long as the records produced for the occasion are worthy of it. The album entitled "The Birth of a Performance" which offers Bruno Walter in a rehearsal and a completed performance of the Linz Symphony (K.425) qualifies in every respect. (Columbia, Two 12-inch LPs.) The music is great, the performance is free, beautiful in sound and charming in its mood and the experience of listening to Dr. Walter's instructions to his colleagues is both informative and pleasurable.

The performing orchestra is the Columbia Symphony which means that is composed of the best players available in New York. But even an aggregation of crack players have to be unified in their bowing, phrasing, accentuation and other details. A staccato passage, for instance, can still be played in several ways and in Dr. Walter's judgment the first try is not crisp enough. "Stacatissimo" he says, and that's enough to get the proper shortness of duration for each note involved. The correction he makes most often is the one that eliminates unwanted accents from melodic passages. It is notable, however, that the musicians do not have to be reminded that a Mozart sforzando is relatively light. Apparently they do this naturally.

A score of the Linz Symphony which accompanies the album enables the listener to follow every stage of the rehearsal. Sound reproduction is of the best for all four sides.

ORCHESTRAL: The complete score of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" ballet music was first recorded by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra with Antal Dorati conducting. A new version by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch is now available. (RCA-Victor, One 12-inch LP in album with notes and decorations.) Both are thoroughly prepared and highly finished and both use a chorus as an additional choir in the orchestra. Both too are handsomely reproduced. My own taste inclines toward the Boston performance because of its slightly greater textural richness and flexibility. The combined New England Conservatory and Alumni choruses supply the vocal effects for the Boston performance.

Eduard van Beinum, the Dutch conductor who is reported to be considering a prominent American post (Los Angeles), is heard with his home-town orchestra, the Concergtgebouw of Amsterdam, in Debussy's "Images" complete. (Epic, One 12-inch LP.) The constituent parts of this triology are "Gigues," "Rondes de Printemps" and "Iberia." Performances are admirable, but an ideal treatment would have a more evident subtlety of shading. Reproduction is first rate.

Benjamin Britten's "The Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra" is paired with Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker" suite in a record that lends itself to educational uses. Both pieces are well played by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra with Antal Dorato conducting. Deems Taylor supplies a commentary which will remind the young listener of what instruments and combinations thereof he is hearing. (Mercury, One 12-inch LP.) . . . In last Sunday's review of the Boston Symphony Orchestra recording of Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique" symphony the conductor was erroneously reported to be Charles Munch. The conductor was Pierre Monteux.

CONCERTO: Christian Ferrars, an accomplished European violinist, makes a notable contribution to the Mozart anniversary with performances of two Mozart violin concertos played with the Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munchinger. (London, One 12-inch LP.) The familiar Concerto No. 3 in G Major (K. 210) is executed crisply and with a fine singing tone. The so-called No. 7 in E Flat is quite as well played by all concerned. Its relative inferiority is so pronounced that many scholars believe it to be the work of some little-known composer who got hold of sketches that Mozart had abandoned. Reproductions in both cases do full justice to soloist and orchestra.

PIANO: Volume One, from the previously issued album of Mozart's Complete Piano Works played by Walter Gieseking, contains the Sonata in B Flat (K. 570), The Rondo in F Major (K. 616) and a number of smaller pieces of a much earlier vintage. The playing is beautiful so far as tone, phrasing and choice of tempi are concerned. But it is uncommonly bland for Gieseking. (Angel, One 12-inch LP.)

Best Sellers

RAVEL: "Daphnis and Chloe" ballet, complete; The Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch; see review in this column. (RCA-Victor, One 12-inch LP in decorative album.)

MOZART: Piano Sonata in B. Flat and SCARLETTI, Six Sonatas; played by Charles Rosen on the Siena Piano forte. (Esoteric, One 12-inch LP.)

JANE RUSSELL AND CLARK GABLE ARE DUE NEXT AT THE ST. LOUIS IN A BIG-SCALE WESTERN, "THE TALL MEN," FEATURING A CATTLE DRIVE AND BATTLES WITH INDIANS AND OUTLAWS. JANE SEEMS TO BE UNUSUALLY BUNDLED UP.

JEANNE CRAIN AND THE SAME JANE RUSSELL, BUT IN A SMART PARISIAN OUTFIT, ARE AT LOEW'S STATE IN THE COMEDY, "GENTLEMEN MARRY BRUNETTES."

Wireless 'Mikes'

Wireless microphones are being used by the principals in the Chase Club revue, "The Chase Roman Holiday," an innovation in night clubs in this area. The "mikes" are rods about an inch in diameter and 11 inches long. Carried by the singer, they do away with the cumbersome and sometimes tripping extension cord. The instruments are small FM transmitters with a carrying power of 100 feet.

'Pajama Game' Booked by American; Melton Next

BOOKING of "The Pajama Game," Broadway's biggest musical comedy hit, for three weeks beginning Tuesday night, Oct. 25, was announced by the American Theater yesterday. The national comedy to be seen here will feature Fran Warren, MGM recording star, Larry Douglas and Buster West. The musical has been running on Broadway since May 13 of last year, and so far has racked up 580 performances.

The next attraction, resuming the American's season after the theater will have been dark for two weeks, will be James Melton, opera tenor and television star, in an informal concert-revue, "Words and Music," which opens Monday night, Oct. 10 for a week.

Melton, a Moultrie, Georgia boy, attended the University of Florida, then switched to Vanderbilt University to study voice with Gaetano de Luca. He first came to fame at the Roxy Theater in New York in 1927, toured Europe and America with the Revelers Quartet, made a concert tour with George Gershwin, made operatic debuts in Cincinnati and Chicago in 1938, and in 1942 joined the Metropolitan Opera Company. His last appearance here was a couple of years ago at the Chase Club.

In the show, besides singing, the tenor acts as master of ceremonies, pacing the show with facetious remarks. Among the young singers he will present are Dorothy Coulter, who appeared at Municipal Opera two seasons ago, Barbara Meister, Richard Hankinson, Evelyn Taylor, Rene Weigert and Shirley Givens. There also will be a quintet of singing girl violinists. Performances Monday through Friday will be at 8:30 p.m. and at 6:30 and 9:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Following will be Bernard Shaw's "Don Juan in Hell," starring Ricardo Montalban, Kurt Kasznar, Mary Astor and Reginald Denny, which opens Monday night, Oct. 17, for a week.

"The Pajama Game" has the Hit Parade songs "Hey There," and "Hernando's Hideaway," and its score includes "Steam Heat," "I'm Not at All in Love," "Small Talk" and "There Once Was a Man." George Abbott co-directed and wrote the book in collaboration with Richard Bissell, from whose novel "7½ Cents," the musical was adapted. Jerome Robbins co-directed and did the dances. Richard Adler and Jerry Ross fashioned the songs. Lemuel Ayers designed the scenery. It concerns a midwestern pajama factory.

RICHARD KILEY PLAYS JOHN PATTERSON, CRUSADING ATTORNEY GENERAL OF ALABAMA, IN "THE PHENIX CITY STORY," BASED ON THE FIGHT AGAINST CORRUPTION IN THE ALABAMA TOWN.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

GENTLEMEN MARRY BRUNETTES—Richard Sale and Mary Loos have fashioned an exuberant and lighthearted musical about Jane Russell and Jeanne Crain as a night-club sister act in Paris, with some nice satire about Parisian frou-frou of a previous generation, some solid old songs by such people as Donaldson, Rodgers and Hart and Fats Waller, and gorgeous CinemaScope views of Paris and Monte Carlo. Jane is still a heavy-handed comedienne, but the sleek, chic and piquant Jeanne makes up for it. LOEW'S STATE.

HOW TO BE VERY, VERY POPULAR—This story about two night-club chorines hiding out in a boys dormitory in a California college attempts to be a zany, off-beat farce, but is much too strained and far-fetched. Director-Writer Nunnally Johnson has supplied unclever-unfunny material. Betty Grable and Sheree North as the chorines and such adept light comedians as Bob Cummings and Charles Coburn find heavy going. Also A PRIZE OF GOLD, with Richard Widmark, in which the possible melodramatic excitement is watered by implausibilities in motivation. FOX.

DESERT SANDS—This is one of the most painfully bad Foreign Legion epics ever to hit the screen, and that is pretty low. Ralph Meeker seems uncertain about his heroics. ORPHEUM.

MARTY—Last week for the heart-warming and touching little picture about loneliness among drab people in the Bronx. Ernest Borgnine and Betsy Blair are sympathetic as a fat butcher and a plain school teacher. RICHMOND.

THE LEFT HAND OF GOD—Humphrey Bogart as an American flyer who assumes a murdered priest's identity to escape a Chinese warlord, and nurse Gene Tierney falls in love with him. Its religious premise is given neither dramatic validity or spiritual intensity. ST. LOUIS.

THE SHEEP HAS FIVE LEGS—French "tour de farce" for Fernandel in which he plays six roles—a papa and quintuplets. Opened last night too late for review. SHADY OAK.

THE RED SHOES—Return of the English success with a ravishingly beautiful ballet and overdone backstage tragic plot. With Moira Shearer. Also QUARTET, return of the portfolio of ironic Somerset Maugham yarns. PAGEANT.

CINERAMA HOLIDAY—Tourist's eye view of Paris, Switzerland, Las Vegas, New Orleans and other points in the spectacular depth process. AMBASSADOR.

Art and Artists

Impressions of Impressionism

By Howard Derrickson

THE CELEBRATED SWISS firm of Skira, Inc., reaches one of its happiest moments in its new two-volume study, "Impressionism," by Jean Leymarie (115 color plates, 258 pp., $9.90). Yet "Impressionism" has, as the French say, the defects of its qualities.

With this work, Skira's "The Taste of Our Time" series breaks fresh ground, shifts from one-volume interpretations of currently popular painters, treated as individuals, to two-volume considerations of major art revolutions. Projected publications are to deal with expressionism, cubism and surrealism.

In "Impressionism," a slight sharpening of colors—such as was censured in the Byzantine volume by knowledgeable authorities—merely intensifies the individual characters of Impressionists' sparkling palettes.

And here Skira's emphasis on things French, possibly most apparent in the masterly and soon-to-be-reissued "Modern Painting," by the late Maurice Raynal, is firmly justified by the almost exclusively French development of the phenomenon of Impressionism.

Any consideration of possible defects in "Impressionism" must await indication of its solid virtues. The biographical and critical text has been so vividly written by M. Leymarie, so smoothly turned into idiomatic English by James Emmons, that it may not be too much to hope the term impressionist itself will become generally understood. It is often now misused in American newspapers to mean merely puzzling or even abstract.

ANECDOTAL in organization, the two books include anecdotes so well chosen as to point up the essential nature of Impressionism—its delight in sensuous abandonment to the natural image, enjoyed under fleeting and ever-various kinds of light, without any desire to preach a moral or correct a wrong.

"Do you paint merely to amuse yourself, young man?" instructor Charles Gleyre demanded of student Auguste Renoir in 1862. Renoir, with utmost candor, replied it had never occurred to him to paint for any other reason. He thus expressed the spontaneous aim of the group, then including Claude Monet, Alfred Sisley and Frederic Bazille.

Joyous response to the visual world, the books show, was the key to the whole Impressionist era, from 1860 to 1900. Reliance on artists' own sensations was an unchanging factor, no matter what the fluctuation in taste or style.

TEN INVALUABLE PAGES of tabular chronological data trace divergent temperaments and techniques of a rich intermingling of talent—Pissarro, Manet, Degas, Cezanne, Berthe Morisot, Eugene Boudin, Armand Guillaumin, Francois Daubigny, Johann Berthold Jongkind, Mary Cassatt, Georges Seurat, Whistler, Gauguin, Van Gogh, Toulouse-Lautrec, Matisse, Bonnard.

These artists' paintings reproduced are so well chosen, from both sides of the Atlantic, as to bear out the author's conclusion: That this "unprecedented concourse of great artists" achieved "not only complete autonomy but undisputed preeminence with respect to the other arts of the modern world, even while holding up a vivid and truthful mirror to the life and aspirations of the time."

A loving nostalgia hangs over the volumes, leading on occasion to an invidious comparison. The author decries, for instance, as "the bane of all modern art," the "present-day co-existence" of the image, or direct perception, and the symbol, or ideal interpretation.

PROBABLY THIS IS asking too much in the limited space, but if the text is to stray from its period, why should it not allude more generously to earlier, non-French aspects of impressionism? Canvases by Veronese, Turner and Constable are reproduced, it is true, and also recorded are French Impressionists' love of such of their spiritual ancestors as Frans Hals and Velasquez.

Restricted in plan, however, to almost reportorial treatment of activities of French Impressionism's members, these books miss the opportunity to emphasize more fully the heralds' role played by late classical artists, Titian and even William Hogarth.

Peter Quennell, Hogarth's latest biographer, stresses his subject's impressionist philosophy and asserts his impressionist achievement.

Hogarth, like many another artist, was fascinated by the visible world's shimmering, dazzling evanescence. Unlike most, he explicitly anticipated French Impressionist thought. He observed there "are no lines in nature," because "lights, shades, colors" make up appearances.

His conversion is the more remarkable because, though he had been a great moral satirist, he proved in his mature and enchanting vision of "The Shrimp Girl" that for once he could become an impressionist at heart, painting merely to amuse himself.

Villa-Lobos to Conduct Symphony Dec. 17-18

Heitor Villa-Lobos, famous Brazilian composer and conductor, will conduct the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra Dec. 17 and 18, in the last half of the concert, devoted to his own works. The concert will be in Kiel Auditorium Opera House.

Vladimar Golschmann, who will conduct the first half of the program, persuaded Villa-Lobos, a national figure in Brazil, to come here after correspondence the past summer. Much of the composer's work is based on Brazilian folk-music themes. His music was used for an operetta, "Magdalena," which played on Broadway several seasons ago.

TENOR JAMES MELTON BRINGS HIS INFORMAL CONCERT-REVUE, "WORDS AND MUSIC" TO THE AMERICAN FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING OCT 10.

Washington University Concerts Open Oct. 12

The Washington University department of music's season of eight concerts will open Oct. 12 with a chamber orchestra under Leigh Gerdine, chairman of the department, performing works by Robert Wykes, assistant professor of composition and theory, Benjamin Britten and Mozart. Soloists will be Leslie Chabay, former tenor with the Metropolitan Opera who joined the faculty this fall, and Edward Murphy, French horn player with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. The concerts will all be held Wednesday evenings at 8:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial Chapel.

The other concerts will be:

Nov. 9, the Alfred Deller Trio, English specialists in early music; Dec. 7, Leslie Parnas, 'cellist, and Jeanne Milder, pianist; Jan. 11, Carl Weinrich, organist and director of music at Princeton University; Feb. 15, Suzanne Bloch, lutanist and Juilliard instructor; Mar. 7, violinist Szymon Goldberg and pianist William Schatzkamer; Mar. 21, the chamber orchestra and Chabay performing Bach's solo cantata, "Meine Seele Ruehmt un Preist;" Apr. 18, the Fine Arts Quartet and Schatzkamer.

'In the Pink' New Musical at Alton

The Alton Little Theatre will present an original musical comedy, "In the Pink," at the Alton (Ill.) High School auditorium, tomorrow and Tuesday at 8:15 p.m.

The show, which has 87 in the cast and 17 musical numbers, was written by Dorothy Colonius, Jane Black, Albert L. Marth, and Helen Jean Marth. Proceeds will be added to the Little Theatre's building fund. The group owns four acres of ground, will build a small structure next year, and hopes eventually to construct an auditorium which can be used by the entire community.

'Sabrina Fair'

"Sabrina Fair," the recent Broadway comedy by Samuel Taylor, will be presented by the Theater Guild of Webster Groves Thursday night at the guild playhouse, 517 Theater Lane. It will run a week. Robert Gilmore directed. Colette Barclay will have the lead. Others in the cast will be Frank Brown, Tom Graves, Dick Coates, Annabelle Klasing, Howard Paden, Stella Mann, Nell Roberts and Marilyn Stout.

Four Broadway Openings This Week

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—Broadway gets four new ones next week. "Tiger at the Gates" arrives Monday at the Plymouth theater. This is Christopher Fry's version of the French original by the late Jean Giraudoux who called it "The Trojan War Will Not Take Place." Michael Redgrave has been imported from London, along with some other members of the cast that played there, to star.

Congress Comic

STAN FREEMAN, PIANIST AND COMIC, WHO WILL OPEN TUESDAY AT TOWN AND COUNTRY.

The Night Spots

CHASE CLUB—A gay and pleasant song and ballet revue, "The Chase Roman Holiday," produced by Harold Koplar, opened the club's season last week for a five weeks run. It has Jessie Elliott, a young comedienne who effectively manages a light touch of pathos in her comedy, Bill Heyer, a personable baritone, Flo Mae Spack, a pretty soprano (formerly Miss Missouri) and Ed Balin, the choreographer and dance lead, doing a couple of evocative ballet numbers with tiny (4-foot, 8-inch) Marlene Dell. Harry John Brown directs the 17-piece orchestra and wrote two new songs for the show, "Sky High" and "Warm Italian Night." For its Italian atmosphere, the show uses such staples as "Italian Street Song," "Three Coins in the Fountain," and "Pagliacci."

TOWN AND COUNTRY—George Shearing, famous jazz pianist and composer, and his quintet through tomorrow night. Stan Freeman, versatile pianist-comic, opens Tuesday night. He offered his own parodies and take-offs on composers in a suave and debonair style.

BOULEVARD ROOM—Cass Harrison, his piano and orchestra. Fredna Parker's vocals.

STATLER LOUNGE — The Lenaud Sisters, duo-pianists.

CROWN ROOM—Ernie Young's combo, with Pat Cherry and Ken Barry doing vocals.

CASA LOMA BALLROOM — Somethin' Smith and the Redheads of "It's a Sin to Tell a Lie," fame, close tonight. Frank Yankovic Oct. 12-16.

ZODIAC ROOF—Pete Rubino, and his quintet offers zany antics and dance music.

MERRY - GO - ROUND — The Johnny Lewis Trio for dancing.

GOURMET ROOM—The Johnny Lewis Trio offers dinner music. Charlette Politte's piano in the lounge.

STEEPLECHASE—Harry Fender's broadcast interviews.

CLARIDGE LOUNGE — Dave "Nose" Bold, quipster at the piano.

ENCORE ROOM—The Ralph Sutton Trio's hot jazz.

TIC TOC TAP—Jeri Lynn and the Three Dukes of Kent.

RENDEZVOUS — Dick Balsano at the organ and piano bar.

CRYSTAL PALACE — Cynthia Gooding sings ballads of many nations.

FRONTIER ROOM—Hal Kemper at the piano.

PETIT PIGALLE—Joe Bakalor's violin and Pete Flanders's piano provide mood music.

CLUB IMPERIAL—Chris Christian Tuesday, Latin music Wednesday, a square dance Thursday, the Rhythmaires Friday and Vince Brock Saturday.

BISTRO N'ORLEANS—Eugene Grman's piano.

Gallery Notes

HERBERT CUMMINGS, painter who teaches at Webster College, will open a two-week exhibition with a public reception next Sunday at 3 p.m. at People's Art Center, 3657 Grandel square.

Dorothy Quest, a leading St. Louis portrait artist, will inaugurate the season of the Monday Club of Webster Groves Friday with the hanging of 32 new oils and pastels. A reception will be held Oct. 16. The show will close Nov 8.

Private receptions today will open the newly formed Group 9's first showing, at the Martin Schweig Gallery of Modern Art; an Elizabeth Phelan-Rodney Winfield exhibit at the Artists' Guild and a solo display by Stel-la Pearlmutter at the Art Mart, Clayton.

* * * *

A new permanent exhibition of primitive art opened Thursday at City Art Museum. Yesterday's openings included those of the annual museum showing of Artists' Equity Association and a loan exhibition of 75 prints from five centuries, at Brookings Hall, Washington University.

Modern French paintings from the collection of Mr. and Mrs. Theo Haimann of Clayton will go on public display tomorrow at the Givens Hall gallery on the campus.

Maurice Chevalier Back on Broadway

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (UP)—Wearing his straw hat, infectious smile and 67 years with a careless grace, Maurice Chevalier wowed them at the Lyceum theater this week.

The famous French singing comedian, absent from these parts since 1948, gave the fashionable audience a large dose of largely new material in the old manner and received opening and closing ovations.

This is the same type of one-man show of songs and impressions as the debonair Frenchman has done in the past. Chevalier does a lot of talking leading up to most of his numbers, and he does it well. Mostly, it is good humorous talk, as he explains what the next song is going to be about. A couple of times the talk is better than the songs.

Melt a couple of tablespoons of butter with a few slivered blanched almonds until the nuts are golden-brown; serve over green asparagus (frozen or canned) or cooked fresh snap beans.

"Where's Dinner?"

Women Complain, Now It's Man's Turn

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

CAN a mere man make a complaint in your column? In most of your letters, the women are complaining about the men, but I'd like to say something too. It's this: Why do women get themselves so involved in clubs and groups that they don't have time to be at home? I believe they should have outside interests and I don't want my wife to be a slave to a dust mop and dishpan, but I do wish she would schedule her club meetings early enough in the afternoon so she could have dinner ready by the time I get home. She thinks I'm being unreasonable. Now tell me, honestly, Martha, am I wrong? I'd like to hear what other men and women have to say about it.

MERE MAN.

Of course you're not wrong. When a woman marries—unless she finds it necessary to work outside the home—her home should command her first loyalty. As long as her husband is bringing home the pay check, he has the right to expect a good hot meal and an orderly house and a wife who will pay attention to him instead of worrying about club meetings. That doesn't mean I don't think a woman should belong to organizations. I do, and many of those clubs do excellent work. But a wise clubwoman makes sure that her outside interests aren't burdensome to her family.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 31 YEARS OLD. Four years ago I met a man in my office and we started dating. I fell in love with him and he said he loved me. We decided to be married and had made all our plans to go to my home town for the wedding. Just about three weeks before the wedding date, he started a big quarrel with me and said he didn't want to be married. I was broken-hearted, but there wasn't anything to do but call off the wedding. We didn't even speak at the office for more than six months but finally he came to me and asked me to go to dinner with him. I guess it was silly, Martha, but I still loved him so I broke down and went. He apologized and said he really loved me and wanted to marry. So again we started making our plans and had tentatively decided to be married at Christmas. Now he has again started acting irritable and cross and makes excuses not to keep dates. Am I silly to keep on thinking that we might be married some day or shall I just cross him off and try to forget him? Please help me.

WORRIED.

After one bad experience, you apparently can spot the symptoms. From the looks of it, he just doesn't want to be tied down and even though he may think he loves you, he shies away from the idea of responsibility and losing his freedom. I'm afraid, since it has happened twice, that you may be playing a losing game. And it's better to accept that now than learn an even more painful lesson later.

Dear Martha:

● I HAVE BEEN MARRIED four years. My husband and our baby son and I live in a small apartment and we really need a lot more room. My girl friend lives in another apartment building in the neighborhood and she wants us to move next door to her. The place is vacant and we could have it. It's just what we need. But my husband for some reason doesn't like this girl and he has put his foot down on moving there. Don't you think he's being selfish?

UNHAPPY.

Not necessarily. There must be other apartments available where you can find enough room for your family without forcing your husband to live next door to someone he doesn't particularly like. You wouldn't really be happy in a situation like that, so why ask for trouble? Tell your friend that you aren't quite ready to move, or that this particular apartment doesn't quite fill your requirements. Talk it over with your husband and decide together what kind of place you need and want. You'll be much happier in your new home if he's as enthusiastic about it as you are.

Dear Martha:

● I RECENTLY met a lovely girl. She was engaged but because her fiance was gone temporarily she was lonely and we became good friends. I asked her for a date and she reluctantly accepted. It was perfect, but we both realized we shouldn't let ourselves go on like this because someone's feelings would be hurt. We decided I wouldn't see her any more. That was 30 days ago and believe me, Martha, I am always thinking of her. I would love to call her and am dying to see her. To make matters more complicated, we all three attend the same university. Should I see her?

JERRY.

I believe that's her choice to make, Jerry. Undoubtedly, she likes you a great deal, but as long as she is engaged to someone else, she shouldn't be dating you, even though her fiance is out of town. However, if she finds she doesn't love him as much as she thought she did—and can forget him while she's with you—then she'd better forget about marrying him. But don't force her to make a decision between the two of you. You'll be seeing each other around the campus, and if she finds she doesn't want to be engaged to him, she'll let you know.

Dear Martha:

● ABOUT A MONTH AGO I had two dates with a boy I have known a long time. Since then I haven't heard from him. My cousin who lives in his home town told me he was going steady but I found out this isn't true. I'm sure she must have told him that about me. My mother seems to think I should write but I've never done anything like this and I'm afraid he'll get the idea I am chasing him. Should I write him?

HELPLESS.

Why not send him a card for some special occasion—Halloween, for example, or Thanksgiving? Does he live too far away to come over for an evening party? If not, get the crowd together and invite him, or perhaps your mother would be willing to invite him for the weekend. That way, he would know you like him and aren't going steady, and you can tell from his reaction whether or not he is interested in seeing you again.

Martha Carr is glad to answer your questions. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. She cannot answer problems of a medical or legal nature.

By Sylvia Stiles

THE smartest costumes for fall are beginning to focus attention on the hat. Ever since the French designers decided to change the proportions of the fashionable figure, millinery has gained in importance. Now it begins to look as if any simple sheath dress or semi-fitted, long-lined suit will attain the newest effect merely by the right choice of a hat.

The "no-hat" habit, which had reached such popularity that the hatters were on the verge of changing their vocations, now has given place to a "must-have-a-hat" fad. Not only must a woman have a hat, but it needs to be a bulky model, sufficiently large and important in appearance to enable her to attain that newest look.

The look that everyone is seeking and designers on both sides of the Atlantic are promoting starts with a willowy sheath but calls for a top-heavy emphasis. By day, the only certain way to achieve it is by the investment in the right type of millinery. By evening, those scarf-stoles to be draped about the shoulders or a shoulder cape will prove satisfactory. Collars that are lined with fur and become hoods also are effective.

Wherever fall fashions are on display, it's the hat that gets the most attention. Every designer whether he or she happens to be an international favorite or a prizewinner for outstanding creations isn't satisfied until the costume is completed with one of those bigger, broader, bulkier hats. This was apparent in a showing of color pictures of Parisian designers arranged by the St. Louis Fashion Group for members and guests on Wednesday, as part of a nation-wide organization feature. The pictures, taken in Paris, not only revealed the complete reversal of silhouette proportions with the launching of Dior's "Y" but illustrated how much the hat contributes to the new effect. To further demonstrate the power of a hat in changing the appearance of a costume, Mrs. Marjorie Wilten, who served as commentator, wore a bulky muffin beret of white beaver fur, and Miss Emma Auer, who arranged the showing, indorsed the vogue of larger hats with a wide-brimmed model of turquoise blue beaver.

Each American designer presenting a showing of original modes in St. Louis this fall has co-ordinated the hat to the dress of suit with unusual care. Howard Greer's creations, for example, stress slim lines for daytime with a bouffant mood for evening, but those sheath dresses with their subtle clinging lines call for the big hat and the accent of a large muff or suit with unusual care. Howseason's important look. Irene, another California designer with a flair for originality and distinction, features slim tunics for daytime but suggests that they be topped by high and heavy hats. Her cape silhouettes are other examples of the topheavy emphasis.

In New York, where clothes of the leading designers are being assembled for the fashion presentation in connection with the annual Coty Fashion Critics' Award, the themes that have the relaxed, lean look are the prize-winners but they are accessorized to give emphasis to the top of the figure. Anne Klein, of Junior Sophisticates, who is one of the winners, has attained honors with her "shift" dress that is fitted through the hipline but loose above, and is co-ordinated with a narrow coat and an important-looking hat. Her easy, "unfitted" look that appears in suits, follows the lines of the regulation pea jacket and looks especially smart with a big fur beret. For casual wear, Miss Klein indorses the wool dress with its own hood that may be converted to a shawl collar.

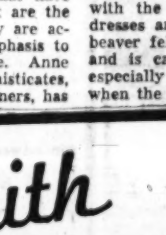

Other designers winning the top awards are Jeanne Campbell of Sportwhirl and Herbert Kasper of Arnold and Fox. All are under 30 and have a youthful slant to their fashions. All design clothes in the medium price bracket. Kasper's designs are the most sophisticated of the three, many of them being ensembles with full length coats that are slim of line, and that require big hats to give them an air of expensive elegance.

Most impressive hats featured with the season's outstanding dresses and suits are made of beaver felt that looks like fur and is called "mousse." It is especially striking of white, or when the white beaver is combined with a jewel-toned or black velvet. The high toque and the over-size beret are popular shapes although the fez and the over-size bowl shapes are among the types that give the heavy effect so essential to a fashionable silhouette for fall.

She Danced at His Wedding

Donna Resents the Fact that Peter Doubts Arthur's Sincerity

By Vida Hurst

CHAPTER 22

CONFUSED by the events of the evening plus Peter's avowed determination to hold her to their engagement for six months, Donna said, "You needn't be so belligerent about it. I haven't asked to be free.

"You will. I saw your face when you were dancing with Arthur. It was a dead give-away. He must have been handing out the old Prentiss line."

And you pretend to be his friend," she said shocked because, although she had doubted Arthur's sincerity, she resented Peter's doing so.

"Our friendship didn't keep him from marrying Enid," Peter reminded her. "Well, Donna, I'd better be leaving."

For a moment she thought he was going to kiss her. Involuntarily she stiffened but her resistance was unnecessary.

"See you," he said and was gone, leaving her bewildered and disappointed. There is nothing more humiliating to a woman than being prepared to meet advances which are not made.

As she undressed Donna wondered if Arthur had meant what he said about still loving her. She knew his parents preferred her but a man didn't marry to please his parents. No one had compelled Arthur to become Enid's husband but tonight neither of them seemed very happy.

MAYBE Peter knew more about it than Donna did. Enid and Peter had remained at the table talking while the other couple danced. Enid might have told Pete of their mutual disillusionment; she might have gone so far as to mention a divorce. But in that case Peter wouldn't have insisted upon holding Donna to their own make-shift engagement.

Arthur's words and nearness had roused enough of the old emotion to make her reluctant to kiss Peter but she was not sure she would want to marry Arthur now. Her trust in him had been shattered like a precious vase which no skill could mend.

IN HER BED, UNABLE TO SLEEP, DONNA BEGAN TO THINK ABOUT PETER'S RECENT ACTIONS.

In her bed, unable to sleep, Donna began to think about Peter's recent actions. Was his reason for not kissing her because he sensed her withdrawal or because Enid's attempt to make her husband jealous had roused the love Peter hoped was dead? Why then had he insisted that their engagement held for six months no matter what happened?

It was probably just a lover's quarrel, Donna reminded herself, which would blow over leaving the married couple more in love than ever. It was ridiculous to worry about it.

But from the way Arthur looked Monday the battle was still raging. He spoke to his partner and Donna without enthusiasm and late in the afternoon, after Peter had left the office, Arthur buzzed for Donna.

"You won't need your notebook," he said closing the door.

Donna seated herself beside his desk, too nervous to relax. Arthur paced noiselessly up and down the carpeted floor.

"Any aspirin aboard?" he inquired.

DONNA smiled. "In the left hand corner of the little cabinet over your wash bowl. How many do you want?"

"Two," he sighed as if he were preparing to drain the cup of poisoned hemlock. Donna brought the tablets with a glass of water. "Thank you," he said. "I had a terrible night. Practically no sleep."

"I had a bad night, too. Must have been something we ate."

"It's not funny," he groaned. "It seems I owe you an apology."

Her eyes flashed blue fire as she snapped, "For what?"

"My wife says I made a fool of myself Saturday night."

Donna's voice was scornful. "You needn't worry about my misunderstanding anything you said if that's what you mean."

"I told Enid that but she doesn't believe me. After all, I'd had several drinks and the way she was taking on over Pete, I didn't think it mattered to her."

* * *

AND Peter had feared that Arthur and Enid might separate. What a joke that was.

"Tell your wife I've known you long enough not to take you seriously."

This was a deliberate shot and it hurt. The color deepened in his handsome face as he said, "I deserved that, Donna. You won't believe it but I never would have married Enid if she hadn't followed me to Phoenix. I was infatuated with her in New York. Like most men who have been in the Navy and away from familiar surroundings, I wasn't thinking too clearly. But after I had been home a few months I would have realized my mistake. Enid was smart enough to know it."

"Are you sure about that, Arthur? That you wouldn't have married her, I mean."

"Of course I'm sure. What are you trying to imply?"

"If it's true you're not only faithless, you're a coward, incapable of loyalty to anyone."

She had the bitter realization of knowing she had wounded him irretrievably. His pallor frightened her. Yet never had she loved him more than she did at this moment. Her idol was made of clay but she still worshipped him. His handsome sullen mouth, his reproachful eyes, the silly way a lock of his hair stuck up on the back of his head, the intimacy of his lowered voice. . . . Tears rushed into her eyes and determined not to shed them, she fled from his office.

Hitchcock Takes Over Arab Bazaar For Suspense Film

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 1.

SOME 20 years ago, when he was operating out of London, Alfred Hitchcock, the master of suspense, conceived a bonnie idea of staging a chase sequence through the "Souks," or native bazaar that is the center of Arab life in North Africa. Nothing came of the thought, however, because Hitch ran into budget problems, and he had to shift his setting to the Swiss Alps.

That particular film, "The Man Who Knew Too Much," was released here in 1934 Though it had a first-rate cast, headed by Leslie Banks, Edna Best, Pierre Fresnay and Peter Lorre in his first English-speaking role, the picture didn't do beans at the box office. Hitchcock, who is seldom tortured by doubt, attributed its failure to the switch of location.

Now, simply to prove that he was right all the time, he is remaking "The Man Who Knew Too Much" for Paramount. And this time he took the company to where he had wanted to go in the first place, Marrakech, in French Morocco. There, for five weeks, he turned the Souks, a labyrinthian area of winding streets and tiny shops embracing some three or four acres, into a Hollywood sound stage, and chased people to his heart's content.

Among the scenes he brought back are the killing of an Arab (he's actually a French cop in disguise) in the plaza, the dunking of another Arab (a real one, this time) in a vat of blue dye, the chase, which winds through the streets and across the rooftops, and the incongruous sight of a veiled lady walking about wearing sun glasses, which Hitchcock swears was not staged.

To take over the Souks for the location, it was necessary for Paramount to obtain the permission of the Pasha as well as the French government. The company agreed to put the Souks back in the same condition they found it. This stipulation, as any one who has ever visited the 800-year-old place, 140 miles southeast of Casablanca, knows, saved the studio a big cleaning charge.

Answers to Housewives' Questions

By Dorothy Brainerd

"I HAVE a refrigerator that hasn't been in use and was closed tightly for four or five years," explains Mrs. D. T. of Roodhouse, Ill. "Now it has a rank, musty odor about it. Even the ice cubes taste like it. I have tried everything I can think of, but nothing has stopped it yet."

You might try washing the inside of the refrigerator with lukewarm water to which you have added baking soda in the proportion of about one-half cup to a quart of water. This is a stronger solution than is normally recommended, so do be sure to rinse immediately with clear water. Or use a very mild solution of chlorine bleach, again observing the warning to rinse immediately and thoroughly with clear water.

There are charcoal compounds which may be purchased in grocery stores and housewares sections which may be put in refrigerators to absorb odors; they would be worth a try. There also is an "old wives' tale" that a cut lemon will help absorb refrigerator odors, but this I have never tried.

Sometimes this odor is in the insulation and rubber gasket around the door of the refrigerator, in which case replacing the rubber gasket helps.

Another thought: The odor may be concentrated in the ice cube trays; try replacing them.

This unpleasant odor is one of several reasons why a refrigerator should not be left closed for a long period of time unless it is running. It is better to leave it operating on the lowest speed or to have the lock removed so that there is no danger of a child becoming locked inside, then leave the door ajar.

"WE HAVE a new basement under an old house," explains Mrs. R.J.F. "Last winter I dried my laundry down there, but some insect has been eating holes in the fabrics. Can you help me?"

Afraid not, but you can get expert help if you will get in touch with the City Health Department, Sanitation Section, Room 62, Municipal Courts building.

IT IS ALWAYS FUN to find something that looks like sheer luxury, yet know in our own hearts that it is practical. And this is the case with a decorative waste basket which has a removable cover of moire protected by a layer of transparent plastic.

Colors designed and texture of the fine fabric show clearly through the transparent plastic, which protects it from scuffing and stains.

MRS. D. P. wants to know if we can give her a recipe for sour milk biscuits. Here is the one recommended by the St. Louis district office of the Dairy Council:

Two cups sifted flour; one teaspoon salt; one-half teaspoon soda; four tablespoons butter; three-fourths cup sour milk or buttermilk.

Sift together sifted flour, salt and soda; cut in butter with pastry blender or with two knives; stir in sour milk; roll or pat the dough one-half inch thick on a lightly floured board and cut with a round cutter. Bake biscuits on buttered pan in a hot oven, between 375 and 400 degrees, for 15 minutes.

"I AM BORED with the appearance of my bedroom," complains Mrs. B.A. "I can't afford new furniture and I don't want to repaint the walls, since they are in good condition.

About the only things I do like in the room are my draperies and bedspread, which are in a floral print. Have you any suggestions as to how I can change the appearance of the room without too much expense?"

Yes, you can give it interest by making a dressing-table skirt and cushion for the dressing table chair in a solid color which picks up one of the shades in the print of the draperies. You also might make a slipcover for the headboard of the bed.

This would not be much of a chore nor would it be too expensive, and it will freshen the whole room.

If you really feel that you just can't stand those four walls any longer (and from the tone of your letter I gather you do) you might even make two sets. For instance, if the print has coral and blue flowers on a white background, make one set in coral, and another in blue.

Any homemaking problems bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She will answer your letters or publish them and see if other readers have the answers for you.

'The 3-Penny Opera'

NEW YORK, Sept. 24—After a one-season intermission "The Three-penny Opera" by Kurt Weill is back again at the theater De Lys with its oddly gripping and vastly entertaining assortment of characters from the lusty London underworld of long ago.

Lotte Lenya, Weill's widow who has been performing in "Threepenny" ever since it first was produced in 1929, skillfully leads the returning company, in which most of the key roles are being sung by those who made the show a hit on its earlier visit to New York.

POPULATION UP AS DEATH RATE DROPS IN ITALY

Economic Problem Difficult for Youth — Tariffs Protect Industry.

By GEORGE WELLER

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

ROME, Oct. 1—Until recently Italy's population was increasing at the rate of 1,000,000 every three years. Soon, by 1958 probably, it will have an extra 1,000,000 mouths every second year.

The young Italian faces a hard choice: push open a place at the overcrowded trough, or emigrate.

Italy's sorrow, once too many births, has become too few deaths. While only 9000 more babies have been born this year than last year, about 40,000 more persons are still alive who should, by the old rates, be already gone.

Excess Rises.

In its last annual jump, the excess of births over deaths became 414,000 instead of 365,000.

Travelers, flying into Rome, expect a city ringed with smoking factories and busy plants. They see only an island of white apartment houses and churches, in a sea of green countryside.

"How can these people earn their bread?" they ask.

Nobody knows the answer. It is a fragile mosaic, held together with startagems, subsidies, gimmicks and charity.

Italy's bread is pasta asciutta, the steaming noodles we call spaghetti, whose cost is subsidized. Other answers to the grimy, gay miracle of life in Italy: Low-cost stone housing, two or three part jobs for every full one, and the growth of the automobile industry and its satellites, filling stations and new roads.

The sense of being superfluous hits youth hardest. Boy and girl leave school at 12 to 16 and then must wait, unmarriageable and unwanted, until their middle twenties for the real job.

Better fed, Italy's soldiers are nearly an inch taller than 50 years ago. But even a common drugstore reflects the overload: two girls, a pharmacist and a cashier have existence jobs, where one American would do the whole thing.

Cartels Blamed.

American experts like labor's Walter Reuther, the State Department's crusading Lee Dayton, Connecticut's Senator William Benton, have put accusing fingers on the cartels of big business in Italy.

Dayton found that shoe manufacturers had rigged their costs to keep prices high. The big monopolies like Fiat motors and Montecatini chemicals operate behind portective tariff walls.

Italy's big business has an answer: "Sure, but we are keeping more useless hands off the labor market than anybody else. We are 10 per cent social crusaders, running and unemployment benefit."

Big business in Italy, when it needs American loans or orders, has to talk out of the other side of its mouth. Then it has to prove its "efficiency" in order to buck the competition of other population-loaded countries. Having no raw materials, it can only cut salaries.

About 28 per cent of Italians want to emigrate. Against this 9,000,000, the American opening of the door to 70,000 immigrants is only another palliative, useful politically to Italo-American politicians, but basically only a gesture.

While only 4 per cent of the Italian would-be emigrants actually try to get into the United States, some 40 per cent seek to go to Latin America. Canada gets 8 per cent, Australia 14 per cent of the bids.

Lion Close-up Dangerous.

New Governor of Virgin Islands Grandson of Governor's Slaves

Walter B. Gordon, Former Football Coach, Rose to Eminence Through Sheer Hard Work.

BERKELEY, Calif., Oct. 1 (AP)—A big, genial, work loving man whose grandparents were slaves for John B. Gordon, Confederate general and Governor of Georgia, is the new Governor for the Virgin Islands.

As a matter of fact, Walter B. Gordon's family took its name from the old-time Georgia Governor. But the new administrator for the islands rose to his present eminence through sheer hard work.

Gordon, who now tips the scales at 240, was a heavyweight boxer and football guard at the University of California nearly 40 years ago. After his graduation in 1918, he was named line coach at California, a post he held until 1943. But he managed to carry on many other activities simultaneously.

Take a typical 24 hours when he was just out of college:

Starting at midnight, he worked a shift on the Berkeley police force. Then, without even taking time to remove his revolver from his hip, he went to law classes until around 11 a.m. After a quick lunch and nap, he hustled out to his duties as assistant football coach. At last, around 7 p.m., he arrived home in time for another nap before returning to police duty.

Headed Adult Authority.

Both the law and police enforcement experience were useful to Gordon when he was appointed chief of California's Adult Authority in 1945 to deal with prisoner paroles and the fixing of indeterminate sentences for convicted felons. He is perhaps best known for his work with the authority and he was serving in that capacity when appointed to the Virgin Islands post.

Gordon, when named to the Governor's house at Charlotte Amalie on St. Thomas Island, had never met the man who appointed him, Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay.

But he knows well the man who insisted on giving him the oath, Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court Earl Warren. Warren, as Governor of California, picked Gordon to head the California Adult Authority.

The minute the word was out on the Virgin Island appointment, Warren was on the telephone from Washington.

"As one Governor to another, I want to congratulate you," he said.

Wife Energetic, Too.

The schoolteacher Gordon married almost matches him in energy. In addition to her home duties, Mary Elizabeth—Gordon calls her "Babe"—makes copper jewelry and ceramic products, weaves cloth and makes her own dresses and hats.

The only regret the Gordons have over the new job is leaving behind two strapping sons, Edwin, an Air Force captain at Moses Lake, Wash., and Walter Jr., a World War II and Korean War veteran, and a daughter, Betty Mae—plus four grandchildren.

The Virgin Islands job is just a blank page to Gordon before he starts writing a record.

But he says he has had a four-point philosophy all his life and he's certain it will work in the islands as it has everywhere else:

"1. Integrity.

"2. Make your professional approach include loyalty to the service.

"3. Efficiency without thought of friends or otherwise.

"4. Insist upon men who are public servants being at all times courteous."

Gordon, who was born in Atlanta and came to California in 1904, doesn't put down his fifth point—hard work. He's thrived on it, for he looks at 61 like a man 10 to 15 years younger.

BUILDING PURCHASED FOR RESERVE ARMORY

$100,000 to Be Spent on Kennerly Avenue Quarters —Other Sites Sought.

A three-story building at 5800 Kennerly avenue has been purchased by the Government for use as an armory by St. Louis army reserve units, it was announced yesterday.

Col. Robert H. Conk, chief of the Missouri Military District, said two additional armory centers—one in northwest St. Louis county and one in the southwest — will be acquired soon, in expectation of a large increase in the number of reservists in this area because of the new national reserve program.

The present armory and training center, at 4350 South Kingshighway, has been used principally by the 102nd Reserve Infantry Division since it was opened in 1933.

Officers of the district said more than $100,000 will be spent renovating the Kennerly building. When the job is finished, about the end of this year, artillery units of the 102nd Division will be moved there from the Kingshighway center, they said.

A final purchase price for the building has not yet been agreed on by the Government, they said. The building has been vacant recently. The property includes two garages and five acres of surrounding land.

A small arms range will be built in the basement, with classrooms, offices and an auditorium on the first and second floors. Drill space, offices and recreational areas will be provided on the third floor.

Officers said that a smaller center downtown, 1409 Washington avenue, which is rented, probably will be given up when the Kennerly armory is ready for occupancy. The two proposed county centers will be acquired in a year or two, they said.

Experiment Held With Youth To Curb Hatred of Policemen

Teacher Changes Attitudes After Teen-Agers Question Uniformed Men —Headquarters Visited.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1 (AP)—"Cops are crooks," the youth told his teacher and classmates. "What's more, they push you up against the wall and beat you."

The youngster was among 100 students, all 15 and 16 years old, who participated in an experiment educators hope will help cut down juvenile delinquency in one of Philadelphia's most crime-ridden areas.

Many of the youths had known only a life-long hate of police, learned in the streets, in their homes and from friends. The three-week experiment tried to teach them to look on the man on the beat as a friend, rather than a foe.

The experiment was conducted by N. Lewis Shaten, head of the English department at FitzSimons Junior High School in North Philadelphia.

Attitude Test.

Shaten began by giving his students an attitude test on the man in blue. When the answers were totaled up, the cops had won a 15 per cent performance rating out of a possible 100.

Taking the same test three weeks later, the youngsters gave higher performance ratings on every one of the 20 questions asked, increasing the over-all rating of cops from 15 to 55 per cent.

Shaten began by having the youngsters discover for themselves just what made up a policeman's job. Some went down to police headquarters at city hall, others visited precinct headquarters or talked with the cop on the beat.

With that knowledge as a basis, Shaten opened his classes to a full and searching discussion. And the charges came flying.

"Cops take bribes," several youngsters said. Shaten began questioning, attempting to pin down sources of information.

"Did you bribe a cop yourself?" he asked. No, none of the youngsters had ever given a policeman a bribe. "But I saw a cop take money," another protested.

"Are you sure it was a bribe?" Shaten asked. The youngster could not tell. He saw money changing hands.

Other charges arose, especially complaints of beatings by police. Again Shaten raised the same questions. Had this happened to any members of the class, had they seen such beatings or were they told about them by others.

Again the same answers. Some students had heard about beatings but nobody had been handled roughly or had seen a beating by a policeman.

As the sessions continued, Shaten sensed that a seed of doubt had been planted in his students' minds. But many still showed a distrust of the man on the beat. There were some accusations which Shaten could not answer.

Policeman Questioned.

A few days later when the youngsters entered the classroom, they found themselves facing Patrolman Morris O'Leary. Shaten again opened the session to questions with no holds barred.

"Why do cops line us up against the wall and search us even when we haven't done anything?" one student asked.

"Do cops take bribes?" was another question.

Officer O'Leary answered good naturedly and without hedging.

"There is good and bad in everybody, including policemen," he said. "If we find a fellow policeman who is bad we throw him out. But sometimes people don't let us know if an officer is bad. Without complaints, there is nothing we can do. However, most policemen are honest."

Questioned why teen-agers sometimes are stopped and searched, O'Leary went into an explanation of police methods.

"For example we get a call that seven youngsters have robbed a grocery store and were seen running west. They were about 16 or 17. We head for that direction in a patrol car.

"When we get in the area we find a similar group running in the same direction. We stop them and search them for the stolen articles. If they are innocent we let them go."

"Then how about the cop who had us tear off the names of our clubs from our jackets," another youngster asked.

"He was wrong," O'Leary said. "It doesn't help matters, though, if you talk back. The thing to do is to call the captain of the district. Ask him if there is a rule against wearing the names of clubs on the back of your jackets.

"If he says no, keep them on. If the patrolman comes around again and tells you to take the names off, let him know what the captain said. But be polite."

After awhile the questions began to take on a friendly tone. They turned from suspicion to curiosity.

"Tell us some of the exciting things you have done," one of the youths suggested. "How do you load a gun?" another asked.

Finally, said Shaten, the youngsters came to realize that policemen are people; that they want to be looked on as friends, rather than enemies.

So highly considered was the experiment that a list of questions is now planned for policemen—to determine their attitudes toward teen-agers—and the whole idea of getting to know the cop of the beat was to be instituted this fall as part of a regular civics course in three schools.

UNITED FUND TO SET UP PLANT CHAPTERS

Volunteers Plan Groups in 171 Large Business Firms.

A group of volunteers will begin tomorrow setting up United Fund chapters within the 171 largest business firms in the St. Louis area, it was announced yesterday.

In organizing company chapters, volunteers will ask presidents to appoint a chapter chairman, select a fair share executive gifts chairman and aid in setting up a year-round payroll deduction system so that contributions may be paid in convenient small amounts.

W. B. McMillan, large firms division chairman, said the chapter plan is being introduced here for the first time, following successful operation as the method of giving for companies and employes in all other major United Fund cities.

Efforts of the chapters, he said, will ultimately bring in the major part of the $8,245,925 goal of the United Fund drive, which will be conducted Oct. 20 through Nov. 22.

The most vital point volunteer organizers will stress is that adoption of the year-round payroll contribution plan in each plant is imperative to the success of the United Fund campaign, McMillan declared. "The entire hope for reaching the goal is based on every company's realization of that," he said.

The company campaign chairman will work with a committee of labor and management representatives within each firm to acquaint employes with the needs of the 114 organizations represented in the "one gift . . . for all" appeal, McMillan said. In most firms actual solicitation of employes will begin about Oct. 17.

1. You get hand gentleness for delicate fabrics with Whirlpool's ⅓ slower washing action and damp-dry spin.

2. You have normal washing action and damp-dry spin for gently washing all regular fabrics

NEW!... WHIRLPOOL ANNOUNCES TWO SEPARATE WASHING ACTIONS

*With Suds Miser—$20.00 Additional

Now . . . only Whirlpool combines in one fully-automatic washer two separate washing actions to safely wash anything washable. Completely separate, one cycle has ⅓ lower speed and shorter time for safely washing, rinsing and damp drying nylons, sheerest lingerie and delicate fabrics. This cycle, as well as the regular cycle, is fully automatic from fill to finish. The regular cycle with normal speed and time washes cottons, linens and all regular fabrics thoroughly yet gently. No more special "hand" washing of delicate things... wash everything automatically with complete safety in a Whirlpool.

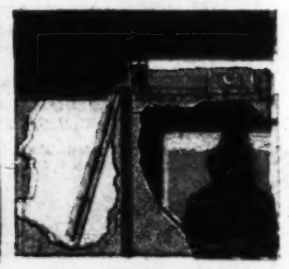

EXCLUSIVE SUDS-MISER SAVES OVER 1/2 THE COST OF SOAP AND HOT WATER

Suds-Miser is the big "extra" only Whirlpool gives you. It saves money for you every washday. It stops the needless waste of suds and hot water going down the drain when they can wash extra loads of clothes!

Built-in, fully-automatic, Suds-Miser is a Whirlpool exclusive. Here's what it does for you. After the first load of clothes is washed, Suds-Miser automatically pumps the hot sudsy water into a laundry tub for storage while the rinsing and damp drying are completed. Then, for your next load of clothes, all you do is set the illuminated indicator at "Suds-Miser" on the dial and, automatically, only the clean, hot sudsy water is pumped back into your Whirlpool washer for re-use.

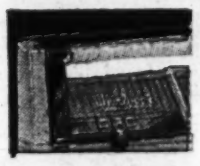

Hot water is stored after first load.

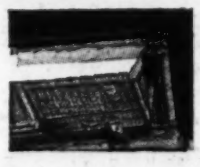

Hot water is returned for re-use.

FOUR SEPARATE DRYING TEMPERATURES SAFELY DRY ALL FABRICS MUCH FASTER

Full range heat with 3 temperature settings for all regular fabrics. Simply set indicator and automatically correct heat safely dries clothes. Fabric guide eliminates guesswork.

For drying lingerie and sheerest of fabrics you have a special delicate heat of 110°F. This setting automatically assures the correct, safe heat for drying all delicate and synthetic materials.

Here are extra reasons for you to buy Whirlpool

IN THE WASHER . . . Guide Lite control with dual illumination; 3-Level water selector saves water on partial loads; 3-Temp water selector; 7 Rinses yet use less water; germicidal lamp; Dual Cycle-Tone signal; 5-year parts warranty on transmission.

IN THE DRYER . . . Guide Lite control with dual illumination; controlled air circulation of safe tempered heat; 20-lbs. wet clothes capacity; Ultra-Violet lamp gives clothes fresh-air fragrance; Cycle-Tone signal; porcelain top; fully-automatic ignition on gas dryers.

SCHOOLS GROUP SO SUCCESSFUL IT WILL DISBAND

Commission Reaches Goal in Arousing Interest in Educational Problems.

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright 1955.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—When an organization goes out of business because it has been so successful—that's news.

The National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools is going to do just that next January, although it is only a little more than six years old.

What is this commission? What does it do?

Millions of Americans already know the answer.

A year after the last world war ended, a group of distinguished Americans began a series of exploratory meetings on the problems of our public schools. Encouraged by prominent educators such as Dr. James B. Conant, then president of Harvard University, they organized the commission in May of 1949 as a non-profit corporation for the improvement of the schools.

They were not professionally identified with education, religion or politics and they reflected many different backgrounds. But they had one big idea in common. It was this: The way to get better schools was to get plain citizens interested and working together at local and state levels.

Opened Headquarters.

So under the chairmanship of New York publisher Roy E. Larsen, they opened up a national headquarters at 2 West Forty-fifth street, New York 36, N.Y.

Their plan was to arouse the interest of local communities across the nation in improving their schools, then leave the job up to them.

At that time there were only about a dozen citizens school improvement committees in existence that lived up to the commission's definition of what such a committee should be. That is, a committee that represents the entire community, that works with the school authorities rather than trying to oust them, and that proceeds on a basis of facts rather than with an axe to grind.

Today the New York office is in touch with 3000 of these committees and it estimates that the total in operation comes to around 12,000.

2000 Letters a Day.

Acting as a clearing house of information, the New York office receives about 2000 letters a day now compared to the trickle it got at the start.

The task the commission took on six years ago was to make the nation aware of the need for more and better schools and teachers, and to keep this interest going once it was aroused.

To help the local committees do their job, the commission has printed a series of guidebooks on educational problems.

These titles are samples of the questions dealt with: "What should our school accomplish?" "How can we get enough good teachers?" "How good are our teaching materials?" "what are our school building needs?"

Individual copies of the booklets can be obtained free of charge by writing to the commission at the above address. Copies in quantities can be had for what it costs to produce them.

Six Years to Achieve Goal.

On a visit to the New York office now you find a group of happy people. When they opened up their office in 1949 they gave themselves six years to achieve their goal. And they are happy because they feel that the job has been done well enough so that they can safely go out of business now. (They credit the newspapers of America with helping get their message across). The work will be carried on after January by state citizens committees.

A lot has happened in the last six years. For instance:

1. There has been a revolutionary grass-roots awakening to our king-size school problems.

2. Citizens no longer consider the task confronting them as "impossible." They have gained confidence from the passage of unexpected bond issues and other local successes, small and big.

3. Citizens and educators accept the fact that they can work together now. "This is a major accomplishment," a commission executive told me. "Six or seven years ago many educators did not welcome co-operation with citizens because they felt they did not understand the field.

PLAN TO IMPORT ITALIAN TAILORS PUT IN EFFECT

Corsi Was Fired After Suggesting It but Washington Found Idea Was Sound.

By PETER LISAGOR
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

ROME, Oct. 1—Edward Corsi may find little retroactive satisfaction in it, but his scheme to admit a "boatload" of Italian tailors into the United States has begun to produce results.

The first 37 tailors and needleworkers and their families reached New York the other day by plane, beneficiaries of a "crash" program started shortly after Corsi's stormy ouster from the State Department last spring.

Corsi, who went to Washington to expedite the Refugee Relief Act, was charged, among other things, with dreaming up a plan to import a raft of tailors, cooks and bakers, to promote his political ambitions.

Corsi said before a Senate subcommittee after his ouster that he could obtain mass job assurances from trade unions and garment makers for tailors, whose mass migration would dramatize the program.

Political Stew.

The administrator of the act, R. W. Scott McLeod, seemed startled by Corsi's disclosure at the time, and a fine political stew threatened to hamstring further the admission of immigrants under the law. On inquiry, McLeod's office then discovered that tailors actually were in short supply, that the unions and management could provide the assurances and that something ought to be done quickly.

The word went out from Washington to consular offices in Naples, Palermo, Genoa and Trieste to drop everything and get the visas into the hands of the tailors.

The National Catholic Welfare Conference, working with the clothing industry, began to comb Italy for tailors and needleworkers.

Anyone Who Could Sew.

Anybody who could handle a needle and could otherwise qualify under the law suddenly found himself moving through the red tape. There was even some winking at people whose only relationship to needlework was that they had 10 fingers.

To top off Washington's anxiety to put out the fire caused by the Corsi affair, efforts were made to accumulate the tailors" and ship them to the United States in one boat.

Though the order came through in early July, other admission requirements under the act (health, no police records, etc.) made it impossible to process the tailors as quickly as the target date, Sept. 1, or in one impressive batch.

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Andrew P. Landi, of the N.C.W.C. here, says they hope to keep moving the tailors over by planeloads as fast as possible now because Nov. 15 marks the seasonal slackoff in the garment industry and may cause a temporary problem of jobs.

He says visas have been received for about 100 workers to date, many of them women. For each worker there are at least two other members of the families migrating under the program.

The N.C.W.C., he says, has guaranteed that the tailors and their families will have housing and will not become public charges, in accordance with the law.

Refugees From Colonies.

Among those in the first planeload were refugees from Italian colonies in Africa and Venezia Giulia. Many have languished in the refugee camps, mainly in the Naples area, suported by the Italian Government, with supplementary aid from private welfare agencies.

The Refugee Act, authorizing the admission of some 214,000, of which Italy's quota is 60,000, runs out Dec. 31, 1956. The 30,001st visa was issued in Naples the other day, and authorities are certain the quota will be filled from here.

Msgr. Landi's explanation of the tailor shortage is that young Americans resist recruitment in the industry. The clothing makers fear tailors in the United States are becoming extinct, he says, unless a source of supply is found in the regular immigration program.

G.O.P. PICKS COMMITTEE FOR $100-A-PLATE DINNER

Appointment of a 12-man arrangements committee for the $100-a-plate Republican fund-raising dinner, to be held Oct. 11 at Hotel Jefferson, was announced yesterday by Arthur K. Atkinson, chairman. Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay will be the principal speaker at the dinner, the theme of which will be "Forward For Ike in '56."

Atkinson said he named a group of younger St. Louis Republicans to the arrangements committee, in accordance with a recent suggestion of President Eisenhower that the party concentrate on getting young men to work for the G.O.P.

Lewis W. Baldwin Jr. was named chairman of the group. The others are Charles S. Drew Jr., Carroll E. Gunnin, Thomas Igoe, William T. Jones, Roy Jordan, F. Howard White, George D. Will Jr., Robert I. Will, Richard Wolfheim, George Shields and Ralph Spencer. Atkinson said half of the funds raised from the dinner have been allocated for national party purposes, 25 per cent for state and 25 per cent for local.

Program in Religious Studies Introduced at Washington U.

Course Provides Academic Training in Religion Integrated With Other Subjects.

An inter-departmental program in religious studies, designed to offer academic training in religion integrated with other subjects in liberal arts curriculum, has been established at Washington University, Chancellor Ethan A. H. Shepley announced yesterday.

The program is being financed by a $100,000 grant the university received early last year from a national foundation which stipulated its name not be mentioned. The money will be used to pay salaries of additional teachers required to carry out the program.

Plans for the program were begun five years ago by the university's committee on religious policy and program under the direction of Huston Smith, associate professor of philosophy.

On an experimental basis at present, the program encompasses nine departments in the university's college of liberal arts, including art and archaeology, classics, English, history, music, philosophy, psychology, science and sociology-anthropology.

Smith said the program will enable students to specialize either in religion or take courses in religion related to other major fields. It is planned to avoid certain weaknesses of existing approaches to religious studies in contemporary American education, Smith explained.

These approaches incline either toward scattered courses without an over-all plan or toward a department of religion which isolates its subject from other fields of liberal learning, Smith declared.

Six separate courses were added to the university's curriculum this fall as part of the program. They deal with integration of religion with art and archaeology, classics, history, music, philosophy and sociology-anthropology.

Supplementary courses are being conducted in the fields of economics and general literature. A course in science is being conducted by Arthur H. Compton, distinguished service professor of natural philosophy.

Plans for expansion of the program include addition of courses in the departments of English and psychology. Students and teachers participating in the program will attend monthly colloquiums on religion from its various perspectives, Smith said.

TO GRACE THE COURT OF LOVE AND BEAUTY

The Veiled Prophet To Crown New Queen At Brilliant Ball

Elaborate Plans Nearing Completion For Annual Event Tuesday Night at Kiel Auditorium—Escorts for Maids of Honor Announced.

ELABORATE decorations in Kiel Auditorium are in place; lavish gowns made of fabulous fabrics are suspended on padded hangers and florists are working overtime buying and sorting orchids for hundreds of corsages. In a word, preparations for the Veiled Prophet ball Tuesday night are nearing completion.

Tomorrow the many college girls who are to be members of the Court of Love and Beauty will be home by plane, some of them for only 48 hours. Five of the maids of honor are having a final opportunity to rehearse their part in the pageantry, not the least of which is the series of curtsies each girl must make before she takes her place as queen or special maid of honor.

In the ballroom each young woman is escorted by a member of his majesty's committee. At the Queen's supper afterward at Hotel Jefferson the girls may have escorts of their own choosing.

Today is published the official list of maids of honor together with the names of their supper escorts. The list follows: Miss Jean Harwood Alexander with Lt. (j.g.) George R. Brooks, Miss Almira Steedman Baldwin with James Lee Johnson Jr., Miss Margaretha Hager Belz with Thomas H. Teasdale, Miss Myrtle Lambert Boehmer with Fred Kramer, Miss Kate Edmonstone Borders with her brother, Guy Thompson Borders.

Solunar Tables.

Many big-game anglers in Florida are firm believers in the "solunar tables," which support the theory that there are two good fishing periods in each 24 hours, and that they vary according to certain meteorological factors with respect to the relative positions of the sun and moon.

Football Game, Convention October Events in Miami

MIAMI, Fla. — Two events of national significance — the American Legion Convention and the Miami-Notre Dame football game—provide a parley which is expected to attract more than 50,000 visitors to Miami during early October.

Pageantry surrounding the convention, and the football fireworks anticipated in the Hurricane-Irish clash, in effect offer October visitors an "Orange Bowl Festival" at low summer prices.

Hotel accommodations may be difficult to obtain during the Oct. 7-13 period, but continuation of low cost package vacation deals offered by the airlines and railroads during the summer, assures accommodations for their customers.

Chances of obtaining football tickets after reaching town are slim. The 75,000 seat Orange Bowl Stadium already is sold out. Visitors unable to get tickets, however, may see the game on local television.

Legion events will start Sunday, Oct. 9, with preliminary competition scheduled at various locations between junior and senior drum and bugle corps representing Legion posts throughout the country.

The finale in this competition —the annual "Tournament of Champions"—will be held in the Orange Bowl the night of Oct. 10.

The annual Legion convention parade will be held Oct. 11, beginning at 4:30 p.m. and running well into the night.

The parade will be glamorized this year with 30 floats representing as many cities and states. It will mark the first time that floats have been included in a Legion parade.

Visitors may inspect the latest and largest Air Force planes, which will be on display at Miami airfields during the convention. They also may go aboard submarines and a cruiser to be provided by the Navy.

The football game alone will attract more than 15,000 out-of-state visitors. The Irish have sold that many tickets to fans planning to follow the team to Miami.

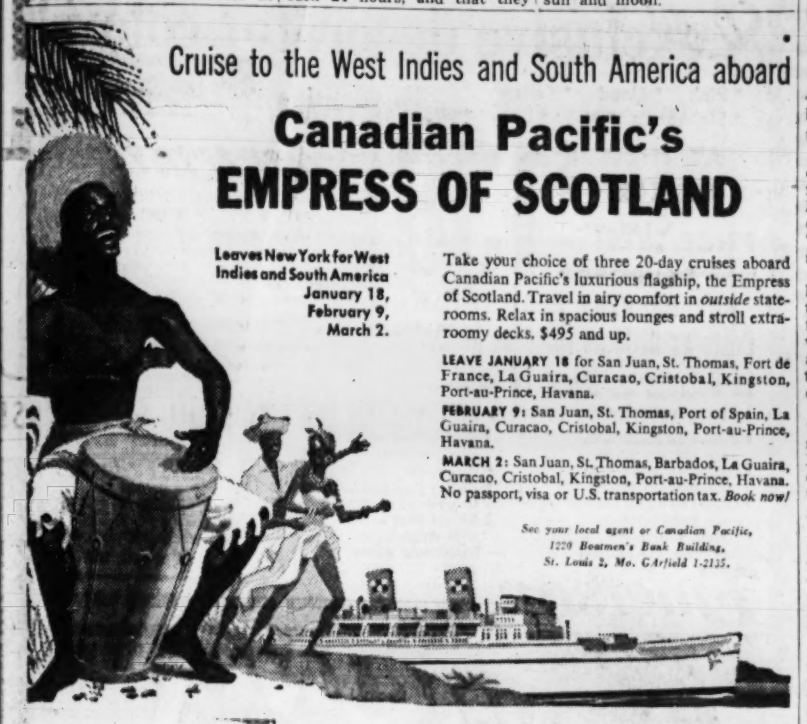

The game also is expected to lure thousands of Legionnaires to Miami several days prior to the opening of their convention.

NEW TERMINAL CONVENIENT TO NEWARK AIRPORT

A new airlines terminal located within two minutes from New York's famous Times Square is now open to serve passengers flying in and out of Newark Airport.

Known as the West Side Airlines Terminal, the $5,000,000 structure is located at Forty-second street and Tenth avenue, only 21 minutes from the Newark field via airport bus and eliminating the crosstown trip of Newark-bound passengers from the East Side Airlines Terminal.

Seven United States airlines will use the new four-story installation: Allegheny, American, Eastern, Mohawk, National, United and Trans World. An eighth, Northwest Orient Airlines, plans to move in at a later date.

Ticket counters serviced by a multiple baggage conveyor system parallel three sides of the main passenger concourse of the new structure. Also on the concourse will be a restaurant, cocktail lounge, oyster bar and newsstand.

The basement of the building is used as a 190-car garage.

Airport buses load and unload under pavilions on the Forty-first street side of the building. Taxis discharge passengers at the Tenth avenue entrance and pick up fares at the Forty-second street doors.

Leaving the new terminal, the airport buses go through the Lincoln Tunnel and then travel via the New Jersey Turnpike to Newark Airport.

On the return trip, the buses emerge from the Lincoln Tunnel at Thirty-eighth street and Tenth avenue and then swing left over Dyer avenue to the rear of the terminal.

Ground Is Right for Planting

By ELEANOR B. McCLURE
Post-Dispatch Garden Writer.

Since the return of autumn last week, we have enjoyed the finest rains we've had in several years. The ground now is in almost perfect condition for that most important task—fall planting.

That's truly fortunate, for this year many home owners are faced with an extensive replanting job. Successive seasons of drouth have brought incalculable loss in shade trees alone. Lacking subsoil moisture, magnificent oaks have been literally starving to death, and many elms have suffered from both drouth and lethal diseases.

Very noticeable, too, are the widespread fatalities among pines, spruces and arborvitae. Both the drouth and the late freeze damaged pieris, dwarf hollies and yews, while such deciduous shrubs —as privets, weigelas, philadelphus and enonymus patens are still mutilated and misshapen. Some of these deciduous shrubs may eventually be restored to symmetry by proper pruning, but many should be replaced.

Let's concede that the loss of large trees and shrubs is a dismal prospect. (One tenderhearted St. Louisan even requested that the injured plants be removed during her absence from the city!) At the same time many home owners realize that the situation offers a fine opportunity for thorough garden revision. This is an excellent time to "upgrade" the planting by selecting choice shrubs and trees.

A well-chosen planting can completely transform the appearance of a residence. Moreover, a genuine "face-lifting" has a practical value, as even the tax authorities will concede. A planting cost of 3 to 4 per cent, added to the original cost of the property, may reduce the capital gains tax later on, if the house is sold at a profit.

In the older sections of the city and county plantings were selected for quick effect. Along street after street are soft maples, sycamores and Chinese or American elms. Even the smallest lots have veritable jungles of evergreens and neglected spireas, weigelas and mock orange—shrubs that have a short season of springtime beauty and look pretty drab the rest of the year. Furthermore, "foundation" plantings have taken over many a house, and greedy, oversized evergreens may darken even the second floor windows.

In a replanting program it may be necessary to buy some large trees or shrubs. In general, though, it is best to shun the "quick effect" and to plan for long-time beauty, instead. The smaller the property, the more important it is to select really choice trees and shrubs that grow handsomer through the years.

In recent weeks, when I visited nurseries in Missouri and Illinois, it was encouraging to find so many different kinds of trees, shrubs and evergreens. Time and again I was shown choice plants that were being tested for our Midwestern climate.

A really wonderful variety of plants are now also offered in small "canned" sizes. That is a boon to the "plant-it-yourself" gardener, for such small trees and shrubs are relatively inexpensive and can be handled with ease. They also grow remarkably fast when set out in a well-prepared bed. We've been greatly pleased with the "canned" broad-leaved evergreens set out last fall. The Chinese and Japanese hollies have filled out very nicely, and the pyracanthas have almost doubled in size. The Magnolia grandifloras are small but shapely trees.

Home owners who are willing to start with small plants can in time replace barberry or privet hedges with yews or broad-leaved evergreens. Canned American hollies, spaced four feet apart, are not prohibitively expensive. After a few years they make a wonderful background, for hollies may be clipped or trimmed to almost any size.

It is a mistake, though, to set small plants in holes that are just large enough to accommodate the roots. To encourage rapid growth and the formation of a sturdy root system, these small fellows are best planted in beds prepared at least 18 inches deep. They should also be protected with an organic mulch, to conserve moisture

From an Overgrown Clutter of Shrubs

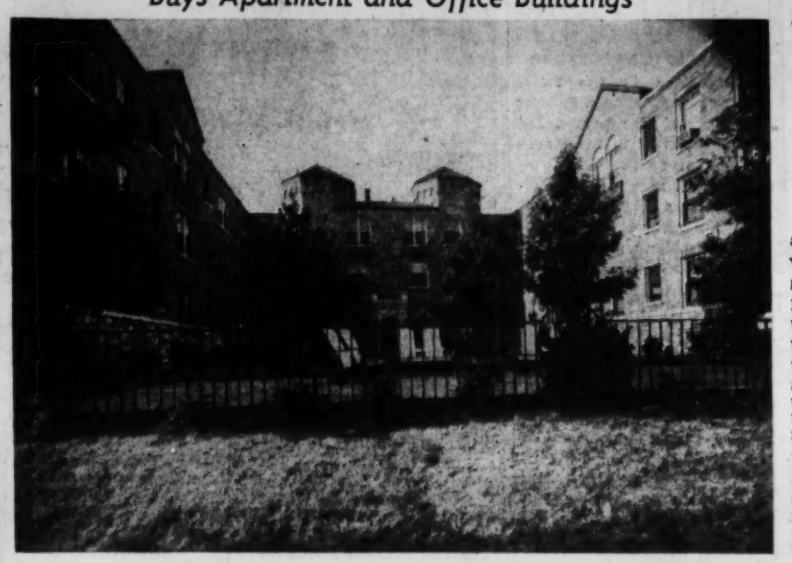

An extensive replanting resulted in this graceful, modern garden at the home of Mrs. Harold M. Baer on Alexander drive, Clayton. First an overgrown clutter of deciduous shrubs was removed and the resulting lawn was framed by flowing curves of gay-colored flower borders. The border enclosing the garden, and separated from the flower beds by a tanbark path, includes many kinds of trees and shrubs, including magnolias, hawthorns, crabs, ginkgoes, dogwoods, azaleas, rhododendrons, mountain laurel, pieris japonica, pyracantha and dwarf hollies. Among the deciduous shrubs are mock orange, Deutzia gracilis, flowering almond, snowballs and Euonymus alatus.

Dentist Buys Property on Watson Road

This home at 3465 Watson road, a six-room contemporary styled rancher on landscaped corner lot, with a four-room office area having entrance on Marquette avenue, has been purchased from Mrs. Florence Meyers by Dr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Kuntz. Kuntz, a dentist, is making alterations to establish his office in the Marquette wing. The Mehler Real Estate Company was agent in the transaction.

Buys Apartment and Office Buildings

Pictured above are the 72-Unit Sevilla Courts Apartment, at the southwest corner of Miami and Arkansas, and the Drozda Office Building, at Vandeventer and Chouteau, principal assets of Sevilla Courts Apartments, Inc., and the William Realty Co., acquired from the William S. Drozda Realty Co. by Glick Real Estate Co., Inc., which now owns more than 700 apartment units.

Recently Completed on Acre-Tract in Ladue

Residence at 29 Picardy lane recently completed by Arthur R. Darr, general contractor, for Mr. and Mrs. William D. Hemenway III. The first floor contains living room, dining room, kitchen, breakfast room, activity room and lavatory. There are four bedrooms and three baths on the second floor. William H. Mills & Associates were the architects. Hemenway is associated with The Insurance Agency Co.

72-Family Building In Big Deal

The highlight of real estate activity reported the past week was an announcement by Eugene Glick and Phil Schiffer, president and vice president of the Glick Real Estate Co., Inc., that they had purchased for their firm on behalf of the firm all of the outstanding stock of the Willann Realty Co. and of the Sevilla Courts Apts., Inc. from the William S. Drozda Realty Co.

The principal asset of the Sevilla Court Apts., Inc., consisted of a 72-family fireproof apartment building at the southwest corner of Miami and Arkansas. The property was built by the Drozdas and this is the first sale of the property since the building was completed in 1930. The apartment, one of the larger on the South Side, has an annual income of approximately $74,000.

The Willann Real Estate Co. had as its principal asset the Drozda Office Building at Vandeventer and Chouteau which also was built and held by the Drozda family.

The building consists of a two-story office building occupying a city block, fronting on Chouteau, Vandeventer and Hemp. It contains approximately 10 stores and 20 offices and has a reported gross income of $20,000 a year.

The Glick firm has dissolved the two companies and is retaining the Sevilla apartment property in its investment portfolio.

In the chain of closing the deal, the Glick interests have resold the Drozda Office Building to Sam Morris, general agent for the Union Central Life Insurance Co. Morris gave as part payment for the office building, a large 6-family apartment house at 4530 McPherson.

The Glick interests then sold the apartment to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Haile.

In conjunction with the purchase of the Sevilla Apartments new mortgage financing amounting to $380,000 was placed on the property. This financing was obtained from the Home Life Insurance Co. through their local representatives, Shaw, Brickler & Coleman.

Legal details were handled by the firm of Shifrin, Shifrin and Agatstein for the Glicks. The Drozdas were represented by their attorney, John Vogel. The entire deal was closed at the St. Louis Title and Abstract Co.

N. M. Glick, chairman of the board and founder of the Glick Co. said that with the acquisition of the Miami building the firm now owns more than 700 apartment units.

Home Buyers Advised Not To Over Buy

Recent moves in the real estate market point up some advice for those interested in buying a home—don't delay too long and don't overload with installment obligations, Robert J. Sargent, president of the St. Louis County Real Estate Board, said yesterday.

Credit curbs by the Federal Government and the slight tightening of the supply of mortgage money generally lead to those conclusions, Sargent added.

"The Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration a few weeks ago reduced the maximum length of home loans which they will insure or guarantee from 30 to 25 years and raised the down payment requirements by 2 per cent," he explained. "This means, of course, that the home buyer must put down a larger sum upon purchase and make bigger monthly payments than he did formerly.

"Because many builders had submitted applications to these agencies before the deadline, some houses covered by these are still on the market and may be sold under the more liberal terms in effect before the tightening. The supply of them is dwindling, however.

"Moreover, returns from a recent survey for the Mortgage Council of the National Association of Real Estate Boards show that lenders are becoming more 'selective' in making home loans. In other words, they are scrutinizing the applicants more closely on their credit standing. Applicants with heavy installment obligations more frequently are being rejected. Therefore, it is advisable for potential home buyers to think twice before overloading themselves with purchases on the installment plan," Sargent concluded.

Metal Goods Corporation Completes Major Expansion Program on Page Boulevard

Project Includes Three-Story Office Building and 106,000 Sq. Ft. Warehouse on 60-Acre Tract—Doubles Original Space.

Open house was held Wednesday to celebrate completion of a major expansion program for Metal Goods Corp., consisting of a new three-story office building and 106,000 sq. ft. warehouse on a 60-acre tract at 8800 Page boulevard.

The project was designed by Syl G. Schmidt & Associates, architects and engineers, and completed by Fruin-Colnon Contracting Co. The design incorporates extensive use of metal building materials distributed by Metal Goods Corp. The siding on the warehouse building is of aluminum and is said to be the largest all-aluminum construction in the area.

The expansion program was necessitated by a 400 per cent increase in the company's volume during the last ten years, according to Robert E. Grote, president of the company.

The warehouse, which has twice the capacity of the firm's original facilities, still in use at 5329 Brown avenue, provides space for storage, materials handling equipment and metal cutting facilities. A rear loading area accommodates four freight cars and 15 trucks simultaneously.

The second floor of the office building serves as headquarters for the entire firm, which also operates offices and warehouses in Kansas City, Denver, Tulsa, Wichita, Dallas, Houston, Memphis and New Orleans. Sales offices for the St. Louis district are on the first floor.

The third floor of the office building accommodates the controller's office and his staff; credit office, accounting division, IBM section, traffic and payroll departments.

The warehouse is illuminated by high-intensity, color-corrected mercury lights, which cast a natural light over a wide area. This is believed to be the first installation of this type in the St. Louis area.

Metal Goods Corp. is a distributor for the Aluminum Co. of America, American Brass Co., Armco Steel Corp., International Nickel Co., Sawhill Subular Products, Inc., Parker Appliance Co., Imperial Brass Manufacturing Co., H. M. Harper Co., Tube Turns, Inc., and many other companies.

Bank Adding New Drive-In Facilities

Expansion of motor banking facilities at the Bank of St. Louis, involving extensive modernization of the first floor exterior at the rear of the bank on Lucas avenue at Ninth street, was announced yesterday by Arthur Blumeyer, president. Construction will be started soon and is scheduled to be completed in 90 days.

Architectural design is by the Bank Building & Equipment Corp. of America.

Plans call for five new modern drive-in and walk-up windows on Lucas avenue, and the integration of the new facilities into a modern facade of limestone blocks and granite.

Blumeyer stated that the increasing use of the bank's present drive-in banking window in the same location necessitated the expansion.

The drive-up stations, of latest bay-type design and featur-

Volume of New Building for the Year Expected to Approach 42 Billion Dollars — Four Billion More Than in '54 Is Forecast.

Both immediate and long range prospects are for continued volume of construction at record levels, H. E. Foreman, of Washington, D.C., managing director of the Associated General Contractors of America, reported to a meeting of the governing and advisory boards of the A.G.C. the past week.

The volume of new construction for the first eight months of this year was 13 per cent ahead of the same period last year, Foreman said. Volume of new construction for the year is expected to approach 42 billion dollars, about four billion dollars more than the record level reached in 1954. The total volume of construction activity, including maintenance and repair, will amount to about 58 billion dollars this year, according to the report.

"While new economic records have been established this year for the gross national product, for personal and disposable personal income, consumer spending, employment, and industrial production, the increase of construction this year over last year exceeds the increase of all other major industries," Foreman told the A.G.C. boards. "Construction has been a powerful force in the nation's economic activity. It accounts for more than one-seventh of the gross national product."

Many studies indicate bright long-range prospects for the construction industry, he said. As an example, he cited a recent joint survey by the Departments of Commerce and Labor which placed state and local public works needs at 200 billion dollars during the next 10 years.

"The head of the New York Stock Exchange has predicted that industry will need to spend 375 billion dollars by 1965 to keep abreast of the demands of a growing economy," he continued. "The Twentieth Century Fund in its latest survey of America's resources and needs anticipates higher and higher construction levels for at least the next five years. The urban renewal program already represents a billion-dollar-a-year potential, and estimates of requirements to eliminate city blight run as high as 10 billion dollars for 10 years."

Building, highway and heavy engineering activities are all showing increases, Mr. Foreman reported. Government estimates place private building construction 22 per cent higher this year than in 1954, while public building activities are 7 per cent greater.

The A.G.C. officials said construction materials generally are in adequate supply, although deliveries of cement and steel have slowed down in some areas due to the record level of activity in construction and in the entire economy. Additional expansion programs have been announced by the cement and steel industries.

The three-day A.G.C. mid-year board meeting was attended by 400 construction leaders from all parts of the country. They represented more than 6400 member firms of the A.G.C. which annually do more than 80 per cent of all contract construction in the United States, and a large amount of work overseas as well.

$2,500,000 Home Center For NAHB

By ROBERT F. MORISON

WASHINGTON, D. C. (UP)—The National Association of Home Builders opens a new $2,500,000 home this week. It hopes it will become the housing center of the country.

Six floors of the modern eight-story building, just four blocks from the White House, will be devoted to displays of building products and services available to the industry.

The national housing center will be formally opened Monday. Vice President Richard M. Nixon will attend.

N.A.H.B., which claims 33,000 member builders who do 85 per cent of the residential building in the country, also will play host to a delegation of 10 Russian builders, architects and city planning experts. They plan a month-long tour of the country as guests of the home builders afterward.

The housing center has the latest in building equipment, including lighting equipment, hardware for doors, windows and cupboards, non-skid bathtubs, storm windows and doors, and a new, integrated kitchen complete with walls, cabinets and appliances.

Open to the Public.

The displays, space for which will be rented by manufacturers, will be open to builders and architects and others in the industry, as well as the general public.

The displays, an official explained, are so laid out that they can be seen from all sides.

On the sixth floor, a library will be available for industry men and the public, too, where the lastest publications and in-

Dream House Grows From Small Home

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER

Honeymoon budgets rarely can stretch far enough to cover the house of your dreams. But there is a way to make such dreams come true.

It is not necessary to compromise on a skimpy house and face the prospect and heartaches of pulling up roots and moving when your family outgrows your budget house.

Why not plan a house that can grow?

The House of the Week, design T-500, shown on this page, is a house that can grow as your family grows, as your job grows, as your savings grow. It can be started as an economical two-bedroom house with one bathroom and can be expanded to three bedrooms, two baths, family room, covered porch, hobby shop and garage.

Each addition is planned to be made with a minimum amount of revisions to the existing house.

Long, low horizontal lines of the exterior give a look of luxury to this house. A distinctive double front entrance door, with a five-foot opening and adjoining glass sidelights, virtually speaks a welcome.

A smart and gracious front entrance foyer is nine feet wide and opens directly into the living room. From the foyer, a visitor gets a full view of the 12-foot-wide bow bay window in the living room.

Another bay window spreads cheer in the kitchen.

A pass-through server between kitchen and the living-dining area is an unusual feature. This can be used as a snack bar when entertaining.

The kitchen of this House of the Week is a pride and joy for any woman. Its 19 feet of length provides for every modern appliance and convenience, including 24 feet of counter top and cabinets. A built-in refrigerator is envisioned. A no-stoop oven, built into the wall, is specified with a separate counter-top hot-plate unit.

An ample breakfast space is embraced in this kitchen, and direct access to the cellar for more permanent storage is a definite advantage.

Merging the kitchen with a family room is an interesting phase in expanding the house. This provides a supervised play area for small children, where they can be watched from the kitchen. It's a room for relaxing, for games, for sewing, for informal entertaining, or for large family dining.

Closets for miscellaneous storage are planned to keep the family room shipshape. There is a built-in television space to afford a view of the screen from the kitchen as well as from the family room.

Sliding glass doors of heavy plate glass framed in aluminum, open the family room to a covered rear porch. This gives the room virtually a wall of glass facing the garden. The sliding doors are equipped with screens.

The do-it-yourself movement is recognized by this plan with a good sized shop provided at the end of the garage. Here is a home workshop that is not hidden in a dark corner of a cellar. Well lighted, well ventilated and dry, this is a shop that answers the hobbyist's dreams.

A folding wall joins the shop with the garage to give you space for larger projects, such as cutting plywood. Brother, you could build a boat in this shop.

And the garage itself has space for a workbench and garden tool storage. A panorama window in the garage means this place won't be an untidy tunnel.

Direct access is provided to the shop and garage from the family room—a handy way to get into the house when you drive home in the rain.

Designed by Rudolph A. Matern, nationally recognized authority on house architecture. The House of the Week in any of its stages is a model for circulation. Its final plan with five exterior access doors and spacious entrance foyer make circulation through the house a noticeable pleasure.

An unusual aspect of this expansion idea is that the house actually comprises four distinct plans, any one of which can be built without thought of expansion.

Plan 1, the basic two-bedroom house, covers an area of 1246 square feet. Plan 2, a three-bedroom and one-bathroom house, covers 1454 square feet. Plan 3, comprising three bedrooms and two bathrooms, brings the area up to 1521 square feet. Plan 4, adding the family room and shop to the three bedrooms and two bath layout, results in a house of 1762 square feet. The garage (part of Plan 4) adds 217 square feet.

The reason the garage is listed separately is that it figures at a lower rate in estimating construction costs.

In addition to these four ways to build this house, various other combinations could be worked out. For example, a comfortable retirement house might include the basic two-bedroom unit with the garage and shop and a breezeway in place of the family room.

Architect Matern suggests conventional frame construction with mineral wool insulation throughout. He has pitched the roof just enough to permit the use of asphalt shingles for economy. This pitch also provides for a ventilated, underroof space in which oversize louver openings are recommended to insure summer comfort. White or other light colored asphalt shingles also are recommended for their reflective insulating value.

Stone is used on the front of the bedroom wing to carry out the horizontal motif. A masonary planting box stretches from the entrance to the garage under the kitchen bay window. Vertical siding of cedar or redwood is suggested for this part of the facade.

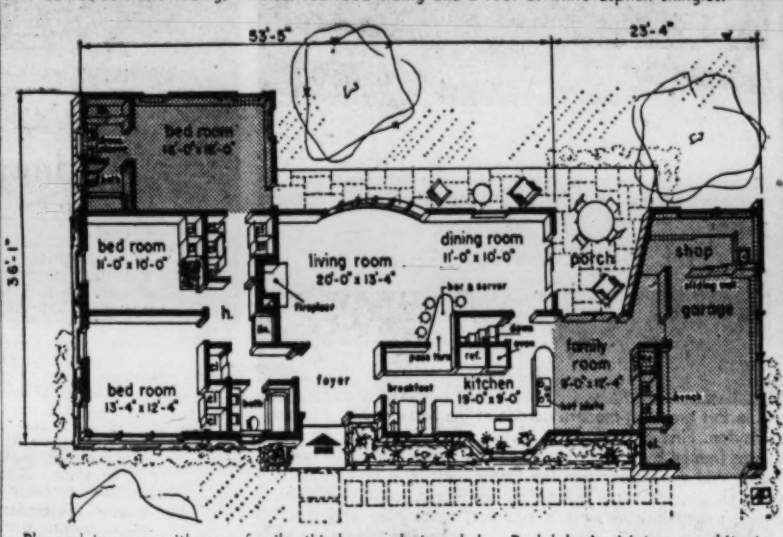

A distinct feature of the design is the wide roof overhang which is carried out all around the house—even at the gable ends.

A study plan for this home (T-500) may be had for 35c by addressing the BUILDING EDITOR of the ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH, ROOM 602, 1111 OLIVE ST., ST. LOUIS 1, MO. You can take this study plan to your mortgage lender or builder to get rough estimates of construction costs, after which working blue prints and specification sheets may be had direct from the architect if you decide to use the plan for your home.

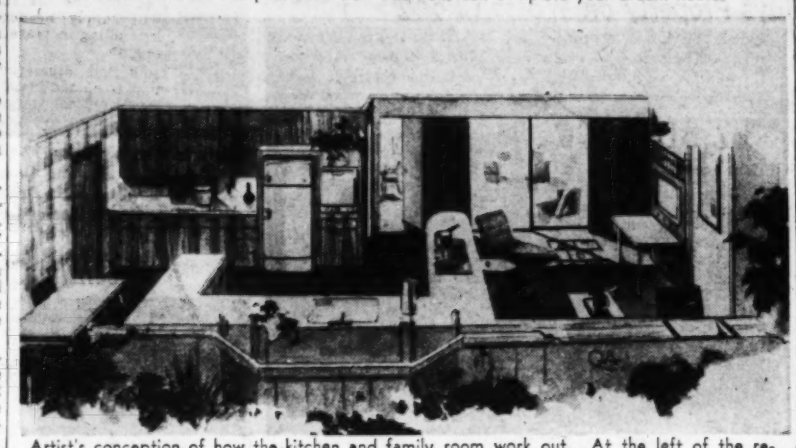

You Can Build This House in Easy Stages

Smart and colorful, this house combines stone facing, vertical redwood siding and a roof of white asphalt shingles.

Planned to grow with your family, this house, designed by Rudolph A. Matern, architect, can be started with two bedrooms and one bathroom, living room, dining room and kitchen. Shaded areas on the plan show how additions can complete your dream house.

Artist's conception of how the kitchen and family room work out. At the left of the recessed refrigerator is a pass through to the dining room. At the right rear are sliding glass doors opening onto a covered porch. Lower section of kitchen bay window is shown in the foreground.

formation will be kept on all phases of the housing industry in this country and abroad.

The sixth floor also will house a new products division where home equipment and supplies, not yet on the market, will be on display. This, too, will be open to the public.

One of the first items on view at the new products division will be a clip-on electric outlet which can be fastened to an electric cord and used as a power source. It has its own fuse so if overload develops, the entire electrical system in the house will not be blown out.

Expansion Plans.

N.A.H.B., whose national offices occupy the top two floors, now plans to greatly expand its activities for the benefit of the housing industry.

It will collect and compile information on the latest trends in architecture, building techniques, housing rehabilitation programs, foreign building and other subjects important to the industry and make it available at the center.

N.A.H.B. also plans to begin holding periodic conferences in the center's auditorium on all subjects affecting the home building industry. One of the early ones will be on the coming use of jet air transports and their effect on the location of housing near airports.

The idea for such a national housing center grew out of a visit to Holland about four years ago by top N.A.H.B. officials. They found in Rotterdam the B.O.U.W. centrum, or building center. They returned and began planning a similar center for this country.

The chief differences, however, is that the center here will be open to the public while the one in Rotterdam is strictly for builders and architects.

ing clear two-way communication, will be highlighted by sweeping, port-like canopies which extend over the parking lane to provide shade and shelter for automobile customers.

Supplementing the motor windows will be walk-up stations just inside the Lucas avenue entrance. These inside windows will afford quick, convenient banking service for walk-in customers. Another feature will be that access to the main banking room may be gained from this walk-up window entrance.

The rehabilitation project also includes a new mezzanine work area to be constructed in the northeast corner of the bank's first floor. This addition is being integrated into the overall plan and will supply needed facilities for handling increased customer accounts.

At the same time Blumeyer announced that as an additional service to customers the parking lot at 911 Lucas avenue, across from the bank will be for the sole use of customers of Bank of St. Louis and the Lammert Furniture Co., effective immediately.

Mortgagors To Convene In California

The forty-second annual convention of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America will be held at the Statler and Biltmore hotels, Los Angeles, Oct. 31 to Nov. 3 with an attendance of more than 2500 mortgage, commercial and mutual savings bankers, life insurance, title and trust company and real estate members from the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, Hawaii and Latin America.

Principal topics will be the outlook for a continued high rate of residential construction, the problems posed by the current tightening money market, the higher interest rate level, prospects for urban renewal and rehabilitation activity and the effect of the current liberal lending terms offered by the government-sponsored mortgage programs.

Speakers will include Paul M. Hoffman, chairman, Studebaker-Packard Corporation; C. R. Smith, president, American Airlines; Fred F. Florence, soon to be elected president of the American Bankers Association; Norman P. Mason, Federal Housing Administration commissioner; Thomas J. Sweeney, assistant deputy administrator, Veterans Administration; Arthur W. Viner of the Voluntary Home Mortgage Credit Program, sponsored jointly by private lenders and the Federal Government. The convention is believed to be the first of its kind ever held by a large trade association with the sessions split—the first portion in Los Angeles Oct. to Nov. 3 and the second portion, an adjourned convention session in Honolulu, Nov. 10 to 14.

The Los Angeles session will run concurrently with the sixteenth annual Exhibit of Building, Industry and Services, an annual home show for those who finance home building.

The last day of the convention will include the association's annual business meeting and election of officers with Lindell Peterson, president, Chicago Mortgage Investment Co., slated to be elected president. More than 40 members of the association's board of governors and regional vice presidents also will be named.

Lath, Plasterer Promoters Hear Progress Reports

Reports on progress made in promoting and improving use of lath and plaster since the founding of the St. Louis Lathing & Plastering Industry Council in March, 1953, were featured at a special meeting Thursday evening in Painters Hall, 2715 Union boulevard.

Industry Council officers and executives made the reports. Guests of the Council were members of AFL Plasterers Union, Local 3, and the AFL Lathers District Council of Greater St. Louis.

Colored slides were used to illustrate the reports. The brief program was followed by a question period and a social hour.

Speakers on the program included William H. Anderson, president of the Industry Council and business agent of Plasterers Union Local 3; Harry J. Hagen, vice president of the Industry Council and business manager of the Lathers District Council; Francis J. Stiens, a director of the Industry Council and president of the St. Louis Lathing and Plastering Contractors Association; Albert H. Meinert, executive director of the Industry Council and president of Plasterers Union, Local 3; Jerome F. Duggan, attorney for the Industry Council; and Bernard K. Schram, public relations adviser for the Industry Council.

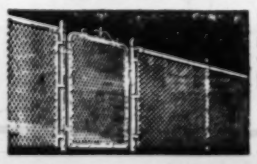

The Industry Council is comprised of the lathers and plasterers unions and the local contractors association. Its purpose is to promote more and better use of lath and plaster by educating the public, builders, contractors, and architects to the advantages of lath and plaster in both residential and commercial construction. The Council offers free consultation with contractors and architects on best use of lathing and plastering for economy, durability, attractiveness, and satisfaction. It also investigates complaints by home owners, architects, or contractors on lathing and plastering work and seeks to work out satisfactory settlement of any problems.

HOW TO STOP HOME HEATING WORRIES ONCE AND FOR ALL!

Repeat Performance Promised. Remember last March 25th when Olive Street, near Nineteenth, looked like this? When you had to work that old boiler overtime . . . and still couldn't keep warm? It can happen again! To make sure your family stays comfortable, more healthful through the cold months ahead, get in touch with your heating contractor now.
Replacing old unit with modern American-Standard Boiler means more comfort...clean, even, economical heat
Before you know it, you'll be firing up the boiler again . . . and maybe finding yourself up against the same impossible situation of trying to keep comfortable with a heating system that's either worn out or just plain inadequate for your home. In either case, you'll be in for another disagreeable winter of ills and high fuel bills unless you do something about it quickly.
And there's no better time than now. No person's better qualified to give you good, sound, practical advice on what's best for your home than your own local heating contractor listed below. He can replace your old hot water or steam heating unit with a modern, fully automatic, fuel-saving American-Standard Boiler that will make your home the most comfortable on your street. Get in touch with him without delay. You'll be pleasantly surprised to learn just how little it takes to end your heating worries once and for all.

This American-Standard Boiler is engineered to produce fast, clean, even heat...with greater fuel economy
Especially designed for small- to medium-sized homes, the smartly styled, cast-iron Empire Boiler is a complete gas heating unit. Sturdy, efficient, safe, it has the finest automatic controls obtainable. All joints are machine-ground to assure a close, gas-tight fit. Insulation minimizes heat loss, keeps jacket cool. Extracts maximum heat from fuel.
LOW COST, TOO!
Pay as little as $2.98 a week*
*PLUS INSTALLATION
Compact, Good-Looking American-Standard Boiler Makes Basement More Usable

An efficient, fuel-thrifty American-Standard Boiler not only makes your home healthfully warm and comfortable, but, because it takes up less space, it also gives you more room for everyday living. With this trim, compact boiler in your basement, you'll have plenty of usable room for extra storage, a game room, or a clean, bright home laundry.
AMERICAN-Standard Home Heating Units practically pay for themselves!
• In fuel economy
• In low operating cost
• In minimum maintenance
• In long years of service
• In greater comfort
• In more healthful heating
American-Standard Baseboard Panels and Radiators take little floor space—add smartness to rooms

While you're replacing your old boiler, go an important step further and modernize your radiators, too. Modern American-Standard Radiators and Convectors are extra-slim, extra-smart, and can often be fully recessed. For a truly "new look" and complete decorating freedom, ask your heating contractor about American-Standard Heatrim Panels, which inconspicuously replace ordinary wood baseboard around the outside walls of the home.
AMERICAN-STANDARD STANFLAME GAS BURNER IDEAL FOR LOW-COST CONVERSION

If your present boiler or furnace is still in good condition, yet you'd like to enjoy automatic gas heat, your local heating contractor can easily and quickly convert it with the Stanflame Burner. Recommended for all types of boilers and furnaces. Has a clean, steady high-efficiency flame.

Arena Show Bildors' Aid For Owners

By MEL DOERNHOEFER
Manager, Bildors Home Show

Supplementing the multi-million-dollar display of homes during National Home Week is a secondary, hidden market that contributes to the support of current high employment and the general economic prosperity we are enjoying.

Next year the show will celebrate its tenth anniversary and at this point has played host to thousands of St. Louisans, both home owners and home seekers alike, who see for themselves the component parts of today's modern home. At the Bildors Show every product that is found in today's home is presented side by side with its competitive mates and there the buyer or prospect can compare cost, advantages and beauty without the necessity of shopping around to all parts of town. The latest in appliances, furnishings and work savers are present for viewing.

Thousands of Ideas.

It is at the Bildors Show that improvement items to keep up and renovate the old are presented to the home owner. These home mechanics and do-it-yourselfers find thousands of ideas and products for their use at the Bildors Home Show.

Next year the tenth annual Bildors Home Show will open at the Arena on Feb. 4 and run through the twelfth. There one will see the products that will be used in the homes of the future.

Imagine, if you will, the scope of this market! Locally we expect to produce 12,000 homes this year. This means 12,000 bath units, miles of flooring, tons of cement, plaster, thousands of bricks, stone, millions of board feet of lumber, thousands of furnaces, water heaters, barrels of nails, miles of wiring and duct work. Then as the new owners take over, they spend about $1370 on further improvements—landscaping, carpets, furniture, ranges, ovens, refrigerators just to make a partial list.

Now that you have some idea of the number and quantity of this market's extent, project sample items of these under one roof and multiply by the number of brands in each category and you will have an idea of the products displayed at the Bildors Home Show.

Our ultimate goal is to show everything in every line, but space, of course, is the limiting factor. We also plan public service and civic features, and other interesting displays. Last year our sunken garden was a big hit, as well as the Hall of Progress of the St. Louis Home. We are now planning bigger and better feature displays for the coming year.

Ground Right

and to minimize the risk of deep winter freeze.

"Quick-effect" landscaping almost always leads to overplanting, with too many shrubs or trees spaced too close together, eventually creating that jungle effect. It is true that trees and shrubs do look a bit lonesome when the young plants are given all the room they are going to need at maturity. However, there is a good solution to this difficulty: Space the key plants in just the right positions, then fill in with other plants that may be grown for a year or two and then lifted and used to develop another area.

When spacing plants is is well to remember that small shrubs should be set from three to four feet apart; forsythias from four to six feet; lilacs from five to eight feet; large trees and shrubs, 10 to 20 feet; shade trees, at least 20 feet, although 40 would be better. Hedges of deciduous materials should have plants spaced from one to two feet, depending on their size, and evergreens need intervals of from two to three and a half or four feet.

One final suggestion: avoid overplanting the property! One of the commonest mistakes is to scatter trees, shrubs, evergreens and flower beds through the lawn. In the garden, as in the house, we now strive for that "uncluttered look." Remember that a broad, open lawn lends a feeling of spaciousness and gives depth and dignity to the setting of the house.

Winsome

One of the finest of fall-flowering shrubs that have been introduced in recent years is a winsome little plant known as Heavenly Blue Caryopteris, which in September produces quantities of flower spikes in richest blue. Since the plant rarely grows more than two or three feet tall, it may be planted as a background for perennials or used as a border planting for tall-growing shrubs.

How to Measure Floor.

To ascertain the number of feet of northern hardwood flooring required to cover a given area, it is necessary to find the number of square feet of floor space to be covered and add thereto a certain percentage depending on the face width of the flooring. For the popular standard face width of 2¼-inch, add 33⅓ per cent; for 1½-inch, add 50 per cent; for 2-inch, add 37½ per cent. It is good practice to add also 3 to 5 per cent for the customary waste in cutting and fitting.

Mercury Adds New Body Style

A newcomer to the Mercury line of cars for 1956 is this Custom "Medalist" two-door sedan. The "Medalist" is the lowest priced of the 13 new models offered by Mercury in the Montclair, Monterey and Custom series for 1956. It is powered by big, new high compression 312 cubic inch "Safety-Surge" engine. Gars went on display in dealer salesrooms Sept. 29.

Studebaker Style Lines Stabilized

By VIRGIL G. BAKER
Post-Dispatch Automotive Editor.

UTICA, Mich.—There's a new team hitched to the old Conestoga wagon these days. So, for the first time in many a prairie moon, the wheels the Studebaker Brothers set in motion 104 years ago look like they may have a good chance to roll right along through another century. It had looked, for several reels back, as if the Indians were about to overtake historic old Studebaker and send it hurtling over the cliff.

But a steady hand has been laid to the reins by somebody at Packard, since Studebaker and Packard were merged last October. The result is that, for the first time in about a quarter of a century, the Studebaker stylists haven't gotten a leg over the traces. The old Stogie wagon will be right in the middle of the road and going "hell bent for 'lection" when the starting gun cracks on the 1956 race to the gold in them thar customers pockets.

If there weren't any other reason for sharp competition in the low and middle bracket automobile market in 1956, the Studebaker-Packard Corporation's new Studebaker lines would put it there. Under Packard leadership the Studebaker stylists have stopped riding a pogo stick and you can lay money on it that 1957 styling in the lines will follow a "trend" set in the 1956 models, that what a man buys today in the Studebaker line won't next year be something strange, different, and totally obsolete by what comes out in 1957. Curiously enough, by putting "Studies" in the middle of the road style-wise in relationship to competitive cars, the new corporation has been able to retain a great deal of the "tangent styling" of recent-years Studebakers too; so that the trend, in addition to leading forward, also will prevent 1955 Studebakers from being entirely obsoleted. This has been done, in part, by introduction of two lines, one for the sports minded, one for the domestic, or average use minded buyer.

The company isn't ready to tell all, for another 30 days, while dealer showrooms are filled up over the nation, but the whole Stude-Packard line of cars and trucks was paraded before some 300 newsmen here from all over the nation who were informed that what you see you may write about.

Ex-race driver Bill Holland, with a newsman passenger, put one of the new stock Studes around the five-mile track at 114 m.p.h. in a slithering rain. It had been clocked at 121 m.p.h. the day before on a dry track. There are safety factors, too, including air-cooled nonfade brakes. And in a stock track test, one of the Studes did 21 miles to the gallon at 60 m.p.h.

Two automotive firsts are to be claimed in the Packard lines, more important of which is a non-slip differential, the other, standard in top cars, push-button shifting.

Stude-Packard President Jim Nance told newsmen the day for the manufacturer of a single car is gone, but that the corporation thinks there is a place in the market for a fourth company with a full line of cars, low to top bracket price and performance, and that Studebaker-Packard can be it. Ready for the first time since the end of World War II to produce, at a fast pace, as many cars as dealers can sell, the company will seek to add 20 per cent more dealers, go after a hefty slice of the market in the first quarter of 1956.

AMERICAN FAMILIES IN A BOOM YEAR

No. 1: An 'average' factory worker — see page 10

DOLORES DEL RIO:
AGELESS BEAUTY – SEE PAGE 30

AT WORK, Ty Greer smiles shyly but proudly across the handlebars of his newspaper-burdened bicycle.

THE PRESIDENT'S NEWSPAPERBOY

NEXT SATURDAY — October 8 — is Newspaperboy Day, honoring the thousands of youngsters who bring us our daily news. One of them is Ty Greer, son of a Denver automobile salesman. Here, City Editor Sam Lusky of Denver's Rocky Mountain News tells why Ty has one of the most thrilling jobs a boy ever had.

by SAM LUSKY

DENVER, COLO.

One Denver newspaperboy has a unique problem.

When he delivers the morning paper at a particular house on tree-shaded Lafayette Street here, he never just flips it expertly on the front porch and moves along.

Two men await him at the back door — Secret Service men. He halts his bicycle, walks over to them and hands them the latest edition of the Rocky Mountain News.

One of the men grins. "Ty, you're a couple of minutes behind schedule this morning. Sleep too late?" Then trained hands carefully go through the paper. "Okay, Ty. Thanks."

Ty Greer, the pride of his school, grins a freckle-flecked grin, glances briefly at the unpretentious residence at 750 Lafayette, hops on his bike and pedals away toward his next customer.

But the next customer won't be quite like this one. He is Dwight D. Eisenhower, President of the United States, vacationing at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. John Doud. Unlike other customers, for example, he doesn't have to push back the door and pick up his paper. The Secret Service takes it to him. And when Ty comes with his bill, piping "Collect for the News, please," the Secret Service or the housekeeper is there with the payment.

Everybody Likes His Customer

Ty sometimes has his own entourage to confront the Secret Service men. His younger brother, Timmy, 7, likes to tag along on his bike, hoping to get a glimpse of Mr. Eisenhower. And Scrapper, the exuberant Greer family mutt, used to make the route too, until Denver's new leash law stopped him.

But though Ty can't collect directly from his — or for that matter, anybody's — most famous customer, there are other compensations. Like the time Ty delivered the News at the moment a black limousine edged to the curb and a pleasant-faced man stepped out. He saw Ty and turned to the Secret Service men. "Is this the newsboy?" he asked. They nodded.

"Well," said the President of the United States, holding out his hand. They shook.

And what did Ty Greer, newspaperboy, say to him? "Golly, golly, well," he says now, "I just can't remember."

There are other mementos. Ty decided he wanted an autograph and told the Secret Service men. The next day, waiting for him, there was a personally written card: "For Ty Greer. Good Luck!" It was signed "Dwight D. Eisenhower" and "Mamie Doud Eisenhower."

Then, not long afterward, there was the green-tinted envelope that arrived at the Greer house six blocks away. In the upper left-hand corner was the simple return address: "The White House." Inside, the letter read, "Dear Ty: Mrs. Eisenhower and I signed the card for which you asked. This note is merely to thank you for the faithfulness and promptness with which you deliver our morning paper. With best wishes, Sincerely, Dwight D. Eisenhower."

Ty keeps both card and letter in places of honor in his scrapbook. He'll never forget his customer at No. 750. ■

"... thank you for the faithfulness and promptness with which you deliver our morning paper ..."

— DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER.

FAMILY AFFAIRS: Because everyone likes to know how the next fellow is doing, PARADE has just finished exploring the lives of five representative U.S. families in this boom year 1955. You'll enjoy knowing these families, comparing their situations with yours. Today, meet the Ray Bellinghams of Erie, Pa. — six persons living on $5,000 a year. Their story starts on page 10.

In tune with modern taste...

Pepsi-Cola is the light refreshment

BRIGHT PROSPECTS for a happy future! And their best insurance is the care modern people know how to take of themselves.

They've learned that watching their waistlines means they'll not only look better, but feel better—with every chance of living longer too.

So it's no accident that the modern, sensible trend in diet is towards lighter, less filling food and drink

And no accident that Pepsi-Cola is the modern, the light refreshment. It has merely kept up with modern taste.

Today's Pepsi-Cola is never heavy, never too sweet. It refreshes without filling. Have a Pepsi.

A 'BICYCLE' THAT WORKS

UNDER WATER

OUT OF WATER, bike looks a little like a guided missile with pedals. Straps fit rider's waist.

AZUSA, CALIF.

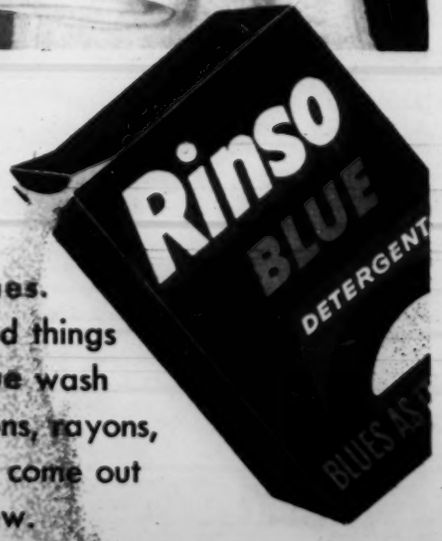

A striking sight currently to be seen here is the odd contraption pictured on these pages: a "bicycle" for use on, or under, the water. Harnessed to the saddle, Bill Tannehill here turns the pedals to spin the twin propellers in opposite directions, producing surprising speed (about four times that of a man wearing swim fins) with very little water disturbance. The bike can be used with or without an aqualung, tilts so the rider can travel in any position or even "tread water," leaves the rider's arms free. As a result, it's a "natural" for skin divers. More statistics: It weighs 19 pounds, is offered for sale by a local company at $225 and is known, formally, as Aqua Ped. ■

Asks reader Smith (l.): So some patients 'drive doctors crazy'? Well, look at . .

THE DOCTORS WHO TRY OUR PATIENCE

by HANNAH SMITH

MONROVIA, CALIF.

Most doctors are wonderful people. If they weren't, medicine would not occupy the position it does today as the most honored of professions. Nearly all the doctors I have met have served me and my family generously and intelligently. I have seldom felt overcharged.

However, when I read The Patients Who Drive Us Crazy, by Dr. Keith Hammond (PARADE, July 31), it occurred to me that there are several kinds of physicians who drive me (and, I feel safe to say, my fellow patients) crazy, too.

Dr. Hammond, in describing such patience-plaguing patients as the Non-Co-operator, the Worry Wart and the Alarmist, declared that he was trying for better doctor-patient relationships. So am I. Here are my pet peeves among physicians:

DR. JOYBOY, THE OPTIMIST

Dr. Joyboy is the doctor who just can't believe that there's really anything seriously wrong unless you're bleeding all over his rug — or unconscious. He always listens to your symptoms with a vague, incredulous smile, nods and writes a prescription for iron tonic.

Buck up now, he always seems to be saying, pretty big fuss to be making about a simple little pregnancy (sprained ankle) (touch of tetanus), isn't it?

I realize a doctor sees cases of intense suffering and hopeless illness. Just the same, it's maddening to be treated like Malingering Mattie, all because you could make it into the office without stretcher-bearers.

A year or two ago, I finally read one too many of those magazine articles sternly commanding me to have a complete physical every six months. I made an appointment. That stopped Dr. Joyboy cold.

"You feel all right? Appetite good? No fever, spots in front of your eyes, dizziness?"

"Well, no, but this article . . ."

"Get eight hours' sleep a night?"

". . . said that every woman over 30 should . . ."

"Article! Oh, yes. We get you article-readers in here all the time. Oh, well," he sighed, reaching for his thermometer, "I'll take your temperature . . ."

THE TRIPLE TESTER

This is the doctor who won't make the simplest diagnosis until he supports his judgment with a battery of tests ranging from Wassermann to Stanford-Binet.

One summer we were going to take a vacation in Colorado at a spot where my husband had found fishing good but breathing difficult — he had had hay fever there. A few days before we were due to leave, he dropped in at a downtown doctor's office to ask if he could have a simple hay-fever remedy to take along. Nothing doing, said Dr. T.-T., have to run a few patch tests first . . .

The tests, of course, would have taken so much time we probably never would have made it to Colorado that summer, anyway. Fortunately, the corner pharmacist didn't require a blood count to hand over a bottle of anti-histamine tablets.

THE JARGON JUGGLER

Here we have the offspring of a union between a medical dictionary and a Latin lexicon. He feels it wouldn't be professionally wise for him to disclose that you've come down with a common cold; he likes these things kept a little mysterious.

A friend of mine had a slight skin rash she couldn't identify, so she went to a real Jargoneer. He scowled at the rash, went "Hmmm" several times, then made a couple of sorties into his lab while Dora wondered if they'd let her in at Carville or Molokai Island. Finally he came back and informed her impressively that she was suffering from an Indeterminate Dermatitis. After she had sent him her check for $10 and was sitting at home idly scratching, it suddenly came to her what an Indeterminate Dermatitis was — a slight skin rash she couldn't identify. You see?

"Let me be the judge of that, Madam," one doctor told me, very kindly, when I said I thought the swelling under my child's ears was mumps.

"He was playing with a boy who — "

He held up his hand. "Please!"

I slunk back into my chair feeling like a Mount'in Woomàn who'd jest toted her young un down to the Clennic.

This kind of cryptic behavior would make a Worry Wart out of Scattergood Baines. Dr. Hammond suggests that you flatter your doctor by letting him take the first crack at making the diagnosis. I'd like to suggest that there are a few doctors who would have been better off in the field of veterinary medicine — where their patients can't talk back, even if the doctor is putting a splint on the right leg when it's the left one that's broken.

THE MAN WITH THE SAW

Dr. Hammond objects on patients who shop around, but there is a certain kind of doctor who creates these "shoppers." Some doctors prescribe surgery so frequently — I can think of one in our community — that they get to be known as "cutting doctors." Dr. Hammond says the average doctor does not risk the life of a patient by submitting him to unnecessary surgery. Unfortunately, there aren't too many ways to be sure you're getting an "average" doctor. In a metropolitan area, perhaps you are forced to choose on the vaguest hearsay, or even from the telephone book.

If a doctor told me I needed major surgery, I think I'd join the "shoppers." After all, Dr. Hammond, if someone told you your car needed a $300 overhaul, you might check at another garage. And you could always, in case the overhaul wasn't successful, get another car.

AND SOME OTHERS

There's Dr. Hyde, the man who can't be reached. He never makes home calls, never takes night calls and is always "in surgery" the rest of the time.

There's the Over-Specialized Specialist. No matter what ails you, he takes the stand that "this is bigger than both of us" and parcels out your symptoms and—er—specimens among various offices all over the city.

But in spite of these gentlemen — who fortunately are in the medical minority — I have not yet joined Dr. Hammond's last category, Those Without Trust. I like, respect and trust the medical profession.

There is just one other lad I could do without. I shall call him Dr. Shakespeare. He is the one who keeps publishing that article in popular magazines:

"At the SLIGHTEST CHANGE in a mole, a freckle, your elimination, your heartbeat, your respiration, your appetite, RUSH to your physician for a COMPLETE PHYSICAL EXAMINATION . . ."

Because if I do, you know who I'll get. Is Dr. Joyboy in this morning, Nurse? ■

American Families in a Boom Year—First of a new series

THE BELLINGHAMS of Erie: Parents and Nancy, center; twins on ends, Patty in front.

FACTORY HAND'S FAMILY:

SIX PEOPLE, $5,000 A YEAR

by SID ROSS and ED KIESTER

ABOUT THESE "BOOM" FAMILIES...

The U.S. is riding high. The Commerce Department and the Census Bureau report the economy setting new records in every field: more jobs (65,500,000, at last report); higher national income ($292 billion a year); higher average family income ($5,350 a year). Three out of five American families own their own homes; the number with autos, TV sets, home freezers and automatic washers grows daily.

These are impressive statistics, but how do they translate in human terms? Is the average American really living better than ever? Is he happier? Is he living in fear of a crash, or cringing before the atom bomb? Just how does America live in the boom year 1955?

To find out, PARADE moved in close to five typical American families. Beginning today, this exhaustive research brings you five portraits of Americans in what — the figures show — is "the best year of their lives."

ERIE, PA.

RAY AND HELEN Bellingham nourish an uncomplicated dream. Ray, a former high-school and semi-pro basketball player, is a lean 6'8" tall, and, in an ordinary bed, his feet flop over. He has a strenuous job, operating a 72-inch boring mill (which bores motor and generator frames for locomotives) at General Electric Co.'s locomotive and car equipment department here, and he needs his rest.

The solution so far has been to push twin beds together, allowing him to sprawl diagonally across them. But this hasn't been too satisfactory, since it means Helen is wedged into an upper corner of one bed. Someday, Ray would like to have a king-sized bed — one tailor-made for his long frame.

The Bellinghams, however, have four children: the twins, Tommy and Susan, 11; Nancy, nearly 7, and Patty, 2. That means six hungry mouths and six winter coats and, for some reason, an uncommonly large number of dental bills.

Last year Ray's gross income at GE was $5,106. He stretched it to $5,263 by working for a construction company during his vacation. This year he should earn about the same amount. If Ray allowed Helen to work, as 20,000,000 U.S. women do, the total would be higher; as it is, their family income is just below the national average. And while this may keep a family in winter coats and hamburger and dental fillings, it doesn't buy too many extras.

Looking closely at the Bellinghams, you find that they are just about average in more ways than income. They live comfortably, but by no means luxuriously, in a seven-room house with new siding and an almost-new roof. The furniture is modest; the mortgage is half paid off; and the family car, a four-year-old Mercury, has 24,000 miles on the speedometer. There is even enough money for Susan to take piano lessons.

They complement each other neatly, towering Ray and pert Helen. Ray, 38, is silent, shy, graying a little at the temples and somewhat of a worrier; Helen, 32, is blonde, pretty, the talker in the family, ever the optimist. Their family, slightly bigger than the national average, is their life. Like the average man, they prefer family fun to expensive recreation.

The Bellinghams also have the average man's weakness for going into debt. They try to be sensible about it, which is one reason Ray's airport-sized bed stays just beyond reach. When the TV set is paid off in a few months, there will be an automatic washer and dryer, and then a kitchen range. "One or two things on time at a time is plenty," Ray says. "We don't want to go overloading ourselves."

The Bellinghams began buying more and more things on credit just after World War II, about the same time millions of other families in their income bracket started buying on time. Many economists think this liberal use of credit, more than any single factor, is responsible for the great postwar spending spree and business boom. The nation is carrying a staggering debt load — $710 billion, plus $23 billion a year just for interest. And some students of the economy claim that half the families in the country are in over their heads.

AT WORK, Ray swings heavy generator frame off 72-inch mill. Ray has nearly 20 years' service with GE.

Keeping their heads above water hasn't been easy for the Bellinghams. They have a standing joke that the last thing Ray bought for cash was Helen's engagement ring, a Christmas gift in 1941. The couple set the tone for their married life a month or so later by buying furniture — on credit. And although they made cash purchases later (more furniture and the family car), neither can remember a time when they weren't meeting payments on something. There was the new roof, then the gas furnace, then new linoleum for the kitchen, then a dining-room rug and draperies, then a bedroom suite for the girls, then the TV set. And all that time, of course, the mortgage — $5,000 spread over 20 years, breaking down to a $125 payment every six months plus 5 per cent interest.

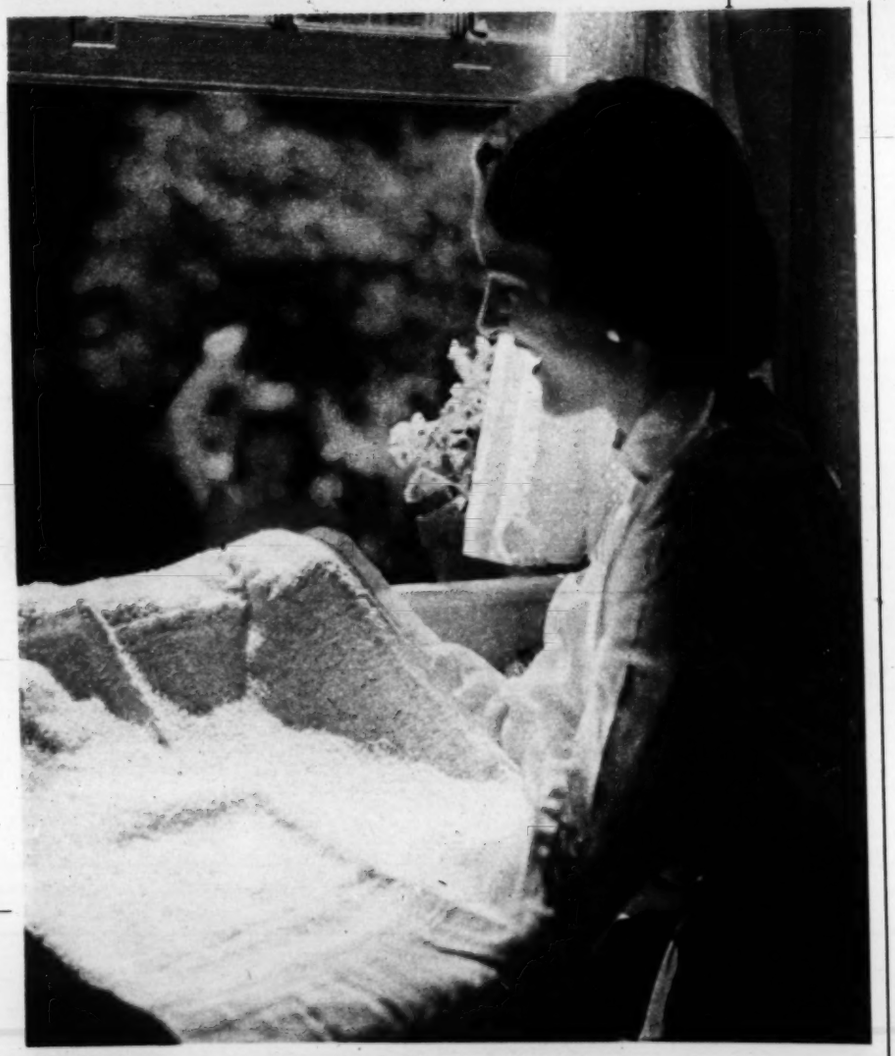

"I suppose if we bore down and cut corners, we'd be a little better off," Ray muses, "but I don't go for that stuff. I want to see us live as nicely as possible and have some pleasure out of life."

Not bearing down means that Helen keeps no budget, partly because Ray's checks vary from week to week. Usually, he grosses about $108 or $110 and brings home between $60 and $70. Included in his deductions is a $25 deposit in the employes' credit union. Part of this goes into the family savings (including Christmas and vacation funds), and the remainder is earmarked for the mortgage payments.

The family's only established expense is $35 a week for food — somewhat more than the average family spends to eat. "People tell me that's extravagant," Helen says. "But there are six of us, and Ray's an awfully big eater. He gets up at 6 and doesn't leave for work until 7, and I swear he spends most of that hour eating."

All the Bellinghams are healthy — unless you count those dental bills, which cost them upwards of $80 a

"Window test" proves blue Cheer washes so white you can see the difference!

because only Cheer has the Blue-Magic whitener!

Cheer's Blue-Magic whitener is not just a bluing . . . it's more than a bluing . . . it's a new, better whitener for all your wash.

Seeing is believing . . . and you can see blue Cheer bring new whiteness to your wash. This "window test" proves it.

Simply take some of your Cheer wash to a window. There, in that true light (even on a gray day), you'll see a surprising new whiteness in all your wash. And on hardest-to-whiten things like nylon, you'll see a real difference in whiteness never possible before Cheer.

Of course, blue Cheer gets dirtiest work and play clothes spanking clean, adds new brightness to all colored washables, too. And you can be sure of the best results from the suds that give you a difference in whiteness you can see.

TRY CHEER in your automatic washer. Remember that blue Cheer has the active, hard-working kind of suds recommended by leading makers of automatics and preferred by 8 out of 10 women who own agitator automatics.

The modern suds for modern automatics

Fun as a family means recreation is cheap

year. "The dentist says both Susan and Tommy need braces," Helen sighs. "We can't afford them both at once, so I guess Tommy's will come first. He's getting self-conscious about his teeth." Just last month, desperately trying to cut the bills down, Helen started penalizing the children for not brushing their teeth. If they miss a brushing, they must wash and dry the supper dishes.

Even without a formal budget, Helen is a careful manager. Each year, Ray receives an income-tax refund ($131 this year) and the arrival of the check coincides nicely with spring clothing sales. "That money is marked for the children," Helen says. "We buy most of their clothes then. Ray and I don't buy too many ourselves. With his height, he has to have clothes tailor-made. His last suit cost $100."

Like many working families, they place great emphasis on doing things together, and recreation costs them very little. Winter evenings, Ray likes to tuck his long legs under him, squat on the floor with the kids and engage in a riotous card game. In summer the family often will "just sit and talk" in the cool of the four shade trees on the Fourth Ave. side of the house.

MODEST HOME is center of Bellinghams' quiet, busy lives.

And they take the average family's pleasure in watching TV. Not that they are wedded to the 21-inch screen; all are far too active for that. Helen is a PTA committeewoman, belongs to two social clubs, goes bowling. Ray, a director of the General Electric Activities Association and a Little League, is "a nut on sports."

"You know, we enjoy ourselves. We're wrapped up in our family," Ray says earnestly. "Things like a crash or a war seem far away. Oh, every now and then I get to worrying about a depression. But then there's unemployment compensation — that would last six or seven months. And with my service at GE, I'd be one of the last laid off and one of the first hired back."

Ray's GE career started in 1936, after his graduation from high school at Wesleyville, not far from Erie. Like most high-school graduates, Ray found jobs hard to come by; even with frequent layoffs (until 1940), he counted himself lucky.

In 1940, about the time the preparedness buildup gave Ray steady work, Helen Aline Sandstrom, an Erie girl, was graduated from high school. A year later she went to GE as a time clerk. She noticed Ray immediately — "You couldn't help it, with his height," she says. Ray noticed

SUSAN TALKS to friend on phone (she's at that age); Nancy giggles.

Helen, too. He shyly sent word through a friend that he'd like a date, but somehow Helen got the idea he was married, and brushed off the suggestion. It was several months before they got together. When they did, romance blossomed. They became engaged that Christmas and were married in Bethany Lutheran Church the next August.

The newlyweds were sitting pretty then. Ray was earning $80 a week, with overtime. Helen continued working almost until the twins were born, adding another $36 a week to the family income. Ray was two inches too tall for the draft and they were able to use his earnings to buy furniture and rent a house from a serviceman.

In 1945 they bought their own home, for $7,000. They put down $1,000 cash, paid off a second mortgage of $1,000 within a few months and mortgaged the rest. "You know, $7,000 is a lot of money and 20 years is a long time," Ray says. "But of course Helen wanted a home of our own and she bolstered up my courage. I'm glad, now."

The boom of wartime industry kept Ray working overtime late in the evenings, almost every Saturday and frequently on Sundays. "Even though my money doesn't go as far now, I'm better off now than I was then," Ray reflects. "I make more money — even if you figure overtime — and I have more time with my family.

"Every now and then, I get rough going at the shop and wish I were in business for myself — my own boss. Eight or nine years ago, I was thinking about opening a drugstore in the neighborhood, but Helen hesitated. Actually, I guess I was kind of relieved.

"At GE, we have a pension plan and hospitalization and family insurance, and it's a pretty good deal. When I'm 65, I can retire and have Social Security and a company pension."

Other Americans may be enjoying their best year financially, but not Ray. In 1953, when overtime was frequent, he grossed $6,314. Almost no one at GE works past quitting time now. "It would be nice if we could get some overtime occasionally," he says. "Or a general wage increase. That's about the only way I'd bring home more money."

His wage rate, under the incentive plan which applies at the GE factory, is a guaranteed $1.98 an hour. Beyond that, he is paid by the job, based on the length of time it takes to complete it and the time the company thinks it should take. It usually works out to about $2.50 or $2.60 an hour.

Ray's work day is much like any other factory hand's across the country. To start work at 7:30, he gets up at 6, puts on the coffee and then washes and dresses while Helen prepares both his breakfast and his lunch, which he takes along in a paper bag. He leaves the house at 7, kissing his wife ("Except when I drive him to work. Then he's too shy, with all those people getting off the bus") on the way out, and changes into work clothes at the plant.

His day goes quickly, and Ray doesn't find his work monotonous — only tiring. The generator frames are a heavy load to push around. His job calls for close precision and frequent inspection, and requires a rather high degree of skill.

The men get a 10-minute break, morning and afternoon, and a half hour for lunch. At 4 o'clock the plant whistle releases them, touching off a furious scramble of workmen and autos. By 4:02, Ray's department is empty. He walks home, stepping in the back door and kissing Helen almost precisely at 4:20. By 4:30, Ray is at the supper table, surrounded by his family — "where I'm happiest."

"Say," he said one evening recently, as Helen served the meat (usually steak on payday, but more frequently hamburger), "I was just thinking today. Maybe next summer we could look for a cottage to buy along the lake, to spend our vacations. Just one room and a screened-in porch and a kitchen — it shouldn't cost much. The land would be the most expensive part. We could pay it off on time."

From time to time since, the Bellinghams have talked, a little wistfully, about the cottage, but they haven't done anything definite yet — haven't even investigated the price. If they do, the cottage will be just one more obstacle to Ray's big bed. It is typical of them, and of millions of families with the same income and the same wishes, to dream a little and "not be too frustrated," as Helen says, if every dream doesn't come true.

The dimensions of the average American's life seem to stretch far enough to include a patch of blue sky, where someday he will get that oversized bed, or that cottage, or that new car. An economist might say that these millions of misty dreams have brought the U.S. its fantastic prosperity — and returned to the workingmen the "best year of their lives." ■

ABSTRACT DESIGN is worked up by commercial artist Vern Bain of Long Island. Water colors were used on all the cars, washed off later.

NOW IT'S

PAINTED CARS

As every motorist knows, 1955 is the year of the two-tone car. For decades the public resisted the prospect of such combinations as fuchsia-and-coral, beige-and-scarlet, turquoise-and-ivory; yet here they are, all around us. The other day, emboldened by the trend, the normally conservative Dodge people tried a further step: they asked three artists to decorate new cars, each in his own style, just to see what would happen. What happened appears on this page. It might not be to everyone's taste — but after all, if people can drive around in chocolate-and-shrimp, why not abstract fish?

KNIGHT IN ARMOR is displayed by its creator, fine artist DeWolfe Hotchkiss of Connecticut. He took his theme from the name of this particular line, the "Royal Lancer."

CARTOONS are brain children of New Yorker Gregory d'Alessio, shown beaming behind wheel. He tried, successfully, to make his characters give an impression of speed.

FUTURISTIC PLAYGROUND

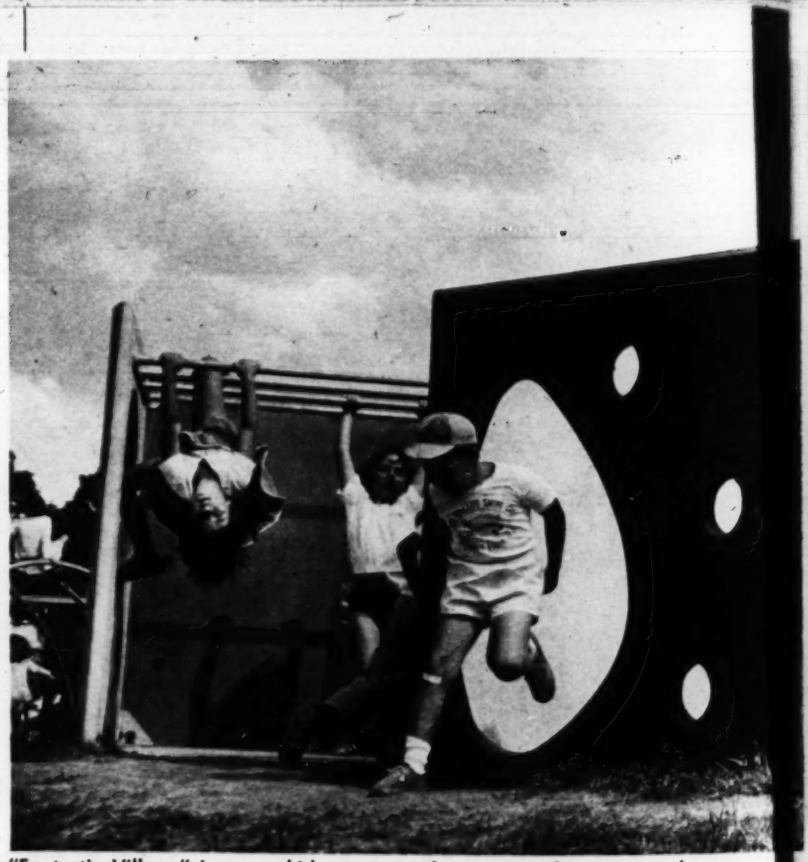

It lets kids 'create' while they play

FLORHAM PARK, N.J.

Squealing and scrambling, the children in these pictures are putting their okay on a radical new type of playground. Called "Creative Playthings" by its designer and "fun" by the kids, it covers a five-acre tract at the Sun Valley Swim Club here and is the only one of its kind in the country.

The aim of this substitute for swings, slides and seesaws is to let little imaginations run wild. Designer David Aaron points out that children quickly tire of conventional "thrill rides" because they get "nothing constructively stimulating" from them. Not so

Make your own INDOOR SHUTTERS

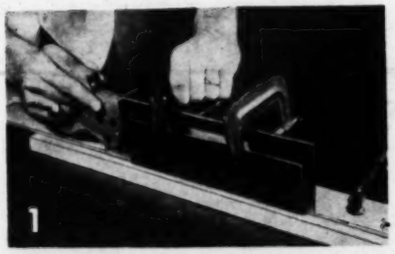

Interior window shutters are highly practical, as well as decorative. They can take the place of awnings (against the sun's rays) or serve as shades (for privacy) — and still allow ventilation.

The construction of the shutters shown above is simple in principle and will go like clockwork once you get onto it. Each shutter frame is made of 1"-x-2" lumber, with common half-lap joints at corners and a recess on all four sides. Into the recess is fastened the decorative material.

(If you choose a fabric for this material, pull it taut around panels of ⅛" hardboard and fasten it to the backs of the panels with masking tape so that it can be removed for washing.)

Stain and wax or varnish your shutters, and hinge them together in pairs to opposite sides of window frames. Measure carefully in determining shutter sizes so that each pair will meet in the exact center of a window when closed. ■ parade do-it-yourself

GROOVE, cut with backsaw, sets depth of recess in frame. Scrap clamped to board guides saw; scrap clamped to saw is depth gauge.

FINISH recess by trimming away stock between saw cut and inside edge of shutter-frame board. Rabbeting plane will do the job.

START corner joint by cutting off recessed portion at ends of side boards. Depth of each cut should equal width of a 1"-x-2".

HALF-LAPS are cut as shown in the ends of all boards in the framework. Be sure that you saw on the waste side of marked lines.

JOIN boards with glue and two screws at corners. Drive screws from back sides, countersink heads and conceal with wood putty.

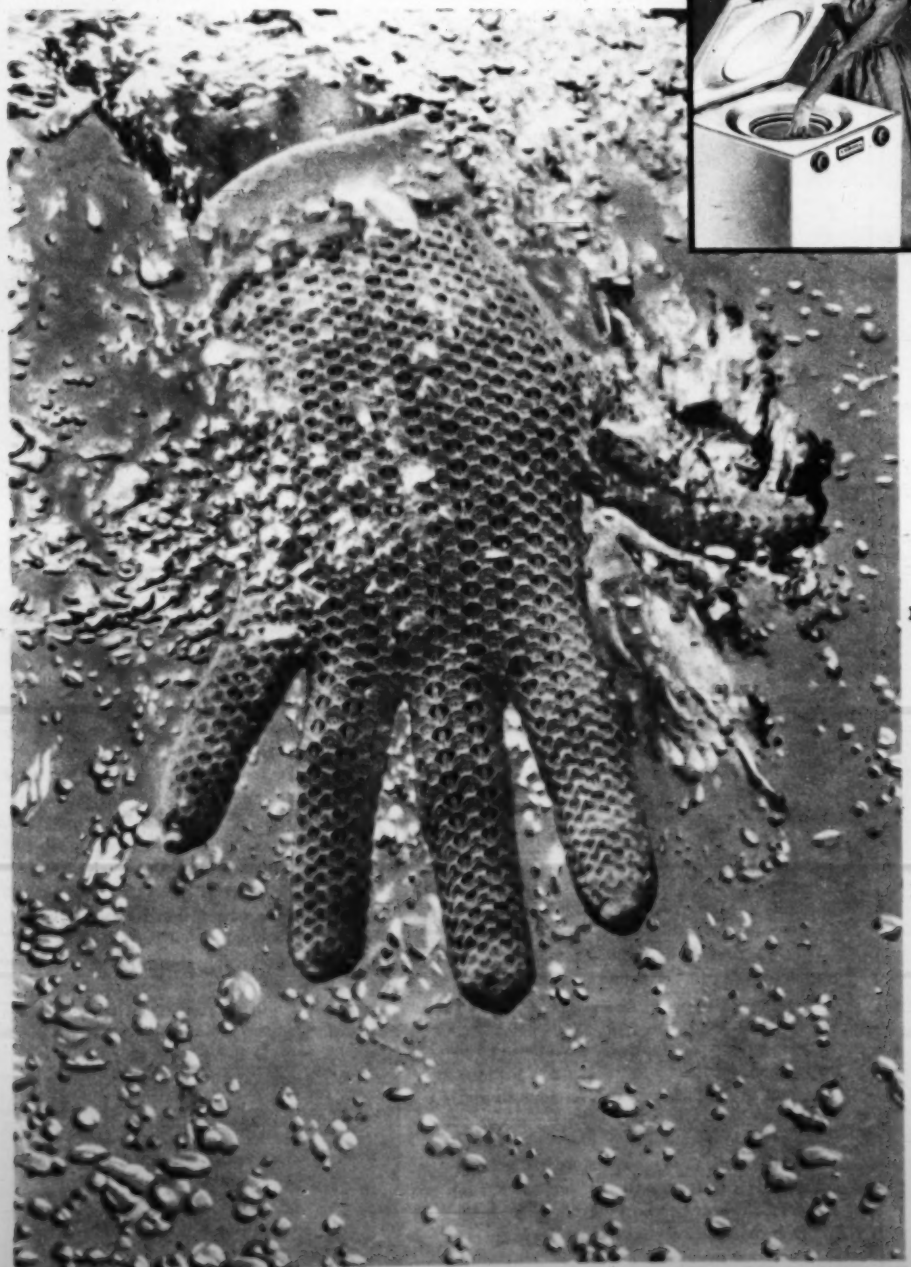

SCREEN MOLDING conceals edges of decorative material. Miter strips at corners, fit them into recess, secure with wire brads.

Suzanne clocks Young and Fair in early-morning gallop. During lean days she went back

While Suzanne Zinser was attending exclusive Skidmore College, she'd scamper out of her dorm at 5 each morning and rush to the nearby Saratoga (N.Y.) Race Track. There the demure coed walked "hots" — horses just back from a morning gallop. Suzanne cooled them down with a half-hour walk, got 50 cents per hot. With that money, plus dollars pinched from her allowance, she bought a racer for $1,000 and became the girl of her dreams — a horse trainer.

In any self-respecting "B" movie, Susie would have gone on to train a Kentucky Derby winner. Actually her horses run only in low-stake races, and they seldom win.

For Suzanne, however, there's no other business. Now 27, she gets along well with her male colleagues ("There are only a few jokes about my being a woman"), and her parents accept her odd calling good-naturedly. Victims of Nazi oppression, they came to this country with their daughter in 1940. Suzanne never showed much interest in her father's profession — he's an art dealer. She'd rarely given horses a thought, either, until one day, when she was 16, a horse-crazy girl friend dragged her out to Belmont Race Track, near her Forest Hills, N.Y., home.

"Don Meade was riding a horse named Tarpan," she recalls, "and Meade fell off. But Tarpan ran very proudly all by himself. It was thrilling. This, I said to my friend, is for me."

Her friend got married and forgot about horses, but not Susie. Once out of Skidmore, she bought Give Thanks, a 4-year-old maiden (non-winner), in 1950. In its second start for Suzanne, Give Thanks won, picking up a $1,400 purse and paying $47.30 on the tote board. (Suzanne, who dislikes gambling, had only $2 on her horse.)

During the following two years Give Thanks earned a measly $3,800. Suzanne finally had to put it on a breeding farm for nine months while she worked as a saleswoman. When her jodhpurs were jingling again, she took the horse out of the farm but couldn't take the farm out of the horse, which won but twice in a year.

Give Thanks went back to the farm for good and a weary Suzanne announced her retirement. But five days later she was back at the track, bidding for horses. Today she's training two horses for another owner, also owns a 4-year-old filly — Young and Fair — that won once in four tries, but is now plagued by assorted ills.

That hasn't discouraged Suzanne. "I don't dream about impossible things like Derby winners," she says. "I just want to learn about horse racing — for win or lose it's what you learn that really counts." ■

DAWN visit to Young and Fair's stall gets Susie a fond nuzzle. She is one of only a dozen women in the U. S. licensed to train race horses.

This girl is a HAPPY LOSER

Susie Zinser is one of the few women trainers of horses —and she wins even when her horses finish last to walking horses at $2 a day. "You can live on that," she says, "if you have to."

PHOTOS BY BEN ROSS

AFTERNOON finds Susie taking last look at Young and Fair as it trots to the post in a race at Jamaica, N. Y. (It finished fourth.) Susie goes on dates "like any girl, but I've no 'steady.' If I do get married, I'll give up the training of horses. A girl can't have two careers at the same time."

RHODE ISLAND'S GREEN: THE SENATE'S SPRYEST OLDSTER

Pausing in his morning dash up the Senate steps, Green smiles for camera.

by JACK ANDERSON and FRED BLUMENTHAL PARADE WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENTS

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Every day, except in Washington's worst weather, Congress' oldest member walks four miles to and from work. The trim, somewhat stooped figure of the senior Senator from Rhode Island, Theodore Francis Green, is a familiar sight as he moves at a brisk gait from his simple furnished room at the University Club to his quarters in the Senate Office Building on Capitol Hill.

On arrival, he spurts up flights of stairs at a rapid pace, scorning the elevators. He then puts in a full, active day as a lawmaker. Back at the club, he almost always changes for an evening of social activities. Besides being a bachelor — a social asset in Washington — he is wealthy, cultured and of a warm, gregarious nature that keeps his personal popularity high.

All of which is phenomenal when you consider that this spry little Yankee is 88 years old today. In America's history, only two Senators have held their seats after attaining their 88th birthday: Vermont's Justin Smith Morrill, who died in 1898 after a short tenure, and Virginia's Carter Glass, who succumbed in 1946 after long illness. Each was 88 at death. Green hopes to break all records by completing his present term — his fourth — in 1960 at the age of 93.

He may do it, too. His physical and mental faculties are the pride of the Navy doctors who check him twice a year, and the envy of much younger colleagues. He is not only a legislator but also an accomplished athlete, aesthete, physical culturist, elder statesman, globetrotter and authority on how to keep fit.

He Scoffs at Golf

What's more, he lists mountain climbing and tennis as his favorite active hobbies, and scoffs at golf with, "It's an old man's game."

True, it has been some years since he climbed a 15,000-foot mountain in the Swiss Alps. Nor does he get in as much tennis as when he first came to Washington at 69. For one thing, he doesn't have as much time: he is ranking majority member of the powerful Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the only committee chairman (Rules and Administration) from the entire Northeastern U.S.

He also had to give up high diving when he was 82 — on the advice of doctors and at the insistence of friends. Some of the latter, by the way, he has helped to bury after they succumbed to circulatory ailments Green feels could have been avoided.

Green has given much thought to keeping fit and living a long and useful life. As a small boy in the 1870s he was sickly — like his intimate friend, Theodore Roosevelt. Both men overcame their handicap by rugged living, sports and calisthenics. Ever since his days at Brown University, Green has kept his weight around 150 pounds.

His secret is moderation — in food, drink and physical activity. The Senator doesn't think much of violent week-end workouts. Instead, he supplements his daily "constitutional" with regular swims in the University Club pool in Washington or the YMCA gym if he's home in Providence.

As for food, he samples and savors whatever is placed before him. Abroad, other Senators may crowd their luggage with remedies designed to ward off unfavorable experiences with exotic vintages and victuals. Green refuses to worry. He eats moderately, drinks moderately, retires when sleepy and slumbers almost immediately.

At the same time, he enjoys unexpected diversions — for example, a flight in a Navy jet fighter. He likes to take off from the deck of an aircraft carrier, and has done so at the Navy's North Atlantic Air headquarters in Quonset, R.I., which he was instrumental in having established.

Rhode Islanders long have been used to seeing their senior Senator get things done, both politically and personally. In Congress he has been a tireless fighter for projects he believes in. One has been the Weather Bureau, long a Government "orphan" but particularly important to Green's Northeastern section since late-summer hurricanes have become so frequent there. Thanks to him, the Bureau this year received a $5,000,000 additional appropriation, which, his constituents feel, should justify its cost many times over.

Other Green-sponsored legislation includes a World War II bill which permitted the Government to sell silver, stored at West Point, which was desperately needed by war industry. He also has played an important role in foreign affairs. He is a Democrat, but he has supported the bipartisan foreign policy of the present Administration without partisan prejudice.

As for Green's devotion to physical fitness, Rhode Islanders have taken it for granted ever since 1932, when he won major office for the first time in running for governor. He was then 64, and had been in politics for a quarter-century, mostly on the losing side.

The opposition poked fun at him as an eccentric, an effete aristocrat, the descendant of colonial governors and Revolutionary War generals, who was trying to imitate Tarzan by going in for wrestling, gymnastics and high diving at an age when most people were preparing to retire. There also were jokes over a socially prominent man — with a long (and very successful) career in banking, corporate law and industrial reorganization — suddenly trying to make like a governor.

"Tarzan" Makes Good

But the Green forces make the jokes backfire. They took full-page newspaper ads filled with photographs of their man on the tennis courts, high diving and running cross-country. The electorate, duly impressed, voted Green in by a landslide. During two terms he was affectionately known at the State House as Tarzan. And when he took aim on the Senate in 1936, nobody in the enemy camp thought it prudent to raise the "age" issue.

Last year, as Green sought a fourth six-year term, the opposition did bring up the matter of his advanced years. Even worse, a whispering campaign had it that he planned to retire two months after winning reelection, to make way for a hand-picked successor. This angered Green.

In an election-eve television performance, the Senator brought a vigorous campaign to a climax by denying indignantly that he would ever seek office without completing the full term to which he was elected. Twenty-four hours later, after his foe had conceded defeat by an overwhelming margin, the delighted victor again went before the cameras to express his appreciation. He felt so exuberant about the people's confidence, he said, that he was thinking of seeking a fifth term in 1960 and perhaps a sixth in 1966, when he would be going on 100.

Time will tell about that. Meanwhile, Green knows his job and sticks to it. Right now, in the closely divided Senate, every vote is crucial. The Democrats can always count on Green to show up. Old-timers can't recall any major vote he has missed.

Over the years, Senator Green has overcome the hurdles of malaria, pneumonia and other diseases that sapped his strength in early life. At 88, he gives every appearance of being physically and mentally in the pink. He is respected and admired by Republicans and Democrats alike. Says one much younger colleague, "I'd gladly trade my age with Senator Green — if I could have his spirit." ■

GREEN THE SOCIAL LION

The story is told that the Senator, attending a Washington diplomatic reception, was asked where he was going next. Being scheduled for six parties that evening, he reached for his pocket appointment book. "I haven't even found out yet where I am now," he murmured.

Ginger Date Roll

This rich and handsome dessert is made without any cooking except a minute or two for the luscious sauce. It's just the thing for a "dessert and coffee" party

From Parade's Test Kitchen

GINGER DATE ROLL

- 1½ cups fine gingersnap crumbs
- ¾ cup finely cut pitted dates
- ¼ lb. marshmallows, cut fine
- 1 cup broken walnut meats
- ¼ cup strong coffee

Save out ½ cup gingersnap crumbs. Combine remaining 1 cup crumbs with dates, marshmallows, walnuts and coffee; mix well. Form into a roll about 3" in diameter; cover with the loose crumbs. Wrap in waxed paper or aluminum foil; chill several hours. Slice crosswise into pieces about 1" thick. Serve with Golden Sauce (below). Makes eight slices.

KITCHEN HINT

Dip kitchen shears in icing sugar (4X, 6X or 10X) before cutting dates or marshmallows.

GOLDEN SAUCE

- 1 cup sugar
- ⅓ cup water
- 2 egg yolks
- 2 tablespoons vanilla*
- 1 cup whipping cream

Boil sugar and water to 238°F. (or until the sirup forms "threads") in a small saucepan. Meanwhile beat egg yolks until thick and light. Pour sirup slowly on yolks while continuing to beat. Continue beating until creamy; chill. Add vanilla. Whip cream; fold in. Makes eight to ten servings.

TEEN TOPICS

The other day a reader wrote me that he had heard the expression: "You don't gain poise and graciousness until later years." Certainly the early years are those of learning manners, and no one expects social perfection in teenagers. But you still can note the manners of people whose behavior you admire, ask questions, read up on the subject. I am glad to see your letters broadening in scope.

Q. How should you begin and end a letter to your boy friend? — E.R., Georgetown, Miss.

A. The simple salutation "Dear John" is always best. The word "love" is used too loosely today in closing; I think we all should make an effort to preserve its real meaning by being conservative in its use. "Forever," "Eternally," "Devotedly" also are very strong terms to be used in more or less casual boy-and-girl letters. A girl does well to reply with restraint to a boy's love letter, and she should not initiate a too tender closing. Perhaps the best words to use are "Yours" or "As ever."

Q. What is the correct procedure for checking wraps at a formal dance? Please include the rule on tipping. — C.M.S., Detroit, Mich.

A. When wraps are checked separately, the girl is assisted by the attendant, and she picks up her check and leaves the tip — 10 to 25 cents, depending on the elaborateness of the place. The boy should make sure she has change for this purpose. Where there is one check room, the boy helps the girl out of her wrap, leaves his things and hers, picks up the check and takes care of the tip (25 cents for two).

Q. I am 14 and when I go to church or an athletic event there is a boy who likes to take me home. Most of the time I let him. When my mother finds out who brings me home I am punished. Should I let him take me or refuse? — D.H., Interlocken, N.Y.

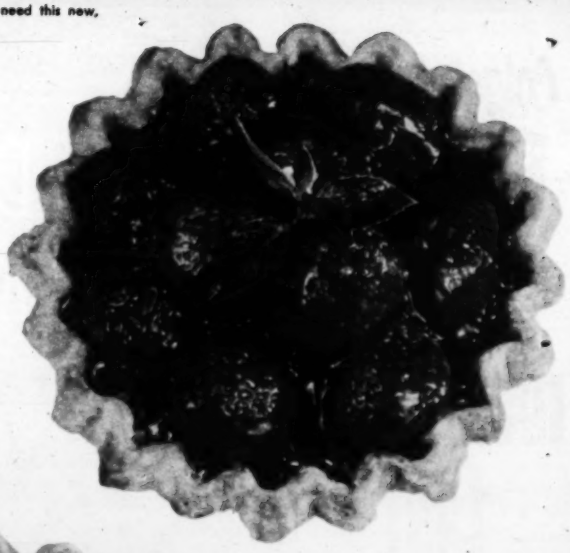

A. It is usual for boys and girls to walk home together after such occasions. Is your mother against your coming home with any boy, or has she something against this particular one? Perhaps if you ask her permission in advance, saying that you would like to bring the boy home to meet her, she will understand that you are not trying to be deceptive.

Q. How old do you think a girl should be to accept a cocktail at a dance? I have no parents to tell me. — B.A., Woodstock, Va.

A. I know that some parents do permit boys and girls in their late teens to have some alcohol on occasion, but I think it most unwise. The safe and sensible thing is for a teenager to refuse alcohol, even under the most protected circumstances. This is one social experience you can pass up until you are no longer a teenager.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS will be answered as space permits. (Miss Vanderbilt cannot answer letters personally.) Address: Miss Amy Vanderbilt, PARADE, 285 Madison Ave., New York 17, New York.

248 calories if sweetened with sugar

148 calories if sweetened with non-caloric Sucaryl

You can save a lot of calories by sweetening with Sucaryl

... and you can't taste the difference

Abbott Laboratories' new non-fattening sweetener—Sucaryl—opens up a whole new world of eating and drinking enjoyment to to the millions who must watch their weight.

This is improved Sucaryl: A non-caloric sweetener that tastes just like sugar, and gives a true sugar-like sweetness to drinks and foods. In normal daily use, improved Sucaryl sweetens without a trace of bitterness or aftertaste.

You can use Sucaryl everywhere: Use it in your morning coffee, on cereal or grapefruit. Use it in all recipes that call for a sweetener. Sucaryl can be baked, boiled or frozen without losing true, sugar-like sweetness. Look for the name Sucaryl on the label of prepared foods or beverages.

You don't need Sucaryl if you're not counting calories. Sugar is one of the most highly concentrated sources of quickly available energy, and should be retained in normal diets. If you are in doubt about dieting, ask your doctor for proper guidance.

To diabetics, Sucaryl opens the way to greater eating pleasure, and still lets you follow your rigid diet requirements.

Dolores Del Rio: Ageless Beauty

DEL RIO IN BRIEF:

She was born in Durango, Mexico, on August 3, daughter of a farmer. Christened Dolores Ansunsolo, she was convent-educated in Mexico City and at 16 married to Jaime Del Rio. The following year they visited director Edwin Carewe in Hollywood; through him, Dolores won a film contract and soon became Mexico's first big star. Her husband died in 1928. Two years later she married MGM art director Cedric Gibbons; they were divorced in 1941. Then, hurt by a series of "bad films," Dolores returned to Mexico City and formed her own movie company. Her last English-language picture was The Fugitive (1947).

PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

HOLLYWOOD.

"Señorita," I said to Dolores Del Rio, "you are without a doubt the most fascinating woman I have ever met. Come, let us go away to the mountains together."

"Señor," the world-famous Mexican movie star answered, "you must be a sophomore, maybe from the University of California?"

We were in the swank suite of a swank Beverly Hills hotel. For the first time in 12 years, the best-known Latin beauty in the history of motion pictures had returned to the scene of her great cinematic triumphs — What Price Glory? (1925), Resurrection (1927), Evangeline (1929), Madame Du Barry (1934) — and all Hollywood was discussing the near-miracle of her preserved beauty. (The photo at left indicates why.) She had been seen at a movietown wedding, which was the immediate reason for her return to the U.S.; now, estimates of her age, ranging from 50 to 70, were being hushed all over town.

Meanwhile, movie and television producers, struck by her still photogenic loveliness, were beating a hasty path to her quarters, offering roles, scripts and contracts.

In an effort to determine the secret of the Del Rio fountain of youth, I had obtained an interview on the delicate subject of age and beauty. Playing safe, I began with what I hoped would be considered good-natured raillery.

"There has been some ridiculous talk," I offered, "to the effect that you are really 60 years old."

Dolores Del Rio smiled. It was more than a smile. It was a sonata in two delightful movements. Her eyes flashed and her lips parted.

"Fantastic!" she exclaimed.

"The World Almanac," I continued, "has the nerve to list the year of your birth as 1905. How about that?"

Again the actress smiled, this time with tolerant amusement. "Ridiculous," she stated, "the things that are written about me. They say that I sleep 14 hours a day, that I dine on gardenia leaves, that I never smile because I do not want to crease my face. None of it is true. None of it!

"The truth is that I am 47 years old" — she looked out toward left field as she said that — "and I have been a movie star for 29 years. For the past 12 years I have made films in Mexico and Spain. I have my own company in Mexico City; we also do television. I am very proud, very happy when people tell me I look young. But I do not eat herbs or magic potions or roots. I eat spaghetti."

Never a Face-lift?

"But your face is so unlined," I pressed. "Your figure is so sensational. Your muscles are so firm. Your skin has such wonderful tone that I refuse to believe the rumor that you've had your face lifted."

The actress ran her fingers across her forehead. "I never have," she said flatly. "If I had, you could see scars by my hairline. It's just that I was born with a good bone structure in my face. The skin is held taut. Of course, I have some rules.

"I never drink. I never diet. And I always stay in love."

I arched an eyebrow.

"Not the Hollywood or romantic kind of love. I love life and people and nature and just being alive." Then she described the hardening of the spiritual arteries that attacks so many persons in middle age, turning them into bitter human beings. "These are the people," she went on, "who spread bad stories. They are the ones who said that I had leftist leanings, that that was why the American Embassy denied me a visa so that I couldn't make Broken Lance last year with Spencer Tracy.

"I want everyone to know that the American Embassy has never denied me a visa. I am a Catholic, and I love this country as I love my own. It has always been very kind to me. The delay in getting my visa was due only, I was told, to regular processing, red tape. Getting into this country is not an easy thing."

When Dolores Del Rio is not making films in Latin lands, she lives with her mother in a picturesque villa on the outskirts of Mexico City. There, surrounded by 400 Paris gowns, 11 fur coats, about 200 pairs of shoes — "I really don't know the exact number" — and jewelry worth approximately $150,000, she is ardently courted by local Casanovas who consider her one of the prize catches of the nation. This is partly because of her mother — "a real smart business woman."

THE DEL RIO LEGS still merit a second glance, as this photo shows. Five feet 5 inches tall, she weighs only 116 pounds.

"When I first started making pictures in Hollywood," she explained, "Mama saved my money. She bought real estate — houses and land — and today, if I don't want to work I don't have to. But work is my life. In the next six months I will make two pictures, one in Mexico City and one in Madrid. Then, perhaps, I will make one here."

"In other words," I suggested, "you made your pile in the tax-free days. And right now you're loaded."

She considered a moment. "I think that 'well-fixed' would be a better expression." She tried it for sound. "Yes, well-fixed is what I am."

"Is it true," I asked, "that at the height of your career you were paid $9,000 a week?"

"That is true."

"Señorita," I quickly proposed, "you are without a doubt the most fascinating woman I have ever met. Come, let us go away to the mountains together."

"I am sorry," Dolores Del Rio declined. "The World Almanac says you are one hundred and five." ■

I beat my 'family curse'

Seemingly, this young woman was doomed by a disease that had killed both her father and her grandmother. Here she tells how surgery saved her

THE AUTHOR strides gaily to work — a far cry from the frail woman of a year ago who rarely walked a full block. Thirty-two years old, Miss Elfenbein is the woman's editor of a Providence, R.I., daily newspaper.

by LUCILLE ELFENBEIN

PROVIDENCE, R.I.

The doctor stood at the foot of the hospital bed. It was just five days after he'd cut open my heart.

His grin was a yard wide as he said: "I want you to run upstairs today."

He's gone mad, I thought. For the past several years an attempt to walk — never mind run — up a flight of stairs had set my heart pounding, my breath rasping.

But Dr. Dwight Emary Harken is a persistent man. He made me get out of bed, and led me down the hall of Mount Auburn Hospital in Cambridge, Mass. We stopped at a stairway.

I grabbed for the bannister. "It's all right," said Dr. Harken calmly, "you can do it."

He's mad all right, I said to myself. But slowly I started up the stairs. Halfway up I thought: I'd better stop to rest.

And then suddenly my heart gave a leap and I realized —

I wasn't tired!

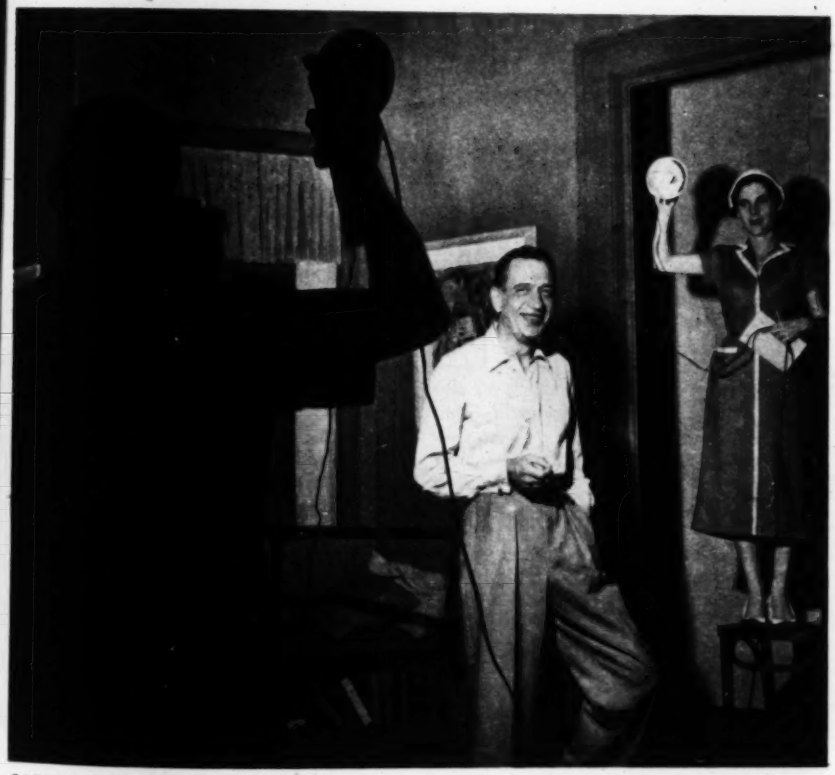

I started climbing again — faster. "That's enough," Dr. Harken called to me. "Now come on down."

I almost skipped down the stairs. Is this me, I kept saying to myself, this woman who can go up and down stairs without pain? Can all this really be true?

At the landing Dr. Harken smiled into my eyes. "About half the time," he said quietly, "the patients cry."

I didn't cry then. But back in my bed a few minutes later I remembered another hospital bed and another heart that had caused me many tears.

CAREER of Miss Elfenbein — here helping to take pictures of actor Donald Cook after an interview — has been bolstered by operation, which lets her work regular hours in safety.

It was just 20 years ago, in Miami, Fla., and the young man in the hospital was fighting his last battle with rheumatic heart — a battle he'd been waging for 25 years.

My father had been very handsome. But now, stretched in the hospital bed, he had skin that was as yellow as old silk, eyes popped wide, nostrils that flared from long years of straining for air. His face and body were bony-thin, starved by the lack of life-giving oxygen.

There was nothing the doctors of 1935 could do for my father. They'd advised him to go to Florida for the climate, but a body that craves oxygen is not helped by a warm sun. And so my father died, with the same quiet dignity with which he'd borne his affliction for so many years.

The memory of the way he looked that day in the hospital bed had always remained with me. Then one day six years ago it suddenly was more than a memory.

After recovering from a virus attack, I looked into a mirror and saw the image of my father.

The pinkness was gone from my face, my eyes were wider, my skin molded close to my cheeks. I had been struck by the same scourge that had killed my father — and his mother before him. It had killed both of them in their 30s, and now it had hunted me down at the age of 26. Rheumatic heart, I thought in sudden terror, was our family "curse."

It's a complex curse, I found out later from doctors. The body is invaded by an infection that first attacks the throat and sometimes damages parts of the heart, causing (among other things) scars on the valves of the heart. These scars obstruct the flow of blood out of the heart to the body. Since the blood carries oxygen, the body's supply is gradually reduced.

The result is pain. In my case there was a pain in the side (from moisture in the lungs), a swelling of the feet and hands, a feeling of suffocation.

How well I know that feeling. Sometimes I've waked from a sound sleep with the sensation of being strangled. Take it easy, I'd say. You can beat this thing down by yourself; there's no need to bother anybody at this hour by phoning.

Wheezing and choking, I'd reach for my little medicines, while inside me a growing panic clamored that I call for help. Sometimes I was able to help myself; other times I surrendered and phoned my doctor, then waited frantically for him to come so I could breathe again.

And Then There Was Hope

Living became a slowly crawling affair. Like my father and grandmother before me, I faced my 30s as a semi-invalid, without skiing, swimming, even much walking. And, as the weary days went by, I became increasingly aware that I too was nearing the decade in which my father and grandmother had been struck down by a relentless killer.

My doctor, of course, had diagnosed my ailment. For months he watched me carefully, keeping close tabs on the bump of scar tissue that was so effectively strangling me. But outside of relieving the increasing number of attacks, there was nothing he could do.

'Carefully, the surgeon reached

Then one day there was something. A new operation, he told me, could erase scar tissue on the heart. Already many people like myself had been helped. Would I be interested in seeing if I could be?

I was off to Boston as fast as I could; there a battery of heart specialists looked me over and concluded that the new operation might work for me.

Late last February, after obtaining a leave of absence from my job, I checked in at the Mount Auburn Hospital. I was there but a few minutes when I was given a pair of white elastic stockings and told to put them on. For the following 30 days I always had to wear a pair, both awake and asleep, to insure proper circulation.

One in 100

The first five days were spent in observation, rest and making me antiseptic, since the greatest care must be taken in an operation where the heart will lie exposed.

Then — the night before the operation — there came a visitor.

In the presence of my brother Dick and other members of the family, a doctor told me that there was one chance in 100 that I wouldn't come out of the operating room alive. Out of 300 such operations, he said, three patients had died.

I thought for a few seconds, and then said: "Couldn't that be put another way — that out of 300 such operations, 297 lives had been renewed?"

The doctor agreed with me. "I guess," said my brother, remembering our father, "that we know the other side of the coin pretty well."

The next morning I was wheeled into the operating room, placed on a table to be stared at by a gaggle of green-clad technicians and doctors. Usually no cosmetics are permitted during surgery. (The color of your face tells the surgeons how well you're doing.) But the anesthetist was a red-haired woman doctor and — understanding feminine vanity — she had allowed me to wear lipstick carefully blotted.

I was quickly "put to sleep" and the doctors went to work. They opened a half-circle in my side, sectioned a rib, then tied back and collapsed one lung.

Now came the big moment. Carefully, precisely, the surgeon reached toward my heart with a small knife. He cut my heart open. Then, with infinite care, he pierced the scar tissue obstructing the valve so that the blood once more could flow freely. Finally the heart was closed, and my side stitched so as to leave a neat scar.

The whole operation had taken just 45 minutes.

I awoke on the way back to my room, my face again a rosy pink. But I must have looked like a human Daddy Long Legs. There were tubes coming out of me from head to toe — from my ankle for blood transfusions, from my side for chest drainage, from my mouth for liquid-food infusions, from my nostrils for oxygen.

For the next 48 hours I slept, waking up intermittently to find one fewer tube sticking out of me. (The nurses removed them whenever they were no longer needed.) When I finally awoke, I felt I had been kicked in the ribs (a sensation caused by the incision in my side). But a combination of pain-killing drugs and the cheerfulness of the nurses — all specially trained in caring for heart-surgery patients — soon had me feeling better.

After two weeks I was out of the hospital and on the way home, carrying with me detailed instructions on how to tell one kind of pill from another (I had over a half-dozen different types of pills to take), plus stern orders against overexerting myself.

A month later I was back in my doctor's office — but only for a checkup. Off came the elastic stockings. And — happy day! — I was told I didn't have to stick so rigorously to SOCIAL LIFE of a normal woman now is permitted the author. Here she pours tea for two friends.

toward my heart'

my salt-free diet. But my collapsed lung hadn't yet re-expanded, so I was given a new set of breathing exercises.

At my second checkup, in May, the lung was better and I was allowed to go back to work part-time. Today — seven months after the operation — my heart is perfectly well, and I'm back working full-time. I still have to guard against recurrence of rheumatic fever in order to prevent another infection that would scar the heart valves again. But there are no more nights of suffocating terror.

Particularly when I meet other victims of rheumatic heart do I realize fully how well I really am. I compare their pallid skin and protruding cheek bones with my own pink complexion. I know then that this miracle of modern surgery — which cost me no more than the price of a new low-priced car — has given me more than just the ability to walk upstairs without gasping.

The miracle has let me enter the 30s without, after all, facing the sword of doom that had hung over my father and grandmother. It has given me life itself. ■

ATHLETICS, even beach horseplay like this, doesn't harm Miss Elfenbein (standing). Her chances for a long life: excellent.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH PICTURES

The sheerest precipice—a rise of more than 200 feet—in Durand Canyon. The purplish rock is rhyolite, lava form of granite which hardened on the surface in the pre-Cambrian era. Nearby Bloch Mountain (generally called Black Mountain) rises 300 feet or so still higher.

On way to the shut-in canyon, hikers Anna Marie Nichols, left, of Ironton, and Bernice Bateman, get drink from wooden trough that carries water from a spring higher up. From this spot to canyon is a rugged hike of several miles.

SHUT-IN CANYON NEAR ST. LOUIS

Water Gap on Creek in Madison County Is Pocket of Unspoiled Ozark Wilderness

Shallow, boulder-studded canyon stream can be crossed here and there on exposed rocks. Boots are recommended for wear in area as protection against cottonmouths, copperheads and rattlesnakes.

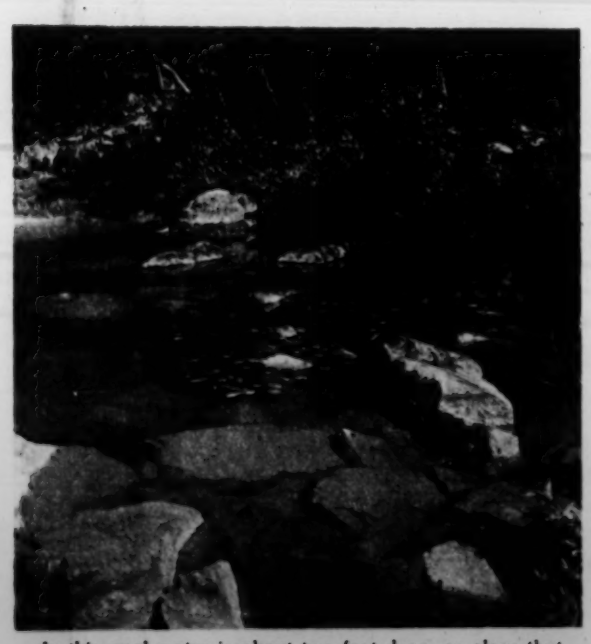

SECLUDED in the Missouri Ozark Highlands is a recess of off-the-beaten-path wilderness known in that part of Madison County as Durand Canyon. It is one of the area's more remote "shut-ins," or picturesque water gaps where rivers or creeks flow through deep, narrow rock formations. The stream in this case is Marble Creek, gurgling along a stony course at the base of Bloch Mountain on its way to the St. Francis River.

The canyon is named after Simon Durand, who lived and operated a grist mill there for years beginning in the 1860s. It is said that after Durand's death, several bundles of currency were found stashed in his mud-plastered hut, which still stands. Legend has it that he also left a fortune in gold coins hidden elsewhere in the rocky fastness. "Prospectors" have periodically tried to find the gold. Land on which the canyon is located is owned by B. F. Wood of Fredericktown.

Looking up Durand Canyon which is about three-quarters of a mile long. Canyon may be reached from Fredericktown or Ironton, latter route involving drive on almost-impassable road and tough hike of several miles. Easiest approach is to turn west on country road from Route 67, a mile south of Fredericktown, to Bloch Mountain. From St. Louis it is less than 100 miles.

In this pool water is about two feet deep, so clear that small fish in it can occasionally be seen. Clumps of tiny water lilies are visible near opposite bank. Some pools, as much as 10 feet deep even in low-water stage, harbor bass and other game fish.

Miss Nichols climbs on remaining foundation rocks of old grist mill, which is several hundred feet up mountain from stream. Durand, according to the story, had a still where he made whisky that he traded for pelts.

TV Closed-Circuit Championship Bout

Here and Elsewhere Fans Paid a Million Dollars to See Marciano-Moore Fight

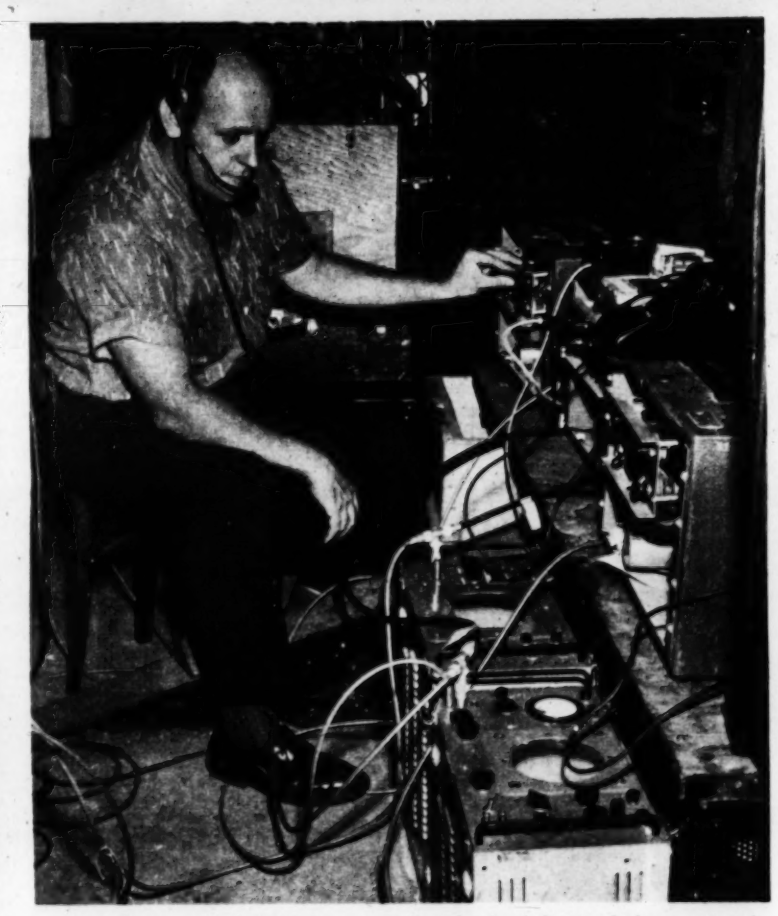

Facing windows on twenty-seventh floor of telephone building are two parabolic reflectors that shot television signal to roof of Loew's State Theater. During tests on day of fight, Walter Carner, exchange repairman, stands by "dish" in foreground. From same floor another pair of reflectors was pointed across Mississippi River at roof of Majestic Theater in East St. Louis. Signal travels from end of hook-shaped wave guide (antenna) against alloy reflector which funnels it in, throws it like a flashlight beam directly on distant target.

View from roof of Loew's theater on Washington avenue toward telephone building on Pine street, with its antennae-decked roof. Distance is about 1050 feet airline. Reflectors anchored with sandbags on theater roof are identical with those at telephone building windows, but now serve as signal receivers. There must be no obstructions between sending and receiving reflectors, and reflectors must be on pin point with one another or signal will be weakened. Sandbags came in handy when early evening windstorm tilted one of receiving reflectors.

Technicians at monitoring bays of television operation center in telephone company's long lines office at 2651 Olive street. Signal carrying fight was sent from this point to another video loop, dispatched to second floor of downtown telephone building, and from there to transmitters just behind parabolic reflectors. Signal came to long lines office by video cable from sixth floor of downtown building where it had been originally received from big box-like antennae on building roof. Telecast sound came by telephone.

In what is called the "power room" at back of theater balcony, signal is received from reflectors on roof. Leo Roberts, wearing headpiece phone connected directly with Bell building, watches oscilloscope and video receiver on floor as he checks test patterns sent from Yankee Stadium several hours before fight began. In this room power supply for signal is built up and an instrument called a "clamper" restores a DC component to signal that has been lost through amplification. From this room signal passes to video control panel cabinet in theater's projection booth, from where it is fed to the all-important picture-tube.

Lead-sheathed "barrel" containing picture tube and mounted in center of front edge of theater balcony is given last-minute check by W. C. Bowers, television engineer who operated controls in projection booth during telecast. Seven-inch cathode ray tube, costing $750, faces back of barrel. This tube, of same type used in home television receiver, has half-inch-thick face that can take 50 tons of pressure at high vacuum. Picture is picked up from face of tube by 24-inch Schmidt optical reflector of type used in observatories, then passes through 22-inch corrective lens at front of barrel that provides flat focus on screen. Insert at upper left is barrel in operation as seen from front of center aisle on theater's main floor. Light is as powerful as sunlight on earth.

AMERICANS PAID MORE than a million dollars to see the closed-circuit telecast of the Rocky Marciano-Archie Moore heavyweight championship prize fight. Their fancy caught by the match, some 400,000 fight fans across the country jammed 133 theaters in 92 cities, paid considerably more than regular movie-house admission, but actually had a better view of the ring action than many of those who attended the fight in New York's Yankee Stadium.

Sold out days ahead were Loew's State Theater in St. Louis, the Majestic Theater in East St. Louis.

Careful advance preparations were necessary to insure as good a telecast as possible in this area. The portable equipment had to be set up, tested and synchronized with permanent installations that regularly process the video signals of home television programs.

The microwave signal that brought the fight was gathered in by two horn-shaped boxes (radio relay antennas) on the roof of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company building. All along the line television experts watched monitor screens, oscilloscopes and other vital equipment. The telecast here came off without a hitch, but there was a narrow escape. Just as the telecast ended, an important tube of the control panel cabinet at Loew's State audibly died.

Photos by JACK GOULD of the PICTURES Staff

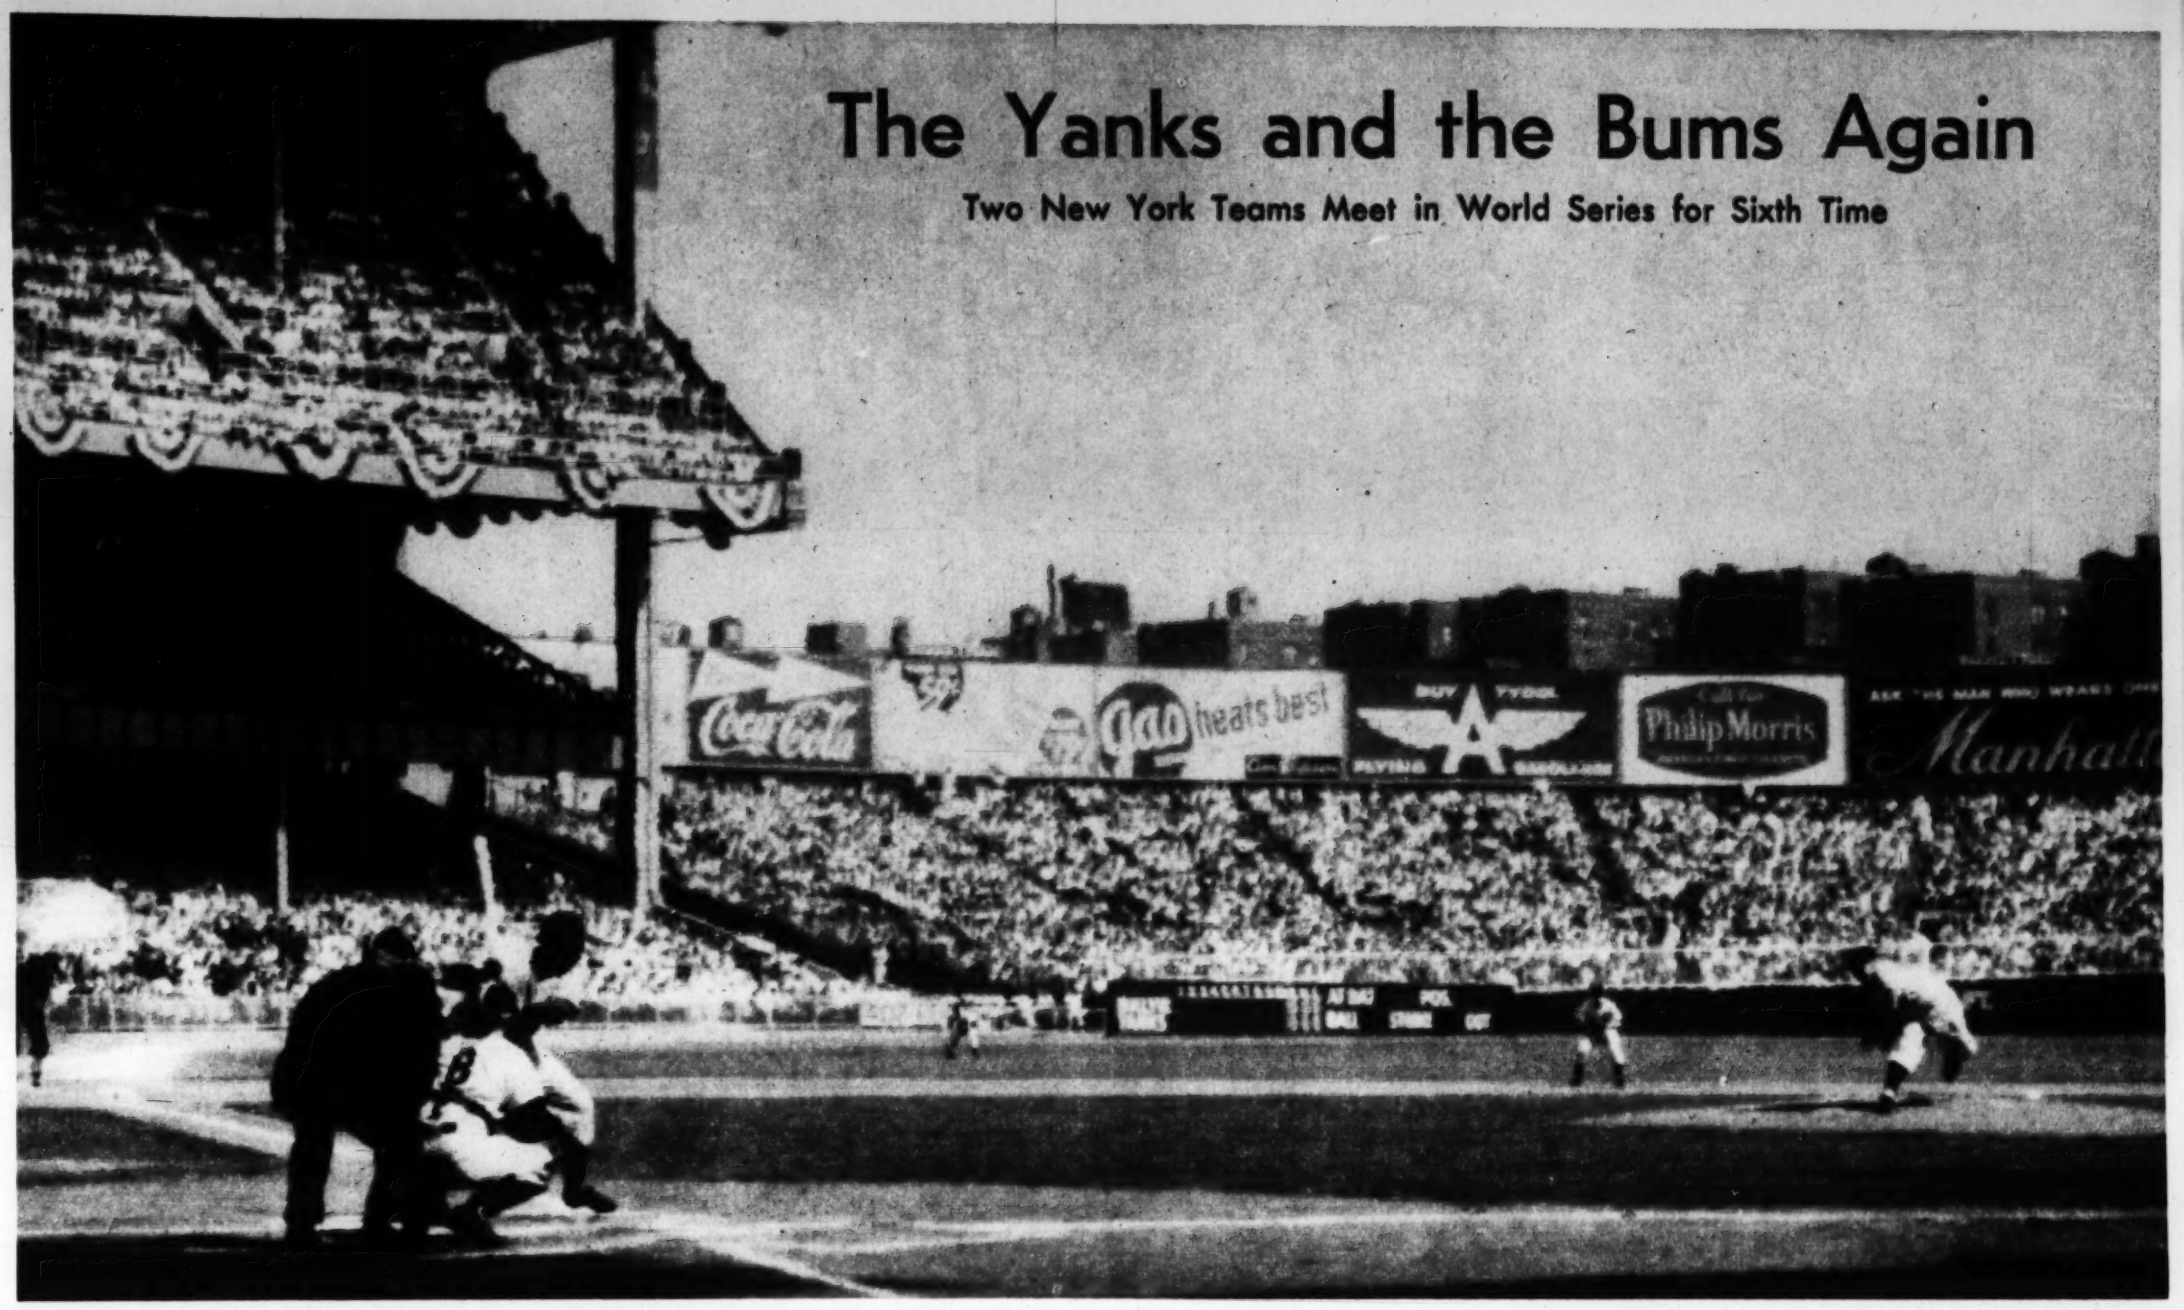

Episodes from fight. Pictures were enlarged to 20-by-16-foot size on screen that was 90 feet from projection barrel. Remainder of theater's huge screen was masked off. At left, Marciano (white trunks) and Moore measure one another in an early round. Center, Moore hangs on rope after being knocked out in ninth round. At right, Marciano, wearing robe and still heavyweight champion, speaks for television network as Bill Corum, who announced the fight, holds microphone. Theater sold out its 3200 seating capacity, permitted about 50 standees. Tickets sold for $3.65 and $5.50 each, bringing gross receipts of about $11,680. Loew's State, only theater in city that is set up for closed-circuit television, is now installing equipment to receive television by co-axial cable as well as microwave.

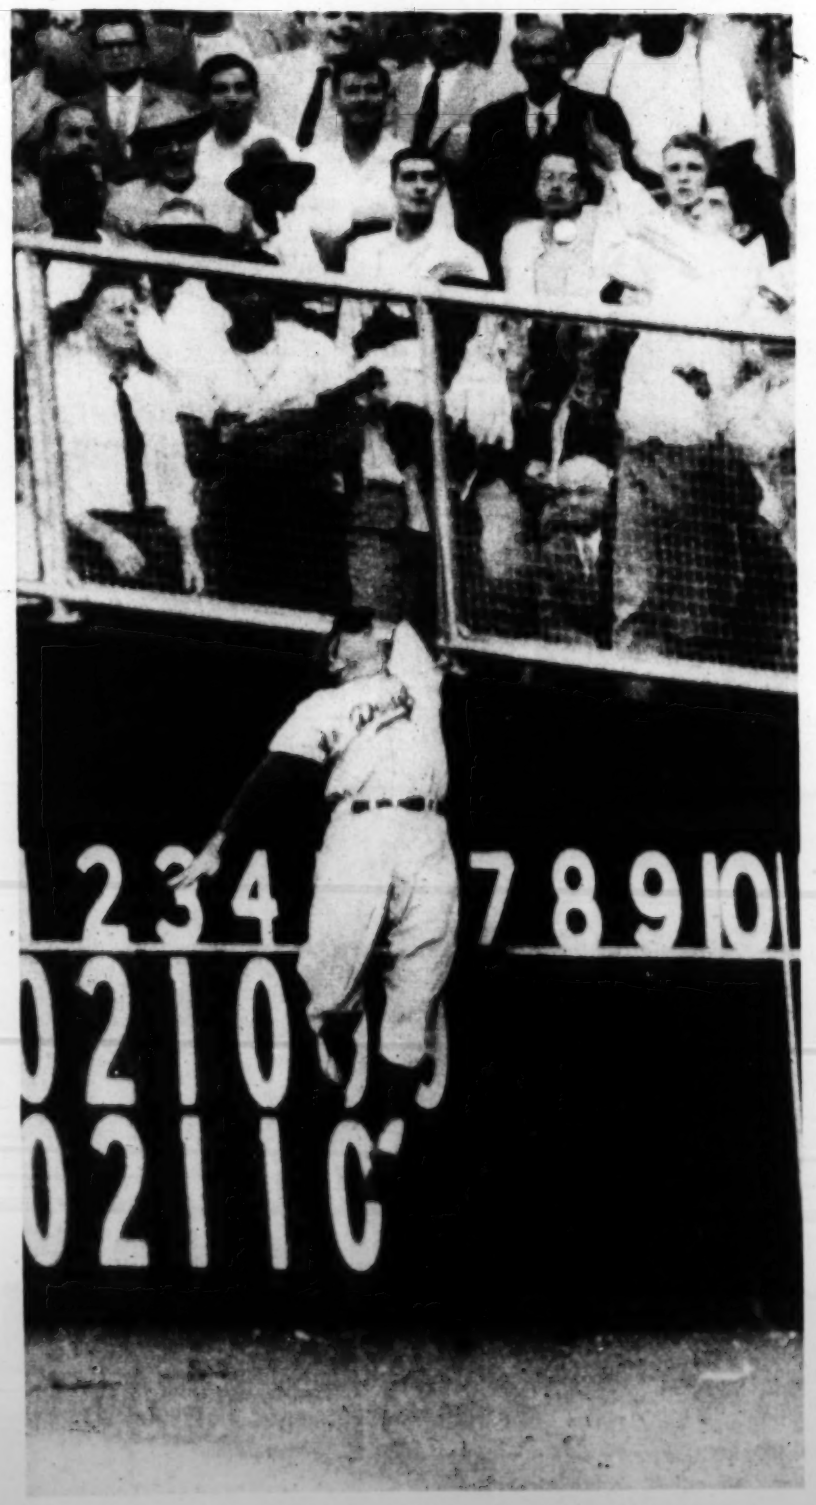

The Yanks and the Bums Again

Two New York Teams Meet in World Series for Sixth Time

This was the setting as the 1955 World Series got under way in Yankee Stadium in New York. Pitcher Ed "Whitey" Ford of the New York Yankees delivers the first pitch of the first game to Jim "Junior" Gilliam of the Brooklyn Dodgers. It was a curve at the knees, which Yankee Catcher Yogi Berra caught and Plate Umpire Bill Summers called a strike. Eventually, Gilliam grounded out, Ford to First Baseman Joe Collins. The bunting-draped, triple-deck stands and oval-shaped bleachers were jammed with 66,000 fans for the contest, won by the Yankees, 6 to 5. Brooklyn virtually coasted into the series, easily winning the National League championship after jumping off to a big early season lead. The Yankees, however, had to fight all the way for the American League title, nosing out the Cleveland Indians two days before the season ended. This was the twenty-first World Series for the Yankees, the eighth for the Dodgers, and the sixth time since 1941 that the two New York teams met in the baseball classic. Up to this time, the Yanks had won 16 world titles, losing only to the New York Giants in 1921 and 1922, and to the St. Louis Cardinals in 1926 and 1942. Brooklyn had never won a World Series.

United Press Photos

Duke Shider, Brooklyn center fielder, leaps high but in vain for Joe Collins' home-run smash in the sixth inning of the first game. The ball just cleared the railing in the right-center field bleachers; the fan with raised arms was no more successful than the Duke in catching the ball, which can be seen below his hands. It was the Yankee first baseman's second home-run clout of the game and put the Yanks in front, 6 to 3. Collins' homer in the fourth inning broke a 3-3 tie.

In one of the key plays of the opening game, Yankee Shortstop Phil Rizzuto, leaping clear of Dodger baserunner Gilliam, relays ball to first base for double play after forcing Gilliam at second. Umpire Jim Honochick gives the clenched fist "out" signal. With the bases full, only one out and the score tied in the fourth inning, Brooklyn was threatening to break the game open. Dodger Shortstop Pee Wee Reese hit a sharp grounder toward right field. Billy Martin, the Yankee second baseman who received an extension of his Army leave to play in the series, lunged desperately, made a remarkable backhand stop. He flipped to Rizzuto, who got off his throw to first base despite Gilliam's effort to break up the play with a slide that missed second base by the proverbial mile. The inning-ending double play saved at least two runs. The Dodgers continued to battle, but their two runs in the eighth inning were not enough to overcome the Yankee three-run lead.

TROUBLE OVER AIR BASE

Japanese Villagers Try to Stop Expansion of American Installation

Japanese police and reinforcements form a phalanx to hold back a surging crowd of demonstrators. The runway enlargement will cut into Sunakawa (population about 13,000), forcing some farmers and villagers to move. A majority of the 133 landowners who will be directly affected have held out against selling their property. Japanese government agreed to the base expansion months ago, now may have to condemn most of the necessary land.
United Press Photo

RESIDENTS OF THE JAPANESE VILLAGE of Sunakawa have been pressuring for weeks against expansion of the nearby Tachikawa Air Base of the United States Air Force. Surveyors for the planned extension of the main air strip have had to have police protection. When they started the survey, several thousand villagers and labor unionists from Tokyo, 20 miles away, formed a human roadblock in an attempt to keep the surveyors from working. Police moved in to disperse the angry crowd and there were clashes. In the daylong skirmish two persons were seriously hurt, more than 200 police and demonstrators slightly injured. No Americans were involved, and Air Force personnel were ordered to stay out of the area.

International News Photos except as noted

On a Sunakawa street members of the Japanese government surveying crew concentrate on their work as helmeted police stand close by to head off any trouble. Japanese authorities on one occasion mustered more than 1700 police to "run interference" for the surveyors. Air Force and Japanese officials have agreed the base must be enlarged for adequate accommodation of jet planes and such big United States planes as the Globemaster.

Labor union members and sympathizers catch up on sleep after participating in the demonstrations. Some of the imported agitators were reported to have been paid 300 yen (90 cents) for their efforts.

Procter & Gamble's Golden Fluffo

What home fries it makes!

BETTER-LOOKING...
BETTER-TASTING...

Unlike white shortenings, Fluffo melts to clear liquid gold for crispy-brown fried foods never possible before. Eat all the fried foods you want! Fluffo is truly pure and so digestible, too.

INDIANA COOKING CHAMPION, Mrs. Wayne Hurst, says:— "We live on a farm, and my husband and 3 boys need plenty of good food. I give them lots of meat and potatoes fried tender-crisp in Fluffo, and they eat all they want because Fluffo's so digestible. I fry my potatoes raw in Fluffo. They're wonderful. So golden-brown. Best-tasting I ever fixed!"

"No white shortening ever gave me fried potatoes like these!" says this well-known blue ribbon winner in giant Midwest Cooking Contest.

Like cooking champions, you'll be truly excited about golden Fluffo! It gives you deliciously tender-crisp, highly digestible golden-brown "fries" such as you've never been able to get before... more appetizing, by far, than you can get from white shortening!

STERN WHEEL IN ACTION

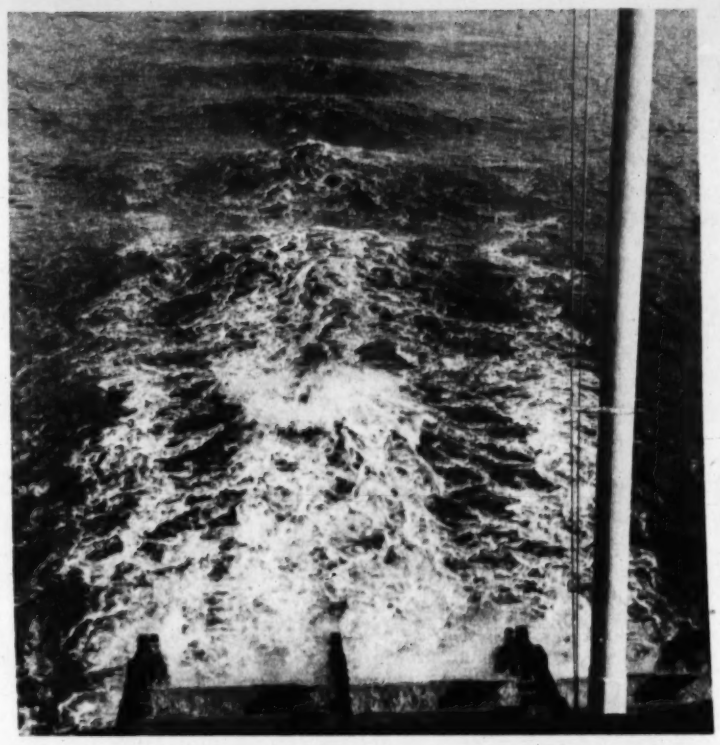

The Delta Queen, on St. Paul Excursion, Displays Its Mighty Paddles

THE STEAMBOAT stern wheel, which once churned the Mississippi River from New Orleans to St. Paul, is now rarely seen in action. The stern wheel made a mighty commotion in the water as it propelled the old-time packets, excursion craft and workboats that once crowded America's major rivers, but the diesel-driven propeller has all but crowded it out. The Delta Queen, home port Cincinnati, is the only stern-wheel passenger boat on the Mississippi and Ohio rivers. Her big paddle wheel is seen from close range at left kicking up spray as it is turned by the long drive rods, called pitmans, that connect the wheel with the engines, one on each side of the boat. The wheel, 16 feet in diameter, has 32 paddles 28 feet long. At about 20 revolutions per minute, it is driving the boat along at normal speed of 10 to 12 miles an hour. In photo above, the 285-foot, four-decked Delta Queen is viewed from rear as it passes Alton. Boat's twin rudders are just back of the wheel. Wake of the stern-wheeler (photo right) rolls out straight astern in a long succession of waves that in narrow channels can be dangerous for small boats. The more familiar diesel-driven craft throw a fan-shaped wake. The Delta Queen was making its second annual excursion between Cincinnati and St. Paul, with more than 150 passengers.

TERMITES RAVAGE ART WORK

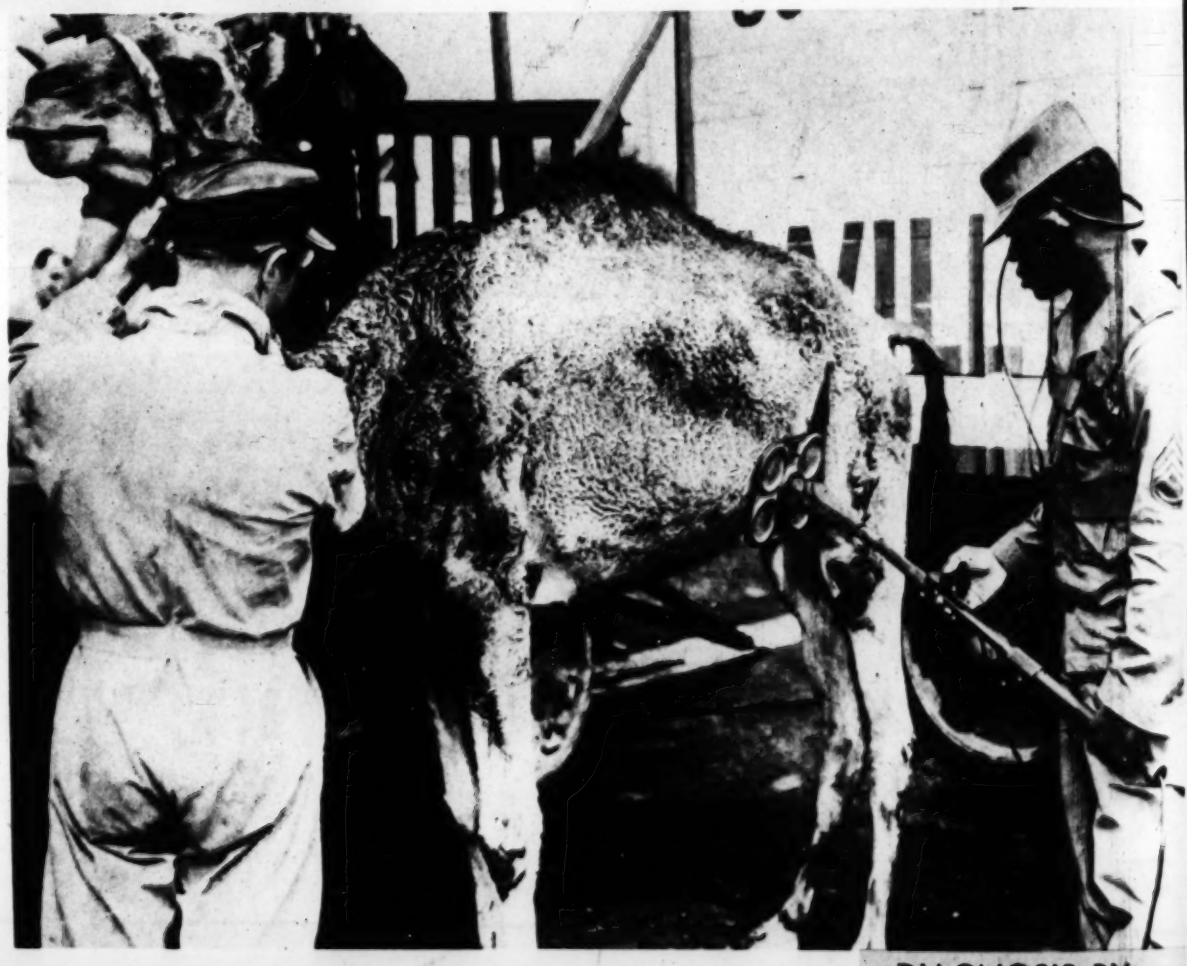

Termite borings, indicated by pen, riddle the reverse side of an ancient Italian painting on wood kept in Rome, where many masterpieces on wood are suffering similar damage. Shown also (left) is a side panel of the three-paneled painting that has been perforated by the insects. The painting, depicting the Madonna and Child surrounded by angels, was executed about 1350 by Giovanni del Biondo. At an art restoration center, the painting is being tediously transferred from wood to canvas.

NEW USE FOR A TRUCK TOP

With Joe Acton at the tiller, a truck top converted into a boat makes a tight turn on the water near Dublin, Ireland. In his automobile repair shop, Acton cut off the top of a used truck, did a bit of remodeling, and outfitted the resulting craft with a five-horsepower outboard motor. He says the boat makes speeds up to 16 miles an hour, is easily maneuvered and is very seaworthy.

Two intensely concentrating English soccer players get into a pose that strongly recalls an old-time vaudeville song-and-dance team as they compete for the ball. DIAGNOSIS BY MINE DETECTOR

Ferdinand, a circus camel at Heidelberg, Germany, gets a diagnosis for an upset stomach with a mine detector. When the animal became ill, his trainer (left) thought Ferdinand might have swallowed a piece of metal, asked the United States Army for help. Sergeant Herman Lee, member of an explosives disposal unit, was assigned to the task. No clicks were registered by the mine detector, and it was decided that Ferdinand had merely overeaten.

AUTOMATION IN A DRY ICE PLANT

In photo at left, wrapped blocks of dry ice are turned out at a one and a half acre, $1,500,000 plant in Oakland, California, that is operated by only two men. One man punches buttons and pulls switches on the control panel of the intricate machinery. The other handles the packaged dry ice for storing. To make the dry ice, the gas carbon dioxide is chilled into a fluffy snow, then compressed into blocks under 300 pounds pressure. Plant has a capacity of 50 to 60 tons of solidified carbon dioxide daily.

A concert visitor checks the day's typewritten program posted on easel. This concert was all Verdi opera the third act from Rigoletto, fourth acts of Otello, Il Trovatore and Nabucco. Library has about 30,000 records, constantly augments its collection with donations from major recording companies.

Music Break At Lunchtime

Varied New York Audience Turns Out For Record Concerts in Library Park

Under plane trees that shade the sun and muffle some of the midtown noise, noontime concertgoers fill benches in Bryant Park behind the library. New arrivals are looking for vacant seats. The two hour program is designed to accommodate audience whose lunch hour might be noon to one, or one to two o'clock. For many, the music offers pleasant background for reading, writing letters, working crossword puzzles. Loudspeakers are placed at each of the four corners of the concert area. The turntable is operated from a room inside the library.

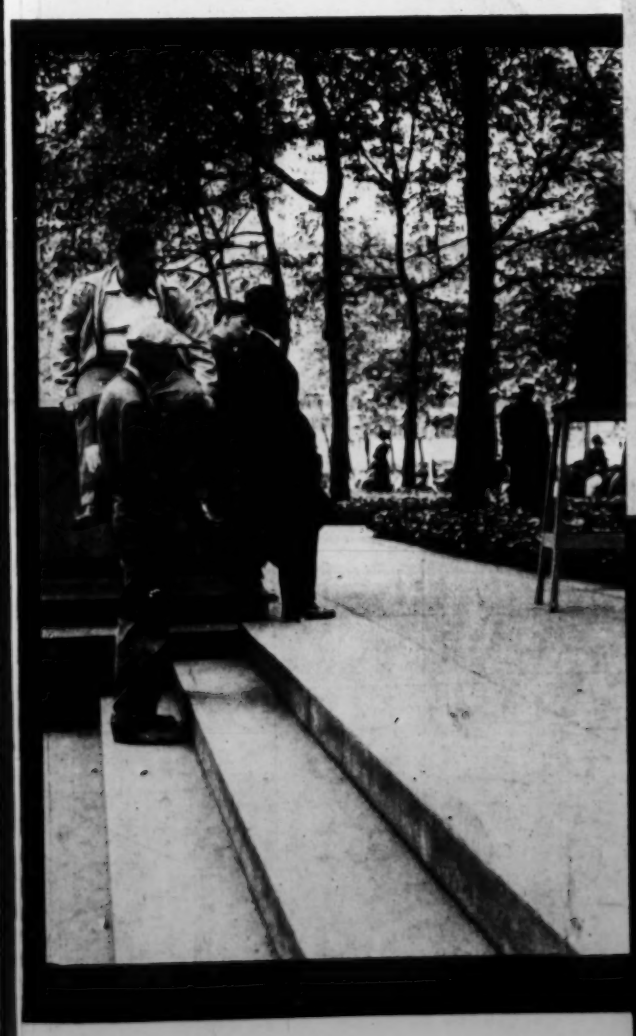

By PAUL BERG of the PICTURES Staff

MUSIC HATH CHARMS to soothe the busy New Yorker, to paraphrase Congreve. The New York Public Library learned this when it began its free, outdoor, lunchtime concerts of recorded music seven years ago. Behind the library at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second street is Bryant Park, a small oasis of trees, grass and benches in the congested midtown area. Each weekday at noon during the warm months, Willis Stevens sets up outside the library an easel announcing the program of the day's concert (photo at right). Stevens, a member of the music department of Salem College (Winston-Salem, N.C.), was employed to be this year's concert disc jockey.

Listeners constitute a varied audience—secretaries with pony-tail hairdos, workers in shirt-sleeves, business men in gray flannel suits, shoppers with their morning purchases, a few unkempt iconoclasts who object to the popular idea that work is good. Attendance varies with the weather and the programs. The library estimates that for the past three-month series, some 25,000 attended. Despite hurricanes and rain, not one program had to be canceled.

The lunchtime music lovers often send in requests for favorite recordings and the library tries to oblige. Although there are partisans of Bach and Beethoven, of moderns like Walter Piston and Zoltan Kodaly, of operas and symphonies, all seem to get together and enjoy Mozart. Most popular program by far, however, was the Caruso Commemoration on August 2, the anniversary of the tenor's death. This special program drew more than 5000 into the small park.

The concerts, begun in 1948, were the idea of Phillip Miller of the library's Music Division staff. Singer Lanny Ross, a friend of Miller's, contributed the money for the original playing equipment. Since 1949, the concerts have been underwritten by the Union Dime Savings Bank, across Sixth avenue from the park. The bank's contribution, running between $500 and $1000 for the season, covers repairs and additions to the equipment, salary of the program director, printing of the concert announcements.

Appetizers Made of Filled Macaroni

1. Miss Viviano cooks three varieties of macaroni in boiling salted water, then drains and rinses them.

2. Filling for shell macaroni is made by adding diced chicken, peas, pimentoes, wine and seasonings to cream sauce. Cheese is placed on last.

3. Small sausages are inserted in large tube macaroni after sausages have been brushed with barbecue sauce. Outsides of the filled tubes are brushed with butter.

By MERNA LAZIER

APPETIZERS MADE by filling some of the variously shaped macaroni are fine for cooler weather entertaining when more substantial foods are desirable. They are particularly suitable for the late cocktail parties that sometimes substitute for dinner. Miss Vita Viviano of St. Louis prepares her filled-macaroni appetizers in advance and then heats them, preferably in small batches, as needed.

Miss Viviano starts by cooking shell macaroni first, for the filling for these requires the longest time to prepare. She makes the filling for shells from butter, flour, milk and chicken stock cooked together as a cream sauce. Wine and seasonings, diced chicken, pimentoes and peas are added. Mixture is allowed to cool before stuffing it into the shell macaroni. Cheese strips are placed on top, butter is brushed on and the appetizers are ready for the broiler.

The sausage-filled appetizers are made by merely coating sausages with barbecue sauce and putting them in large tube-like macaroni. If sausages are small, tubes may be split and edges overlapped, then fastened with toothpicks, and the outside brushed with butter. Miss Viviano next makes cheese puff filling of beaten egg white, grated cheese, baking powder and seasonings, all folded together. The frilly edged macaroni are brushed with butter on one side only and are toasted under broiler. They are then turned over and filled with the cheese mixture, which is placed down center. A strip of pimento is laid on top. Appetizers are heated until cheese is puffed and lightly browned. Like the other appetizers, they are served at once. Reheating is not recommended. It will take about 12 to 15 minutes to cook each kind of macaroni, which are then drained and rinsed under running cold water.

INGREDIENTS: For shells—four tablespoons butter, one-half cup flour, one cup each of milk and chicken stock, one teaspoon each of salt and paprika, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one tablespoon curry powder, one-fourth cup each of sherry wine and diced pimentoes, one-half cup tiny peas, two cups diced cooked chicken, four ounces (about 24) large shell macaroni, and four square slices cheddar cheese cut in small strips. For sausage fillers—four ounces tube macaroni (about one-half inch diameter, one and one-half inches long), one-third cup prepared barbecue sauce, about 24 cocktail or Vienna sausages. Wieners may be cut in pieces if preferred. For filling frilly edged cheese macaroni—four ounces dumpling-type macaroni, one egg white, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one-half cup grated cheddar cheese, one-fourth teaspoon each of paprika, dry mustard and baking powder, and one pimento cut in strips for garnishing. Butter as needed for greasing cooky sheet and brushing tops of appetizers before broiling, and paprika to sprinkle on top. These portions will make about 75 appetizers.

NAVY SUPPLIES RADAR PROJECT

Ships Push Through Ice With Materials For Building Arctic Warning Outposts

At sea above the Arctic Circle, crewmen of the U.S.S. Olympus (partly visible at left) board one of the cargo ship's landing craft to help push away a small ice floe. The Olympus was one of about 100 American ships participating in "Operation DEW (Distant Early Warning) Line," the moving of supplies for construction of America's long-range radar warning network. Not a life or ship was lost in the operation, but 49 ships suffered damage in uncharted waters between Barter Island, Alaska, and Shepherd's Bay. Icebreakers, cargo ships, tankers and various types of landing ships left from both east and west coast ports for what was described as the Navy's biggest peacetime foray to the top of the earth.

The U.S.S. Bittersweet, Coast Guard icebreaker, plows channel through ice north of Point Barrow. The operation was under direction of the Military Sea Transportation Service. For the new DEW line shiploads of radar equipment had to be taken up and around the top of the continent, through Amundsen and Coronation Gulf and Simpson Strait, and left at station sites. Race was to get the ships in and back out before early Arctic winter closed sea routes with solid ice.

International News Photos except as noted

On a frozen beach a truck and a caterpillar stack drums of fuel left by one of the ships. More than 750,000 tons of cargo and some 4,000,000 barrels of oil were taken to existing radar and weather stations and to new DEW line positions.

Good news? Sure is!—New Shell X-100 Motor Oil Premium can actually boost the horsepower of your car. Here's why:

Ordinary motor oils won't flow freely when your engine is cold—as it always is when you start. Moreover, it seldom gets fully warmed up in average driving . . . so 5 to 10 horsepower is wasted just pushing oil around.

With X-100® Motor Oil Premium it's a different story.

It flows freely from the start, under all driving conditions, in any weather. That's why it can give you the 5 to 10 horsepower ordinary motor oils waste.

Then, too, the special "alkalizer" in X-100 Premium stops acid action—the major cause of engine wear.

Change to new Shell X-100 Motor Oil Premium. It's the finest protection your car can have.

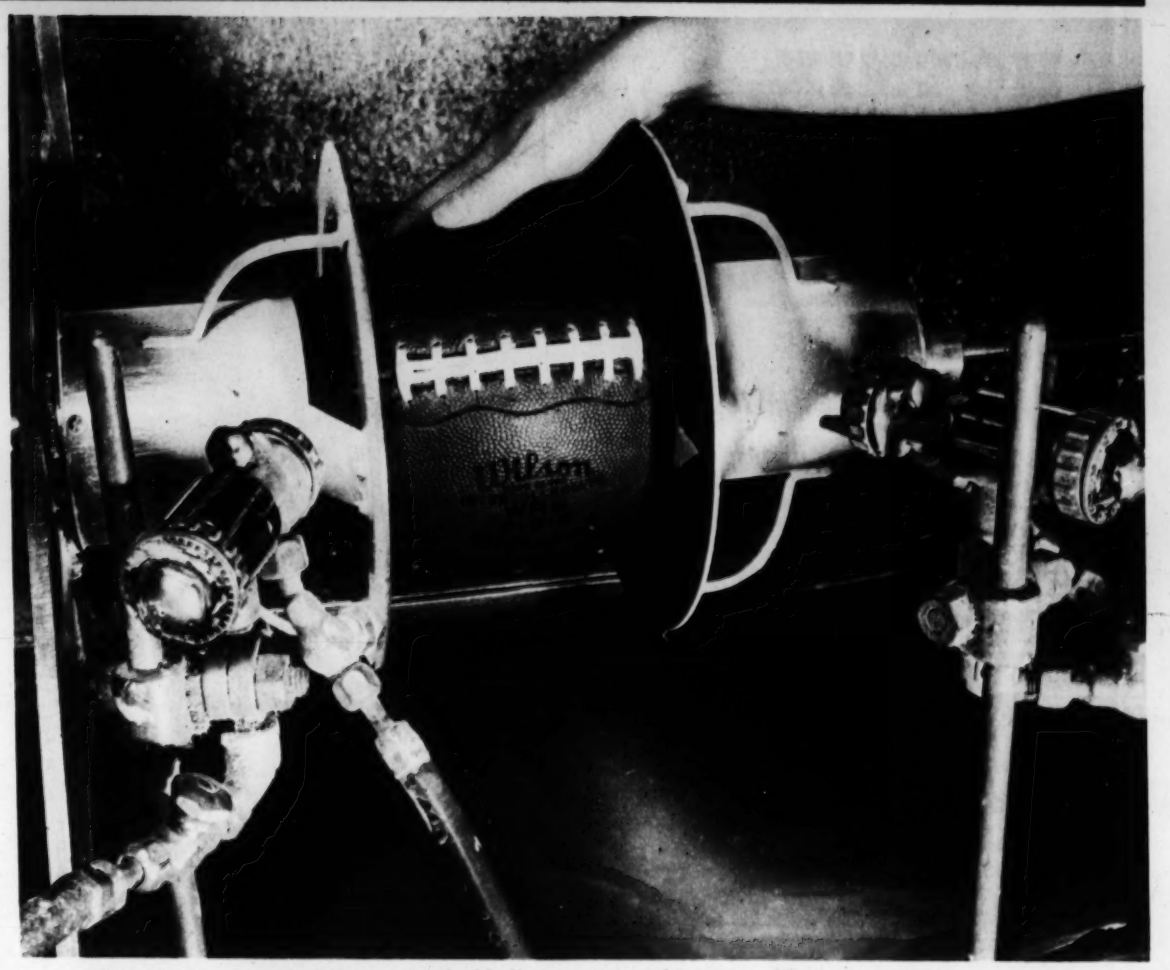

FASHIONING A FOOTBALL

Cowhide "Pigskin" Covers Are Handmade in Chicago Plant

A football begins to take shape in a Chicago sporting goods plant as oval panels are cut from pebble-grained leather. The four panels that make one ball are sewn together inside out. The leather is cowhide, not pigskin.

White stripes are applied to some finished balls for use in night games. After being graded and stamped with name of manufacturer, inflated ball is placed in machine which automatically sprays on the stripes as ball is rotated.

Secret of Success

Contadina all pure Tomato Paste

Fish, meats and chicken are at their flavorful best when you add Contadina! You can't use too much, because it's unseasoned, pure essence of tomato. Truly, a secret of recipe success that's yours for the trying!

Sole Contadina

3 strips bacon
1 small onion
4 large fillets of sole
1 dill pickle
1 can Contadina Tomato Paste
½ cup consomme
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup chopped Contadina ripe olives

Chop bacon and onion fine; mix together. Spread a spoonful of the mixture on each fillet. Cut the pickle into fourths and lay a sliver on each piece of fish. Roll up; arrange rolls in shallow casserole. Mix tomato paste, consomme and lemon juice; add olives and pour sauce over the fillets. Cover and bake in a fairly hot oven (400°) for 20 or 25 minutes, until fish flakes easily with a fork. Makes 4 servings.

At least 8 blue ribbon tomatoes in every can!

Frank Mika turns balls right side out after panels are stitched together. Rubber bladders are inserted in the leather casings before they go to lacing department.

Joe Peplinski (left) and his brother Jack lace up balls with white leather thongs. Official requirements stipulate that ball can weigh only 14 to 15 ounces.

Self-Powered Trailers of Trackless Freight Train Keep to Path of Cab

A new freight carrier, designed for cross-country hauling where there are no roads, sinuously winds its way between parked automobiles at Longview, Texas. Each of the wheels on the rubber-tired train, including the lead engine, has its own electric motor tucked in a hub. Generators, run by two engines in the lead car, furnish power for each wheel motor. Power from any wheel which loses traction in mushy or snow-covered terrain is automatically shifted to the wheels that are getting traction.

The eight-car, 32-wheel-drive freighter makes a corner in downtown Longview during a test run to demonstrate its maneuverability. Steering mechanism is coupled so that each car follows the identical route of the engine car. Flexibly mounted axles allow wheel to roll over obstacles—stones, stumps or ditches—without jolting the car. The lead car has an operator's cab seating seven persons. Just behind the lead car cab is a 3500-gallon fuel tank, to the rear of which are twin engines with generators to power the electrically driven wheels. Depending on size, price tags on the freighters range from $30,000 to more than a quarter of a million dollars. A six-car freighter is now in private service in northern Alaska transporting cargo to isolated military installations. Several more are being made by R. G. LeTourneau, Incorporated, for industrial firms.

Exquisite "Feature Lock" twin set in white or yellow gold. Diamonds ¼ carat total weight.

A FAMILY IN TERROR

Criminals Invade a Home in Film, "The Desperate Hours"

1. Other members of the family have left for the day and Mrs. Eleanor Hilliard (Martha Scott) is alone in the Hilliard home in suburban Indianapolis when it is invaded by three escaped convicts. Their leader, Glenn Griffin (Humphrey Bogart), plans to hide in the house until his girl friend delivers money he expects. With Griffin is his younger brother, Hal, and a dull-witted, brutal convict named Kobish.

2. As members of the family arrive home that evening, Griffin intimidates them under threat of killing Mrs. Hilliard. Nine-year-old Ralphie Hilliard (Richard Eyer) rebels despite the efforts of his father, Dan Hilliard (Fredric March, left). Ralphie is rescued from rough handling by Kobish (Robert Middleton) when Griffin intervenes.

3. Tense from waiting, the convicts quarrel among themselves, and Griffin prevents a clash between his brother Hal (Dewey Martin) and Kobish. Hal makes trouble by bothering Dan's daughter Cindy (Mary Murphy). As midnight deadline for delivery of the money nears, Kobish becomes uncontrollable, dashes out of the house with Griffin after him.

4. Dan and Cindy, with Griffin and Kobish outside, overpower Hal and get his gun. The Hilliards appear in control, when Ralphie, trying to drop from a bedroom window, is caught by Griffin and threatened with death unless the convicts are let back in. Midnight passes without the money, and Hal under the strain leaves the house, is killed by police.

5. Cindy is rescued from the house with the help of a boy friend, Chuck, who has learned of the family's danger. Griffin sends Dan to pick up the expected money, threatening Eleanor and Ralphie with death if police are called. The police, however, already are secretly closing in. They stop Dan on his return, but he persuades them to let him re-enter, taking with him an empty gun with which he hopes to outwit Griffin.

6. Kobish flees with Griffin's gun and is captured, leaving Griffin armed only with the empty weapon that, unaware it is unloaded, he has taken from Dan. Griffin futilely clicks the gun at Ralphie when cornered by Dan, who has obtained a loaded gun. Dan finds himself unwilling to shoot Griffin, lets the convict run out in panic to be shot by police.

WEDDING IN VENICE

City Celebrates Marriage of Prince Alfonso and 15-Year-Old Princess Virginia, of Ancient Families

Gondola bearing the Prince and Princess, and moppets of the wedding party moves along Venetian canal. Train of the bride's costly Paris-made gown, into which she was sewn, trails aft. Photographers, covering the boat ride from a motorboat, grind away with movie cameras. About 300 of Europe's aristocracy attended the wedding.

At the ceremony, Prince and Princess exchange wedding vows before microphone to amplify their words for large audience. At the reception, Princess Virginia exclaimed to friends, "Isn't he a Prince Charming?"

PALACE BALCONIES along Venice's Grand canal were bedecked with pink and white roses, and draped with damask tapestries. Brilliant sunshine flashed on the water. Thousands of Venetians and tourists leaned from windows and bridges to applaud as a bridal procession of 12 gondolas floated by. In the leading gold-trimmed craft were Prince Alfonso Hohenlohe-Langenburg, 31, and his bride, 15-year-old Princess Virginia Ira Fuerstenberg, who had just been married in the Church of St. Sebastian.

As nonruling members of ancient royal families, both can trace their ancestry back to princes of the Holy Roman Empire. Wealthy Prince Alfonso works as agent for a German auto firm in Mexico and California. He owns large properties in Mexico, a castle in Spain. Princess Virginia—dark, luminous-eyed, chestnut-haired and tall—was a schoolgirl. Their nuptials, called by the Italian press Italy's wedding-of-the-year, had its comic side—two photographers and the Princess' hairdresser fell into the canal during the excitement. The couple will take in Niagara Falls, New York, on their honeymoon before going to Mexico City to live.

Before the altar of the Church of St. Sebastian, built in the sixteenth century, the couple is married. A movie cameraman works in background. There was a brief clash between the wedding party and photographers who crowded into every available space in the church.

The newlyweds pose beside a plastic-wrapped Fiat, one of the three automobiles they received as wedding gifts. Among some 1000 wedding presents were two large diamond rings from Princess Virginia's mother and two huge emeralds brought back by one of Prince Alfonso's ancestors from a crusade to Jerusalem.

Here's the '56 Ford with new Lifeguard Design!

"It's a Ford First for 'Safety First'!"

says Al Esper, Ford's Chief Test-Driver

WHERE SAFETY COUNTS MOST,* FORD OFFERS EXTRA PROTECTION!

OVER TWO YEARS AGO, FORD STARTED A PROGRAM OF RESEARCH AND TESTING TO PIN-POINT THE CAUSES OF ACCIDENT INJURIES — SO THAT A SAFER CAR COULD BE BUILT.

IN CO-OPERATION WITH UNIVERSITIES, MEDICAL ASSOCIATIONS AND SAFETY EXPERTS, FORD FOUND THAT *THE MAJORITY OF ALL SEVERE INJURIES ARE CAUSED BY THE DRIVER BEING THROWN AGAINST THE STEERING POST—PASSENGERS BEING THROWN FORWARD AGAINST HARD SURFACES WITHIN THE CAR—OR BEING THROWN OUT OF THE CAR THROUGH DOORS THAT SPRING OPEN UNDER IMPACT.

THIS YEAR FORD PRESENTS THE FIRST MAJOR CONTRIBUTION TO DRIVER AND PASSENGER SAFETY IN ACCIDENTS — ADDED PROTECTION AGAINST INJURIES IN THE AREAS WHERE MOST INJURIES OCCUR.

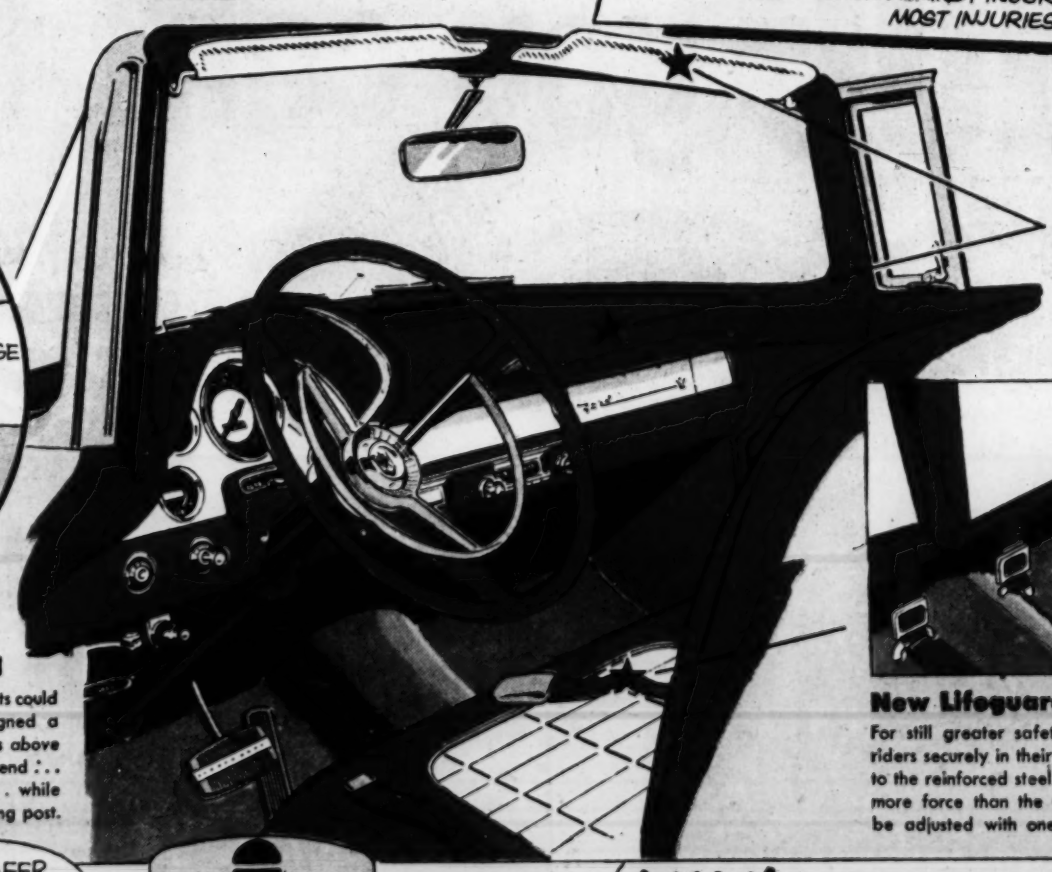

New Lifeguard Door Latches

Surveys show that occupants remaining in cars during accidents are far safer than those who are thrown out. So Ford designed the new Lifeguard door latch. This new latch holds fore-and-aft as well as in-and-out (see hands illustrated below). In an accident, closed doors help support the body structure, too!

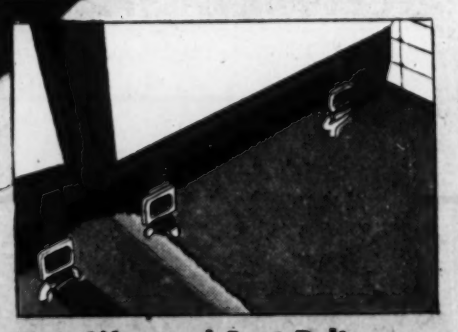

New Lifeguard Steering Wheel

Learning that drivers would be far safer if their chests could be protected from the steering post, Ford designed a 3-spoke Lifeguard wheel with a rim over 3 inches above the shorter steering post. In a collision the spokes bend . . . allowing the rim of the wheel to cushion you . . . while helping to keep you above and away from the steering post.

New Lifeguard Instrument Panel and Sun Visor Padding

The records show that proper padding on the control panel can not only lessen head injuries, but in many cases prevent them. So Ford developed the new optional Lifeguard padding shown at the left. This padding is so shock-absorbing that an egg dropped from a roof top onto a piece of this material did not break! Sun visors are made of similar protective material.

New Lifeguard Seat Belts

For still greater safety, Lifeguard Seat Belts are available to hold riders securely in their seats in case of an accident. Belts are anchored to the reinforced steel floor . . . and can withstand a thousand pounds more force than the C.A.A. demands of airline seat belts! They can be adjusted with one hand, instantly released with one finger.

AND TO GIVE YOUR SAFER NEW FORD THE GOINGEST "GO" ON THE ROAD, YOU CAN HAVE FORD'S BRILLIANT NEW 202-H.P. THUNDERBIRD Y-8 ENGINE*

ED: WHAT DO YOU MEAN BY "Y-8," AL?

AL: THE "Y" REFERS TO FORD'S DEEP, Y-SHAPED BLOCK. ITS STRONGER, MORE RIGID CONSTRUCTION GREATLY PROLONGS ENGINE LIFE . . . AND THAT MEANS SAVINGS

*IN FORDOMATIC FAIRLANE AND STATION WAGON MODELS

WOW! FORD HAS THUNDERBIRD STYLING NEW THUNDERBIRD "GO"... AND NEW LIFEGUARD DESIGN!

YES, ED, FORD'S THE FINE CAR AT HALF THE FINE CAR PRICE

Your local Ford Dealer cordially invites you to Test-Drive the new '56 Ford

LANCE

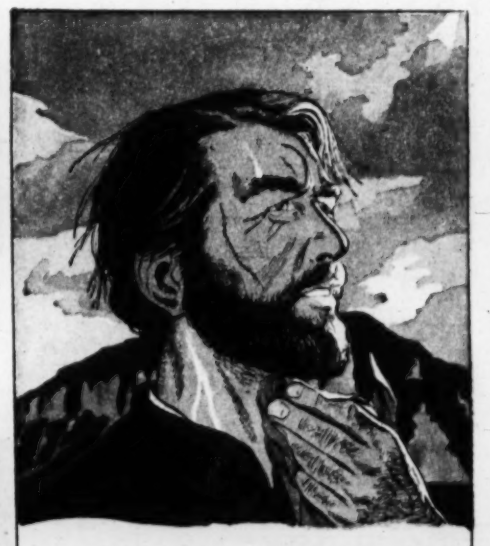

WARREN TUFTS

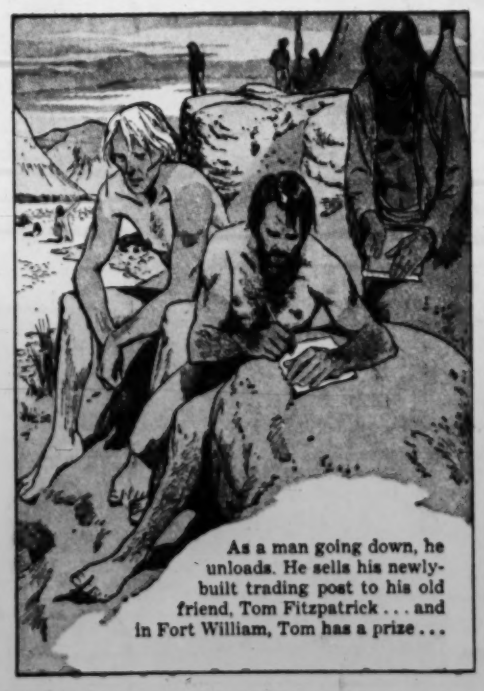

THIS is a fur trapper. You should know him because the mysterious power that charts the course of history made him a hero. It made him know the rivers and mountains of an unkind land so that a great mass of people could move west, till the soil, and bear children to mold an empire . . .

No "shining" hero, this, but a foul-smelling human animal living off the land, with dirt ground deep into hide and soul. But he is all man, cock-sure, arrogant, unconquerable. And you see him here in the last stage of his hand-hewn glory, for the fur trade is doomed: the beaver are going and so is the demand . . . . .

Bill Sublette is among those facing ruin. He is—or was—carrier and banker for the Rocky Mountain Fur Company, but the RMF partnership has dissolved and left him high and dry.

As a man going down, he unloads. He sells his newly-built trading post to his old friend, Tom Fitzpatrick . . . and in Fort William, Tom has a prize . . .

It is too good a prize. Sublette bitterly resents having to give it up even more than he values an old friendship . . .

North of the Kansas River crossing, he leaves Fitz in charge of the final pack of RMF Company furs bound for St. Louis and makes a move designed to speed up the destruction of the fur trade . . .

Sublette cuts off across the plain to the military road connecting with the Santa Fe. He follows it to its source, and a day later comes within sight of Fort Leavenworth, headquarters for the First Dragoons . . .

Here, Lance and Sergeant Blaze are petitioning their colonel for a little action.

"Blast it," Colonel Dodge rebukes, "I'm not running this regiment for the private convenience of a passel of footloose dandies! This outfit is quartered 'til Spring! The Army don't campaign in winter, it gets TOO BLAMED COLD!"

But with the arrival of Sublette, Dodge eats his words . . . . .
